The ELECTROPOISE is a little instrument weighing less than a pound, which when placed in cold water or on ice and attached to the body causes the whole system to absorb OXYGEN freely from the atmosphere, with the body plentifully supplied with oxygen and freely oxygenized blood, it is impossible for disease to exist. The Electropoise was given to the public in 1888. Previous to its introduction it was submitted to the severest tests opportunity or invention rendered possible, and in every case did more than was promised. Among these tests came its work in Jacksonville, Fla., where it was taken, by the inventor and president of the company, in the midst of the yellow fever epidemic in September of that year. In all, ninety-one patients were treated. Eighty-seven were discharged permanently cured in from two to ten days. Two were past help when taken; one over-ate during convalescence, and one died from lack of nurses. Affidavits of these facts are in possession of the company. Hundreds of ABANDONED cases have been treated from all sections of the country, and the results fully warrant the claim that the Electropoise cures when all else has failed. Correspondence is invited from any interested sufferer, and careful attention and candid answers are promised. After investigation of the treatment, and learning what it has done for sufferers everywhere, you are in no manner obliged to purchase, as all information is furnished free.

What Shall we Drink?

When the rays of old Sol are boiling down t a ninety degree rate, the air like the reath of a furnace and everything hot, dry nd dusty, the natural desire of the average uman is to drink. But, what to drink? here's the question.

The serious effect of an over indulgence in ce water is well known. The thousand and ne cheap gassy beverages are known to be nore or less injurious to the health, while he mineral waters of known purity and ealthfulness are a luxury beyond the reach f but few. What shall we drink?

A beverage to meet the requirements, ust, first of all, be absolutely pure and on-alcoholic. It should possess a medici- al element to counteract the effects of the eat and keep the blood pure and the stom- ch healthful. In order to be palatable and efreshing, it should be sparkling and ef- ervescent. Last but not least, it must be conomical and within the reach of all. A everage that fully meets all of the above equirements and one that is entitled to nore than passing mention is Hires' Root eer, manufactured by the Chas. E. Hires' o., of Philadelphia. This preparation has een analyzed by the highest authorities nd pronounced by them to be free from any eleterious substance and absolutely non- lcoholic; while all physicians acknowledge s health giving qualities. It has a delicious, ppetizing flavor, is full of snap, sparkle nd effervescence, and is without a peer as refreshment.

A package, costing 25 cents at the grocer's r druggist's, will make five gallons of this reat temperance drink. Truly it answers he question—what shall we drink. There re many substitutes and imitations of Hires' oot Beer offered for sale which should be arefully avoided.

Now.

If you have a kind word—say it,
Throbbing hearts soon sink to rest;
If you owe a kindness—pay it,
Life's sun hurries to the West.

Can you do a kind deed—do it,
From despair some soul to save;
Bless each day as you pass through it,
Marching onward to the grave.

If some grand thing for to-morrow
You are dreaming—do it now;
From the future do not borrow;
Frost soon gathers on the brow.

Speak your word, perform your duty,
Night is coming deep with rest;
Stars will gleam in fadeless beauty,
Grasses whisper o'er your breast.

Days for deeds are few, my brother,
Then to-day fulfil your vow;
If you mean to help another,
Do not dream it—do it now.

Billy.

The clerk at the general delivery window of a city postoffice is usually a pretty busy individual, but on rare occasions he has his moments of leisure. It was at such a time, one summer afternoon, when active business seemed entirely suspended, that the young man who presided over the general delivery was startled out of a comfortable doze by the sound of a piping voice issuing from some invisible quarter:

"Say, mister," said a voice, "is der a letter for me?"

The clerk started out across his little corner, but failed to see the owner of the voice. Then he poked his head half way out of the narrow window, and glancing down saw a little mite of a ragged fellow with a bootblack's kit swung around his shoulders.

"A letter for you?" he echoed, with a smile. "Don't know. What's your name?"

"Billy."

"Billy—what else?"

The little fellow shifted from one foot to the other, but his clear blue eyes looked steadily at the clerk.

"Not'n' else," he said. "Jes' Billy."

"I guess not," the clerk replied. "Were you expecting a letter?"

"Yes, sir."

There was an expression of faith in his errand in the little fellow's face, and the clerk raked his brain for a simple explanation to offer him.

"Mebbe," said the boy, "if I told yer why I was a-lookin' for a letter, yo' cu'd find it for me."

"Perhaps I could," said the clerk. "It won't do any harm to try, anyway."

The little fellow set his bootblack's kit down on the floor.

"It wus like dis," he said. "Las' Sunday mornin' I was at d' mission Sunday-school uptown, an' on my way back I walked wid Miss Rogers. You know her?"

"No," replied the clerk, still smiling.

"Yo' orter. She's d' teacher uv our class. She wuz a-tellin' me erbout d' lesson, an' when I left her by her house I jes knowed it all. Well, I walked on down d' street, an' pretty soon I seen an old gentleman in front of me droped a pocketbook, when I tuck it up, an' tuk it over t' the alley where I live. I seen it was full of money, but I never touched none uv it. Long erbout night time I begun t' think o' the Sunday school lesson, an' the more I thought uv it, the more I got worried. D' nex' mornin' I put on my good clothes agin, an' I wuz a-goin' t' take d' pocketbook up t' Miss Rogers. I knowed she'd feel bad's I did, an' so I thought I'd send the money back on my own accord. D' wuz some cards 'n' things in it, tellin' d' name o' d' man what dropped it, an' I writ a letter to him, 'splainin' how I wuz sorry I'd kept it, an' signed my name—jes' Billy. Den I wrapped it up, and sent it to him by mail."

The clerk had ceased smiling by this time, and he looked into the boy's sober face as he asked:

"Did you tell the man where to reply to your letter?"

"Nusser; but I said I'd come here an' ask, to see ef d' pocketbook got to him; da's all."

"I see," replied the clerk. "If you'll wait a minute, I'll see if I can find anything."

Without any hope of success he went over to the "B" box, and ran quickly over the letters it contained. In the centre of the pack he found one addressed:

"BILLY.
To be called for."

With a bright face he hurried back to the window, and handed the missive to the little bootblack.

"Here it is," he said. "This must be for you."

Billy took the letter, turned it over once or twice, and then handed it back:

"Read it for me," he said. "I ain't much on makin' out writin'."

The clerk opened the envelope and extracted the contents. In a business hand was written a kindly letter to "My honest little Billy," and the writer asked that the boy call to see him at an address which he gave. The letter closed with the familiar words that "honesty was the best policy, always; but I feel that in this case a reward of another sort is called for." The latter referred to a neatly folded greenback which was enclosed.

The clerk read the letter to Billy, and then handed it to him with the enclosure.

"Go to Miss Rogers, he said, "and tell her the whole story. She will advise you what to do."

Little Billy's eyes sparkled as he thanked the clerk. Then he swung his kit over his shoulder again, and promising to return to tell the outcome of the adventure, he trudged down the street.

A week later when he came back to see the clerk. His clothes were new and fitted him somewhat better than his old ones, and the bootblack kit was not visible. He reached up and shook hands with his friend as he said:

"I ain' shinin' shoes no more. D' gentleman dat writ me dat letter hez give me a place in his office, an' I'm a going to night school now."

He said more than this, and the two had a chat during the first lull in business. But we have told enough of little Billy's story to show how true—always true—is that story about honesty is the best policy. And even if there had been no letter for Billy, the policy would have been the same.—Baltimore Methodist.

The First United States Flag.

Do our young people know who made the first "Stars and Stripes" flag? Not long after our colonies declared themselves "free and independent," and started up in business for themselves, they felt the need of a banner which should be unlike all others, and belong to them alone.

So a patriotic artist designed one after the beautiful coat of arms of the leader, George Washington; and, with a few slight changes, the first flag was exactly like the one we love to day. This pattern banner was made in the year 1777, in the city of Philadelphia. The work was done by two sisters, Miss Mary and Miss Sarah Austin. The house in which they lived is still standing, and is pointed out to visitors to-day as the birthplace of "Old Glory."

It was this flag that floated over the ship of the gallant Paul Jones when he won the sea-fight off the coast of England, in 1779. He carried it first on his little vessel which ran up and down the Schuylkill river, and grew so fond of it that when he was ordered to a higher post he could not leave his signal behind. So when the "Bon Homme Richard" fought the Serapis, the young commander won his great victory under the shadow of his dear flag, and during the battle it was more than once picked up out of the salt water, and saved from flood as well as flame. At one time the chief mast, to which the flag was lashed, was shot away, and "down fell Old Glory" into the Atlantic. A brave young officer plunged in and rescued it, and nailed it to another mast, and there it hung until the "Bon Homme Richard" won the day. In this great naval battle the conflict was so fierce that Paul Jones had to lash his ship to the "Serapis," lest it should sink before the hour of victory. And he proved himself a wise commander, for after two more hours of hard fighting the enemy surrendered, and before another sunrise the "Bon Homme Richard" sunk many fathoms deep.

After this battle the flag was borne by the United States frigate "Alliance" over many an ocean voyage.

It is now a tattered and faded ghost of its former bright beauty, but more glorious than ever in the memories which cluster around its folds.

There are carefully patched bullet holes, and one entire stripe has been replaced by new. It had but twelve stars, for when it was made there were but twelve States, as Georgia, the last of the original thirteen, had not entered into the Union. A part of one end has been torn off, and it is now almost square, measuring, perhaps, six feet each way.

This glorious old trophy now belongs to the descendants of the young officer who rescued it from the ocean as its first naval battle, and, in so doing, was himself cut and maimed for life. When peace was restored the flag was presented to its gallant rescuer, who cherished it as his chief treasure, and bequeathed it to his children.

In addition to its interest as the first flag made for our country, it has great historical value as being the first United States banner saluted by foreign nations on the high seas, for immediately after the surrender of the "Serapis" it was acknowleged as our emblem by the French war ships.

It is only a bit of faded cloth, but all the same it is our blessed "Old Glory," the first symbol of a free people to float on the breezes of a new world, and a token of the dearest thing on earth to the heart of all true Americans.—Churchman.

Be Gentle.

Be gentle, boys. It is high praise to have it said of you, "He is as gentle as a woman to his mother." It is out of fashion to think, if you ignore your mother and make a little sister cry whenever she comes near you, that people think you belong to the upper stratum of society. Remember that, as a rule, gentle boys make gentlemen.—American Youth.

It isn't in the ordinary way that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription comes to the weak and suffering woman who needs it. It's guaranteed. Not with words merely; any medicine can make claims and promises. What is done with the "Favorite Prescription" is this: if it fails to benefit or cure, in any case, your money is returned. Can you ask any better proof that a medicine will do what it promises?

It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and strengthening nervine, and a certain remedy for the ills and ailments that beset a woman. In "female complaints" of every kind, periodical pains, internal inflammation or ulceration, bearing-down sensations, and all chronic weaknesses and irregularities, it is a positive and complete cure.

To every tired, overworked woman, and to every weak, nervous, and ailing one, it is guaranteed to bring health and strength.

ALL WISE HEADS

agree that the use of a liver pill after dinner, or to accomplish special results, is an important step in civilization. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are better than other liver pills in almost every respect. They're the smallest, easiest to take, most natural in the way they act; cheapest, because guaranteed to give satisfaction, or money returned. We all have weak spots. Generally it's the liver. An active liver prevents impurities and poisons from entering the blood. "Pleasant Pellets" have a tonic effect upon the liver and the general system. They cure Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Dizzy Spells, Sick or Bilious Headaches, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels.

The Successful Minister's Fixed Resolve.

BY REV. JNO. S. HARDAWAY.

Text—"For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified."—1 Cor. 2: 2.

[CONCLUDED FROM LAST WEEK.]

(8). Another temptation that will confront you, will be the desire to be a popular preacher. There are many things that will heavily press upon you to force you in that direction. The churches now everywhere are calling for popular preachers. They do not ask, when desiring to secure a pastor, Is he a godly man? Is he well versed in the Scriptures? Is he sound in doctrine? Is he a son of consolation? Is he a faithful pastor? No; the question that is asked, that is pressed, is this: Does he draw? Besides that consideration, oftentimes in one's ministry, the fact that a thin audience greets him, will lead a preacher to think very seriously of the question, How can I become a popular preacher? When Mr. Jones, the preacher over the way, announces that he will preach on Sunday at 11 a. m. to the Odd Fellows, or to the military company, or to the Knights of Pythias, or to the United Workmen, or to the Y. M. C. A. men, or to C. E. men, or to the Knights of Labor, or to some other organization, (for "their name is legion,") a very serious question with a man who believes that much of all that is tomfoolery, will be, how can I keep my congregation? It is a grave temptation. Some men try to meet the trouble by what is known as sensational preaching. The gospel of the "steamboat disaster," of the "railroad accident," of the "lessons from the Johnstown flood," and from the "Charleston earthquake," begins to come upon the scene; and from subjects of a somewhat dignified nature, the tendency is to go into the political canvas—the scandal of the court room—and even to the uttermost lengths in the absurd and grotesque, until at last he who should be a teacher of righteousness has degenerated into one who merely panders to the cravings of a silly set of floating sensation seekers. O man of God, there is no word in the Scriptures that encourages you to believe that a preacher should be, or will be, popular. Our Saviour distinctly declares that the world will hate them that are his chosen ones. We sing very often,

> "Let the world despise and leave me,

but how often does the fact that the world leaves us drive preachers into a ministry that seeks not to save men, but to please men. Let it not be so with you.

(9). Another temptation that will come to you will be to quit the ministry when difficulties and opposition encounter you. See yonder newly painted ship. How trim is her rigging! How gracefully she sits upon the wave! How full of hope and brightness does she weigh anchor and turn her bow to the untried ocean! Oh, did she but know what storms would assail her! how the winds and waves would buffet her! how billow after billow would spend its huge strength, as with a mad desire to dash her into pieces! ah, did she but know that storm scarred, and weather-beaten, and wave-tossed, she would come into her harbor like a weary fugitive from wrath, how could she set forth upon the voyage before her? And so I sometimes feel that if we ministers knew the trials that would tax us, that would test all our strength and patience, we, too, would think well before we embarked upon so tempestuous a sea. Discouragements without, discouragements within; the animosity of foes, the indifference of friends; a tide of worldliness within the church co operating with the world without; the depression that comes with the feeling that even those who should uphold you are unconcerned whether you sink or swim; the unreasonableness of many men, as well as their wickedness—all these things will make you exclaim, "And who is sufficient for these things?" Blessed art thou, if when these things come, thou canst say with an undaunted spirit, "But our sufficiency is of God."

Much of the unrest in the ministry to day; many of the pastoral changes; much of what seems to be a disposition to flit from church to church, is positively due to pusillanimity and cowardliness on the part of the ministry. There are some ministers that fly if a single member of the church says "shoo." They leave the church in the hands of an evil element that are thus taught that they can drive away any minister whose ministry they do not like. May God grant unto the ministry the willingness to "endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ." Make up your mind, my brother, that these things are coming, and pray God for strength to meet the temptation.

Having discussed some of the temptations that assail the minister of the gospel, and that interfere with his success, let us now consider how he may best meet these temptations, overcome them, and secure the highest possible success for his ministry. He cannot encounter successfully these temptations except through the power of the fixed resolve "to know nothing among men save Jesus Christ, and him crucified."

II. THE FIXED RESOLVE.

To be entirely dominated by this fixed determination to "know nothing among men save Jesus Christ, and him crucified," is to realize the great fact that Jesus Christ is the only "mediator between God and man;" is to realize that there is "none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved;" is to understand that "Jesus Christ redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us;" is to accept and to rejoice in the great gospel truth that we "are saved by grace through faith; and that not of (ourselves), it is the gift of God." When a man has determined to know nothing among men save Jesus Christ, and him crucified, he has anchored all his hope in Christ, in the crucified Christ; and he hath learned the great truth of truths that "Christ is all and in all."

The minister who enters upon the work of the gospel and prosecutes it with this resolve, must attain to success. He cannot fail in his work.

(1). He must be successful, because knowing nothing among men but Christ, and him crucified, he hath buried self and selfish ends, and his heart is set upon the glory of God. I cannot believe that God will signally bless a ministry that has selfish ends as a moving principle. I cannot believe that God will bless a man who is seeking a big church, a fat salary, or a commanding reputation. While it is admissible to desire to enlarge one's field and influence, the object sought in all this must be the glory of God, and not the enlargement of self. A man with half an eye can see that there is much self-seeking in the ministry. Why is it that so many men feel that they are called to the pastorate of a large church that is vacant, and so few feel called to a contracted field? Why is it that evangelists feel called to work in towns where they get "big pay," and not in country districts where the pay is less?

Brethren, we cannot expect that God will honor us when we seek the honor that cometh from men and not the honor that cometh from God only. But if we set our heart upon God's glory, if we know nothing among men but Christ and him crucified, what will we care about the philosophy of the day? What desire will we have to air our human learning? What concern will it be to us to catch the intellectual element? How will it disturb us whether our preaching pleases the worldly-minded or not? What matter will it be if our ministry is not popular, so we please Christ? How could discouragements and oppositions and embarrassments daunt us and tempt us to give up our work, when we have the inner consciousness that we are doing all, enduring all, suffering all, for his glory who hath sent us out among men to preach the gospel of salvation? Yes, such a ministry could not fail of success, for it is undertaken and prosecuted for the glory of God.

(2). The ministry which is carried on with this fixed resolve—to know nothing among men but Christ, and him crucified—cannot fail of success, because this gospel of Christ crucified is the power of God unto salvation. Did you mark the word? "The power of God unto salvation." What a mistake the preacher makes who supposes that the power unto salvation lies in human oratory, human pathos, human logic, human argument, all of which combined are "the enticing words of man's wisdom!" There is no human power that can save a soul. It must be done, if done at all, by the power of the omnipotent God. His word tells us that the gospel of Christ crucified is "the power of God unto salvation." The preacher, then, who knows nothing but Christ, and him crucified, cannot fail because God is at the back of him, and God's power cannot fail.

(3). Lastly, such a ministry cannot fail because it will be accompanied by "the demonstration of the spirit and of power." Paul declares that his preaching was attended by the Spirit's blessing. Apart from the Spirit's blessing, what can we hope for our ministry? Nothing at all. We may, like Canute the Saxon king, command the tides of the sea to be still, but the waters, regardless of our petty words, rush madly upon us. We may, like the disciples, charge the evil spirit to come out, but he will not heed our vain and impotent imprecations. We may, like the seven sons of Sceva, a Jew, come to those possessed with devils and name over them the name of the Lord Jesus, saying, "I adjure you by Jesus whom Paul preached," and the evil spirits will make answer, "Jesus I know; and Paul I know; but who are ye?"

But on the other hand, if we have the aid and blessing of the Holy Spirit, our preaching will be mighty, all mighty, because he is with us. Then can we stand like the prophet Ezekiel in the midst of the valley of dry bones; and we can cry out in faith, "O ye dry bones, hear the word of the Lord. Thus saith the Lord God unto these bones: behold I will cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live. And I will lay sinews upon you and bring flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live; and ye shall know that I am the Lord." And as we prophesy, there will be a noise and a shaking as the bones come together, bone to his bone. Then can we call unto the wind in the name of the Lord, "Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain that they may live." And as we prophesy, the breath will come into them, and they will live, and stand upon their feet a very great army.

Yes, blessed be God, our ministry cannot fail if we determine to know nothing among men "save Jesus Christ, and him crucified," for the Spirit of God will add his power to the preaching of the pure gospel.

In my last word, then, let me urge upon you, my brother, as to day you are solemnly and publicly ordained to the work of the gospel ministry, to make this your fixed and unalterable resolve, "to know nothing among men save Jesus Christ, and him crucified." Then will your work be blest; successful in the highest and truest sense; wanting, it may be, in a mere worldly eclat, but not wanting in the elements that constitute the best success; wanting, it may be, in results that can be measured up in awards of earthly eulogy and honors bestowed of men; but not wanting in the only true honor, that which cometh from God. For when he cometh whom you have loved and served, he will say of your ministry which knew only him and his glory, "Well done."

Sermon of Dr. H. W. Battle.

DELIVERED TO THE GRADUATING CLASS OF THE A. AND M. COLLEGE.

In the eighth verse of the first chapter of the book of Daniel we find these words: "But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank."

The scene of this heroic resolution, on the part of this young man, was the great and magnificent capital, "Babylon, the glory of kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldees' excellency." The circumstances add luster to the moral grandeur of the brave purpose. Conceive, if you please, a captive boy—perhaps fourteen years of age—daring to oppose his moral convictions to the social habits of great Babylon and the despotic pleasure of the King! It is the fashion of the times to so accentuate the influence of environment that many are tempted to wonder if a man is, after all, more than the concrete expression of his surroundings, and life other than "the science of circumstances." Young gentlemen, I would have you find an answer in my text. "But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not." To appreciate the splendid courage of this purpose, you must imagine yourself placed in Daniel's position. A captive boy, selected by command of the king, for special supervision in mental, physical and social discipline, he suddenly found himself in the line of such promotion as might well fire the ambition and dazzle the imagination of a less ardent nature. But an inconvenient difficulty looms up at the very threshold of this brilliant career. The thing we call "conscience" whispered, "You cannot, you must not!" and the hero within answered, "I will not!" Can you find a grander exhibition of moral courage in all history?

Why, he is a boy, and in Babylon! Yesterday one of his tutors said: "Come, Belteshazzar, and walk with me; I will show you Babylon." [Here the speaker drew a picture of Babylon as seen by Daniel—its walls, its temples, its palaces, its statues, its vast commerce, its social institutions—over all the glamour of the most seductive luxury—and the Euphrates, emblem of national power.]

We can well fancy the proud Babylonian saying, with a curl of the haughty lip, "Young man, I congratulate you. The gods meant you well when they brought you from the miserable town of Jerusalem, and cast your lot in splendid Babylon. Rejoice, O young man, and embrace the golden chance of destiny.

Shall he do it? that is the question. "And he purposed in his heart that he would not." They tell us that Babylon, with walls, palaces, temples, hanging gardens, wonderful commerce, mighty Euphrates, marvelous culture and boundless wealth—that Babylon was great; they tell us that the genius of "the mighty king" was greater still; but I tell you that greater than Nebuchadnezzar, greater than Babylon, or aught that Babylon afforded, was that young, heroic nature, when, planted upon the eternal adamant of moral integrity, and breasting appalling odds, he calmly resolved, "I will not!"

Young men, such a purpose, under such circumstances, would deserve to be pronounced the rashness of a madman, were it not for one fact. A fact which, alas! does not always enter into our disposition of life's great emergencies—a fact in comparison with which all other facts are trivial—the central sun in the system of facts! I mean that stupendous, supreme fact: there is a God! Better be on God's side than on the side of Babylon and the king. Believe me, it is the highest wisdom, the noblest policy.

The sequel shows that young Daniel did the best thing for himself when he purposed in his heart that he would not. "And at the end of ten days their countenances appeared fairer and fatter in flesh than all the children which did eat the portion of the king's meat." "Natural law," somebody whispers. Yes, but read further in the record: "God gave them knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom: and Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams." After awhile his royal master dreamed a dream. The magicians and astrologers were utterly helpless; their bungling legerdemain could not invade thought's interior sphere and cleanse the foul bosom of that perilous stuff that weighs upon the mind. Daniel's time has come, the supreme moment is upon him! Young gentlemen, he was master of the situation because the present lays hold upon the past. The life, whose foundation was laid in the heroic resolution of the boy, grew up into secret sympathy with God, and in the help of the Divine found the hidings of its power. The miraculous element (as we call it) may have well nigh faded out, but the principle, and its abundant illustration in history, continues, and must continue as long as the moral government of God endures! I repeat, better be on God's side! But God is immaterial, impalpable,—who ever saw God?—and Babylon is so splendidly present to the senses! God is abstract, and Babylon so gloriously concrete. But, young gentlemen, the spiritual is greater than the material, and the abstract imparts beauty and value to the concrete. While I speak, a circuit court of the United States is deliberating upon a question which could only be made a question by ignoring this fundamental truth. Caiaphas stood in the council of the chief priests and Pharisees and said, "Ye know nothing at all * * it is expedient for us that one man should die for the people." Never mind whether he be innocent or guilty—whether it be abstractly right or wrong—it is expedient! it is expedient!! God made the wrath of man to praise him, but will anybody say the hand that drove the nail and guided the spear was not the red hand of murder? Only the other day we were told, with much of the insolence of the highpriest's, ye know nothing at all, and the speciousness of the argument of expediency. The six days are not enough; God's seventh shall, entirely in principle and partially in practice, be wrested from him, for the people. But is it right? Where stands God on this question! Who was it said, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy?" Who was it said, "Verily, my Sabbaths ye shall keep"? Who was it said, "If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honorable; and shall honor him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words: then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord, and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth." I will tell you, it was God! Yet a syndicated letter, advertised as from the pen of a great correspondent, and widely published, poured out, without rebuke, vials of foaming wrath and bitter contempt upon the fanatical, low browed set (the ministry) and their ignorant and deluded sympathizers, who dared to stand by their convictions. And the august mayor of Chicago, like Olympean Jove grasping the lightnings in his puissant fist, confesses to some loss of temper (truly a terrible thing to contemplate!) when he thinks of those "non-producers" presuming to protest. Non producers! and are they only producers for the good of the race, who manufacture lard, lay railroads and build houses? Was Homer a non-producer? Were Milton, and Shakespeare, and Bunyan, non producers? Were Luther, and Wesley, and Spurgeon, non-producers? Must they who do not manipulate the material into other forms, but deal in the subtler essences of mind, the spiritual and eternal—must they be insulted with a place among the drones in the great hive of life? Non-producers! the honorable mayor of Chicago might have been mounted upon his wooden Pegasus, and at the end of a thousand years he would have found himself unable to produce one line of Paradise Lost. Non producer! Then must our Lord have lost in intrinsic manhood when he left off driving nails and manufacturing yokes to teach a divine philosophy and point the way from earth to heaven! I tell you, we are environed by a world infinitely greater than our physical conditions. This was the great truth which Daniel recognized as a controling moral force, more than two thousand years ago. It is the one truth that can save this age and this nation.

Daniel was no fanatic. It is evident that he looked the situation straight in the eye. We have in the text the evidence of deliberation: he "purposed in his heart." He thought, he pondered. [The speaker here spoke of the dignity and blessedness of right thinking.] And when he had reached his conclusion, the process of thought helped to fortify him there: it made him solid, it made him brave. Young men, learn to think! Be brave! Louis stood behind his palace door; the mob thundered without. On surged the Sans Culotte flood. The door is about to be battered in. Louis flings it open, and steps forth. For a moment, that fierce beast, a mob, quails under the calm eye of the king. The royal voice rings out, "What do you want!" The tone of the voice has broken the mesmerism of the eye; like the sound of many waters, comes the shout, "Veto! Patriot Ministers! Remove the veto!" The king makes answer, "This is not the time, nor this the way." They surge upon him, press him and his handful of grenadiers into the embrasure of a window. Place the red cap of the commune on his brow and thrust a bottle to his parched lips. "Sire, don't fear," says one of the grenadiers. "Fear!" exclaims Louis, "feel that!" laying the man's hand on his royal heart. So stands the man who has resolved. Sometimes in red woolen cap, the rage of passion, beating about him far and near, shouting in wild, discordant notes, "Veto! Patriot Ministers! Remove veto," and the man calmly answers, "Fear! feel that!" There is but one thing on earth a true man, made after the fashion of young Daniel should fear. That thing is sin. He should fear it, because sin corrupts—it defiles. "And Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself." Oh, the defilement of sin! Oh, the deep, accursed stain! The great actor, whose life's drama has just closed, beheld the mysterious stain on the tongue of marvelous eloquence, and telegraphed his physician in an agony of anxiety, "Black! Black!! Black!!! Booth." How much that brief telegram meant only Booth knew. The man who beholds the stain of sin on his soul, as sin is, is appalled by the defilement, and cries "Black! Black!! Black!!!" to a merciful God. Young brother, I beg you, as you love your family, as you respect yourself, as you value your soul, as you honor your God, fear sin! Form this night a brave and noble purpose and admit God into the compact. Mark you, the element of time was of supreme importance with Daniel. Ah, well for him that in the bloom of his young manhood he said, I will not! A great surgeon stood, with his class, in the presence of a chloroformed subject. Before the keen knife was pressed into the unconscious form, the famous teacher and surgeon said: "Young gentlemen, one year ago that man could have been saved by a simple and safe operation; two years ago, he might have been saved by a moral reformation; to-night, with all the aid of science and the best instruments, there is only the ghost of a chance. I shall do my best, and reverently wait for nature to render her uncertain verdict."

[The speaker emphasized the idea of the importance of purity in youth, and closed with an illustration from the great fire in New York in 1835, illustrating the value of good material and good workmanship in the structure of character, sure to be tested by fiery ordeals.]

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 28, 1893.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. D. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

"What Baptists Believe," by the late J. L. Burrows, will be given to every new subscriber to the BIBLICAL RECORDER who will pay $2.00 in advance for a years' subscription. We will also give the book to every old subscriber who will pay his subscription to date and a year in advance.

Think of it! Your denominational paper, the subscription price of which is $2.00, one year, and a neatly bound book of over a hundred pages, containing a clear and fair expression of what Baptists believe and practice, all for the price of the paper.

Remember, this offer is to new and old subscribers alike.

TEMPERANCE.

The word temperance, of course, implies temperance in all things; but the use of spirituous liquors has become so common, and is accompanied by so many evil consequences that are deplored by good men, that the term is now often used in the narrower sense implied in the discussion of the evils of strong drink. How to teach our people to acquire the habits of true temperance, and to avoid the evils of intemperance, is one of the most perplexing questions of the day. Yet it seems to us a question which is not difficult of solution, if placed in the hands of men who have the capacity and the will to solve it. As we write, there are those whom memory recalls, who were among the brightest and most promising, who now sleep in untimely graves, and who, had they lived, might have filled no mean place among those who shape destiny and influence for good those among whom their lot is cast. In looking around us today we see many who are drifting into this whirlpool of destruction, who, perhaps, but for this dangerous temptation, would walk in better ways and avoid the sad fate which seems to be awaiting them.

The necessity of temperance among our people is not only seen from the standpoint of morals and religion, but also from the standpoint of patriotism. Who that loves his country would wish to see her peopled by a nation of drunkards! Now, counting those who have sufficient patriotism to have a proper regard for the future of their country and those who claim to be followers of Christ, it does seem that there ought to be patriotism and religion enough in America to stay the progress of intemperance among us. In order to do this it is necessary for the patriot to be thoroughly convinced that there is danger, and real danger, to the perpetuity of the institutions that are dear to him, in the alarming prevalence of intemperance among the people. The reader of history need not read between the lines to see that the ancient Greeks and Romans were a mighty people as long as they cultivated the habits of thrift and temperance among their people; but the later acquirement of the habits of luxury, and with them that of intemperance, was soon followed by national decadence and destruction. Let us never forget the fact, then, that among the real evils that threaten the perpetuity of our country, is that of intemperance. Why should not the lovers of true liberty promote any and all sensible efforts to put down an evil that has indeed assumed portentous proportions?

And if we expect so much of our people on the score of patriotism, may we not expect much more of those who claim to be conservators of morality and true religion? Right here, we think, however, can be found a cause for no little worry with many who claim to be disciples of Christ. It is generally admitted by church members that the liquor evil is at the bottom of much of the trouble even among our churches, and yet, when efforts are made to rid the State or any given community of this evil, there are those even among church members who are either opposed to the efforts or quite indifferent to measures of reform.

Now, to rid the land of this great incubus upon the peace, morality, and religion of our people, two supreme remedies can be used. They are:—

1. Place the right kind of men in the halls of legislation.

2. Pass and enforce laws that will not only, but kill the evil.

We never expect men who are fond of [illegible] to pass laws forbidding the [illegible] of licenses, the open[illegible] for the public or private [illegible] Some legislators, [illegible] elastic consciences, seem to regard the whiskey evil as a necessary evil, or they use the old political ruse, and that is, speak against it in vague terms until they obtain office, and then forget the promises made, or the natural impressions they have made upon their constituents by the language used. One thing is certain, any State, or the Federal Government, has the undoubted right to pass a law closing the bar rooms from one end of the land to the other. Would it not be an easy matter to ascertain the opinion of any applicant for office as to the expediency of this thing? If they were closed, and kept closed, the evil would be far on its way to obliteration; and any further legislation, would naturally follow. This dream of the future can never be realized, however, until those who are in authority are honestly opposed to the public bar and are convinced that as an institution it must cease to exist.

And then we should remember that the best laws are dead letters unless properly enforced. Can any one tell us why many States in our union have laws forbidding trusts, combines, &c., with a view of controlling the market and affecting the prices of the necessaries of life, and yet these unlawful combinations do thrive in the very States that have such laws? This state of things results again from the want of integrity in those who make and those who execute the laws. Such laws are often drawn up by those who are adepts in the art of deception. To the mind of the plain candid reader, they appear well calculated to kill the evil at which they are aimed; but to others, the words and sentences carry such equivocal meaning, that they are in doubt as to their construction. And again, those who are expected to execute such laws, either know of this double or varied construction, or at times may be open to a bribe, or guilty of collusion with other parties, by which such a loose construction is placed upon these laws as enables those who violate them to escape with impunity.

"When the wicked rule, the people mourn;" and it becomes those now in authority to remember that the sovereign people who have elevated them to office will hold them to a strict accountability for the pledges made. Let trusts and combines be swept from the land. Let the bar-rooms be closed. Let our people return to the primitive habits of their ancestors so far as honesty and integrity go. Above all, let the religion of Christ prevail, and the safety of the republic is insured.

POPE LEO'S CHANGE OF MIND.

It is a matter for congratulation to all liberty loving people that last week the Pope of Rome formally acknowledged his inability to force the Catholics of the United States to keep their children from the city public schools, and send them to the parochial schools instead.

At one time the parochial schools became so strong and so popular in certain cities of this country, that they threatened to supplant the municipal institutions altogether. But now the tide has turned. Once more the will of the Pope has failed to be the law even among the Catholics.

The struggle between individual liberty and Popish rule in regard to the matter of educating Catholic children has been going on over two years. The priests began to see that even Catholics were desirous of freedom of choice in this respect, but the Pope, unacquainted with America and her liberty-loving people, could not understand how his subjects would dare to oppose his wishes in anything. Those Catholics who persisted in sending their children to city schools were reprimanded and disciplined time and again, but in vain. The council of Baltimore met and advised that the Catholics be allowed to choose their own means of educating their children. This gave rise to a serious discussion among the bishops of the church, some favoring the Pope, others the people, and the people have won the fight. The Pope sacrificed his will to hold his church together in peace. To this end he has written a lengthy letter to the American Bishops, yielding to the advice of the Council of Baltimore, but at the same time urging that every endeavor should be made to multiply Catholic institutions of learning.

Some of our daily papers in commenting on the action have attributed this sudden change of mind and this benignant letter to the liberal views of the Pope. They even praise his wisdom and give him and his church credit for making an advance towards individual liberty.

We hardly deem it necessary to add that the Pope and his church are no nearer in sympathy with American institutions than they were a century ago. The closing lines of the Pope's letter very clearly set forth the cause of his action. He says, after flattering America and his American apostles at great length, "we confidently hope that having put away every cause of error and all anxiety, you will work together, with hearts united in perfect charity, for the wider and wider spread of the kingdom of God in your immense country." Leo XIII. has always been reckoned one of the greatest of modern diplomats, and we regard this last utterance of his as one of his greatest strokes of diplomacy.

He is not laboring for free thought and free institutions. He simply desires to retain his strong hold upon his American subjects. He cries for peace in his church and for a wider spread of his power, and that is all he wants. Let him but deceive the United States until his grasp upon her is sufficiently strong, and we may be certain that not only will his church subjects be compelled to educate their youth at parochial schools, but the life, liberty and free institutions of our republic will be threatened.

The public should know from the history of Catholicism in the past and present that her leaders never yield one foot of ground unless from compulsion. Had not the Pope feared that his power in America would be weakened, he would never have written his conciliatory letter to the American Catholics.

We are glad to see that he has yielded this much, whatever his motive, and believe in this concession lies the promise of greater progress in America, and ultimately throughout the world, of that individual liberty and those personal rights which Catholicism has never respected, and never will recognize unless compelled to do so.

IT IS said that in the last thirty days thousands of men and women have been dismissed from our various colleges with diplomas as testimonials of worth and character who cannot find ready entrance into the professions. There is neither demand nor pay for them in the country schools; there is no welcome for them in the professions; there is hardly room for them to gain fighting ground anywhere. It is beginning to become quite a serious matter to find work that pays a college man for the time and money spent in quest of his diploma, and yet we all know that the graduate holds the advantage over the man of ordinary education in every sphere of life. Let them start as they may, the graduate will in all probability forge ahead. But the trouble to day is to get the start, even at the lowest round of the ladder. What is the matter? There must be something radically wrong with our social state when a man of education and character cries in vain for work. There should be an opening for every college-bred man as soon as he receives his diploma, and until such is the case we may know that there is something seriously and dangerously wrong in our social organization. There should always be room at the foot as well as the top of the ladder.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

is having its full share of people from a distance who are looking for a cool place. The Blue Ridge Inn and Orrendorf Hotel are both well filled with visitors, and the rooms which are vacant are already spoken for by people who are to come later in the season.

The tobacco manufacturing towns seem to be in the center of the financial cyclone which is sweeping the country. The only reason for this is that tobacco manufacturers seem to be dependent on the banks for accommodation more than most other business men. And the banks seem very intent on taking care of themselves just at this time. There is this unusual state of things which doesn't often occur: a poor man's note will get as much money at the bank now as that of any one else, however much difference there may be in their relative ability to pay. This levelling process does not, however, produce a desirable state of things either for the proprietor or the man whom he employs in his factory. This is only another instance which serves to emphasize the want of wisdom which may be displayed in making a tirade upon men who are supposed to possess wealth in the world. The truth is, the adverses which come to men of wealth hit hardest a large class of comparatively poor men, who live from year to year, from mouth to mouth, many even from day to day, in the employment of these men who are by many so roundly abused. The lesson of to-day, and of the years which are gone, and it will be equally so of the future, is that any city, State or county, is blessed by the citizenship of men who have the faculty of making money in such an abundance as to be able to give work and wages to the man who may not possess the same faculty or opportunity in this particular. Let us appreciate the presence of such men in our midst—men who can and will develop the material resources of the country—will hasten the day when the gospel shall be preached to the poor and erect school houses for the education of children who must otherwise be left in ignorance.

I was sorry to learn of the poor health of Bro. Pruett, who was spending some time at his old home in Cleveland county. The brethren were looking for him to return on the day I left. The church has recently been overhauled, the walls papered, and other changes made which will add greatly to the appearance and comfort of the church. The earnest and faithful labors of Brother Pruett are safely vested in the building up of a strong, vigorous and working church and a model Sunday-school, and we hope for him many years of such useful and successful work.

Saturday evening I was in WINSTON.

My interest in this "twin city" has grown as the years have gone by. For some years I visited the lawyers and business men here in the interest of what I considered the best Democratic newspaper in the world, and our relations were most cordial and in every way pleasant.

For the past three years my mission has been confined to Bros. Brown and Broughton's congregations, and by the help of these brethren a large number of their people are readers of the BIBLICAL RECORDER. Sunday morning I was at the Sunday-school at Bro. Brown's church. The morning, which was a perfect one, was not brighter than the faces of hundreds of children and grown people who come to this delightful service. At eleven o'clock Bro. Brown preached from Psalms 19: 94, "In the multitude of my thoughts within me, thy comforts delight my soul." One of Bro. Brown's members said to me, "The sermon I hear on Sunday is food for me all the week." No better testimony could be given to the worth of a sermon than that it should create a desire to think and meditate upon the truths it contained. But for the unprecedented scarcity of money, the new church would now be going up, but many who have subscribed liberally are not able to pay, so the work has, we think, been wisely deferred until times get better and money easier. The delay is only temporary. The lot, which is one of the finest in the city, is secured, and the church will be erected just as soon as circumstances will permit.

Sunday night I was at Broad Street Church to hear Brother Broughton. He preaches on special subjects on Sunday night. I heard him on "The Man of the House." Under this heading he told married men how to behave toward their own, as well as toward other men's wives. Bro. Broughton is evidently studying very hard. He preaches with more freedom, and is evidently gaining in resources from which to draw. His Sunday morning sermons are, so I hear, very fine—full of the gospel, and are greatly appreciated by his people. His congregations are very fine, many having to go away for want of room.

Here in these two churches at Winston might be found an object lesson to some who do not know the facts connected with their history. A few years ago the State Mission Board invested a limited amount of money at Winston, and the work was started, not without objections and criticism on the part of some good brethren who had not "viewed the landscape over," and hence had not comprehended the situation. Yet in spite of wagging heads, gloomy and critical objections, the work went on, and within the space of twenty years we find not only two of the best and most important churches in the State at Winston, but out of this investment has come the Pilot Mountain Association, one of the very best and most aggressive Baptist bodies in the entire State. The man who could go to Broad Street Church and see that splendid congregation of Baptists, and see the mind they have to work, to go out and help those around them, and then object to what has been invested there, would be a strange individual, to say nothing of his claim to being a Baptist who desires to see the progress of our people. Men are, however, not to be censured nor condemned for not seeing things as they ought to, or as most other men see them. Many a soldier who followed Gen. Jackson could not see why he marched over mountains, through valleys, across rivers, not even stopping at night, in order to plant himself in a certain position. This same soldier thought many times, no doubt, that here is the place to stop and plant the cannon and bag the enemy, but "Stonewall" had studied geography along with the science of war, and no man knew better than he that there was just as much in the place where he fought as the way the fighting was done by his army. Then when the fight was over, the smoke cleared away, the sun arose to give light to all, it was then plain why all this marching, all of this double-quicking through rain and darkness in order to get in certain relations to the enemy and the surrounding country.

It is just as true with reference to the campaign we are making in the interest of religion and education: there are certain strategic points which, if we hold, mean success, but which, if we do not possess, our success is at best limited, and it may be a failure altogether. My town, my neighborhood, my county, may or may not be the most important point. I am not always the best judge. A little mouse, which had never been out of the walls of his own little home, suddenly coming out and taking a seat on the edge of his little hole, wept, it is said, bitterly at the sight of the vast world which lay out before him.

But here I am at CHAPEL HILL.

These magnificent shade trees, cool water, and the cordial greeting of Drs. Carroll, Winston, Hume and Gore, make a tired man feel like lingering even after his work is done. I always enjoy my annual visit among the Baptists of Chapel Hill. This was the first opportunity I had ever had of being at the church, and notwithstanding the night was a wet one, we had an interesting prayer-meeting, and one of the best speeches from Dr. Carroll I have ever heard on the importance of Baptists reading the BIBLICAL RECORDER. My work was most satisfactory in every particular. I especially appreciated the new subscribers, added to my already good list for the size of this congregation. It is always a real pleasure to meet Dr. Whitehead, an old Wake Forest student, who now has charge of the Medical department in the University, and besides does a very large practice outside. I will here take the liberty to prescribe for him a month or two of rest at Nag's Head, or some place where he can have rest, and level up his cheek bones by putting flesh on them. A man of his worth ought to live as long as possible.

....Rev. J. P. Mason, one of the most useful Baptist ministers in North Carolina, died at his home near Chapel Hill, Sunday, June 25th, 1893. Further notice of him will be given next week.

....Bro. Jones of Watauga county has been called to the pastorate of the church at Gastonia. He takes charge in September. Until that time Bro. R. W. Sanders of Florence, S. C., will supply.

....Miss Vivia Divers, a missionary of Chicago and St. Louis, has passed a very favorable examination before the Foreign Missionary Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, and it is probable that she will go to Japan or Africa.

....A letter received from Rev. M. E. Parrish of Virginia, who was recently called to the pastorate of the Baptist church here for three months, states that he has decided to accept the call, and will preach his first sermon in the church on the first Sunday in July.—Wadesboro Messenger and Intelligencer, June 22.

....Mr. A. M. Carroll, son of Dr. J. L. Carroll of Chapel Hill, was awarded the degree of Ph. D. at the John Hopkins University, Baltimore, at the late commencement of the institution. Mr. Carroll has met with no small success as a student, and will pursue further studies in Germany, whither he sails on the 19th prox.

....Rev. J. C. Hocutt, Dr. J. L. Carroll and Rev. E. J. Edwards, organized a new Baptist church at Haw River, Sunday, June 25th, 1893, with thirty-three members.

....Dr. Taylor reports that the prospect for a considerable increase in the number of students at Wake Forest next year is very bright. There is more general interest manifested than ever before.

....Judge Walter Clark, one of the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, and N. Y. Gulley of Franklinton, have been chosen to teach the new Wake Forest Law School. Both selections are excellent.

....Bro. W. W. Hodge, formerly of Denton, N. C., writes very hopefully of his new situation in Dongola, Ill. He has been called to the pastorate of the Dongola church, and will take charge in July. We wish him success in his new home.

....Richmond College conferred the degree of D. D. upon the following: Rev. Hartley Carmichael; Rev. G. B. Moore, Greenville, S. C.; Rev. John B. Turpin of Charlottesville; Rev. William C. Bitting of New York, and Rev. T. B. Thames of Danville.

....A very neat and well gotten up catalogue of Roanoke (Va.) Female College is on our table. The past session of the college has been one of the most successful in its history, and Dr. James is looking forward to a large attendance and good work next year.

....Bro. E. F. Aydlett of Elizabeth City writes that work has been commenced on the new $2,500 Sunday-school room of the Elizabeth City church. It will be built on the side of the church, so that both rooms may be converted into one, and will be ready for the next Convention.

....Rev. S. J. Porter passed through Raleigh on Tuesday on his way to Richmond, Va., where he makes his final preparations for his trip to Brazil. Bro. Porter is a recent full graduate of Wake Forest College, where during the past four years he has won golden opinions as an earnest, promising student and a consecrated man of God. Our prayers and best wishes follow him in his distant field.

....Dr. C. Durham, Cor. Sec. of Board of Missions and Sunday-schools, has prepared a tract, entitled, "Our Work," and contains How the State Mission Board is appointed; State Missions defined; Requirements made of Missionaries, and Contributions since the Organization of the Convention. The names and locations of all the missionaries for the present year, and a summary of the work of Home and Foreign Missions of the Southern Baptist Convention, and other useful information, can be found in the tract, which will be sent in any number desired to applicants, free, postage prepaid.

....A correspondent asks whether we believe in a divine call to the ministry. Yes. We believe in it so thoroughly that we hold that no man should think of becoming a minister of the gospel who is not convinced in his own soul that this is God's work for him. No part of a candidate's examination for ordination should be more searching than that relating to the reasons he has for believing that it is his duty to preach the gospel. A man's views about a good many theological questions will change as the years go on, and often for the better; but if he does not have a call to preach when he begins, he will probably never have it.—Boston Watchman.

....A member of a Baptist church in Louisville contracted a debt, and when called upon for the money declined to pay on the ground of having become "sanctified" since the debt was incurred. The debt was admitted, but the plea was that the debtor's becoming sanctified cancelled the obligation. This is an actual case, of which we have personal knowledge. We have known of modern "sanctification's" cutting curious capers, but this is a new one. A funny effect for "sanctification" to have, truly. It is to be hoped this sort of sanctification will not spread.—Western Recorder.

....The commencement exercises of the Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va., which ended the 14th inst., were the most interesting and successful in the history of the institution. The baccalaureate sermon was delivered by Rev. N. M. Woods, D. D., and the address before the Y. M. C. A. by Rev. Carter Helm Jones of Louisville. The annual address to the Alumni was delivered by Rev. A. R. Cocke of Virginia. The 14th was graduating day, and forty students received degrees from this honored institution. The past session has been one of the most prosperous on record, and its future is filled with promise.

....The Baptist says of the agreement made at the Anniversaries at Denver by which the B. Y. P. U. is to be auxiliary to the Missionary Union, Home Mission Society and Publication Society and to "secure the offerings of their young people for these societies," that this agreement does not apply to such B. Y. P. U. societies as may be within the bounds of the Southern Baptist Convention. But no such exception was made at Denver when the agreement was formally entered upon. According to that every society of the B. Y. P. U. wherever located is bound to send its mission contributions to Boston and New York, rather than to Richmond and Atlanta. We do not see what right the Baptist has to say that the representatives of the societies at Denver who made this agreement did not mean what they solemnly voted or did not know what they were about. The action at Denver must stand until it is revoked, and all in the South who commit themselves to the B. Y. P. U. should do so with a full understanding of what is involved.—Western Recorder.

The thoroughly great men are those who have done everything thoroughly, and who have never despised any thing, however small, of God's making.—Ruskin.

County Seats.

"There are many county seats in North Carolina without a Baptist church."—North Carolina Baptist, June 21, 1893.

There are in North Carolina the following named county seats at which there is no Baptist church, viz: Camden C. H., Currituck C. H., Elizabethtown, Wentworth, Danbury, Ashboro, and Swan Quarter. At each of the last two named the Board has a missionary at work this year with hopeful prospects. Dr. R. R. Overby, Belcross, or the Executive Committee of the Chowan Association, will gladly give the reasons why no Baptist church has been established at Camden and Currituck Court-houses.

Dr. C. A. Rominger, Reidsville, Moderator of Beulah Association, or the Executive Committee of said Association, will gladly give the reasons whey there is no Baptist church at Wentworth.

Bro. D. F. King, Leaksville, Moderator of Pilot Mountain Association, or Rev. H. A. Brown, Winston, Chairman of the Executive Committee of said Association, will gladly give the reasons why there has been no Baptist church established at Danbury.

Rev. J. G. Fisher, Roslin, Moderator of the Cedar Creek Association, or Rev. J. E. Edwards, now representing the Orphanage, will gladly give the facts about Elizabethtown.

Twenty years ago the statement of the N. C. Baptist could have been made with great emphasis, and it would have been largely true now, as the facts show, but for the wise and energetic planning and work of Associational Executive Committees aided by the Board of Missions and Sunday schools.

The following are the names of the county seats where aid has been given for the establishment or support of Baptist churches, viz., Graham, Sparta, Wadesboro, Jefferson, Washington, Southport, Morganton, Concord, Lenoir, Beaufort, Newton, Pittsboro, Lexington, Mocksville, Durham, Tarboro, Winston, Dallas, Snow Hill, Greensboro, Halifax, Lillington, Swan Quarter, Statesville, Smithfield, Trenton, Lincolnton, Monroe, Wilmington, Charlotte, Carthage, Nashville, Williamston, Jackson, Jacksonville, Hillsboro, Bayboro, Burgaw, Roxboro, Greenville, Ashboro, Rockingham, Lumberton, Salisbury, Dobson, Albemarle, Columbia, Marion, Henderson, Wilkesboro, Yanceyville, Columbus, Hendersonville, Taylorsville, Manteo, Wilson, Elizabeth City, Goldsboro, Asheville, Warrenton, Edenton, Raleigh, Fayetteville, and, perhaps, other county seats, not named in the minutes of the Convention, have been aided.

If the State Mission work had nothing more to show as proof of the wisdom of the brethren of this department than the results at the county seats, there would be enough to commend State Missions to all the churches; but this is not one-half of the results of this department of work.

C. DURHAM.

Mountain View Institute.

Dear Recorder:—I have been a constant reader of your pages almost since my earliest recollection and have never written you a line. Heretofore I have been content to read what others have to say; but since coming to this field, I have felt it a duty to place some of its conditions, advantages and necessities before our people, hoping that some good may come of the effort.

About a year ago, through the kindness of Dr. Taylor of Wake Forest College, we were referred to this place, and by a correspondence with the board of directors, secured a position as teacher. We came in January last, knowing nothing of the surroundings except the little that has been printed, but we found a goodly land and hospitable friends.

On account of the unusually cold winter, the workmen were delayed in finishing the building; and the opening of the school post poned, thus causing some who were expected, as students, to go away to other schools. The list, however, shows about seventy scholars, and the closing exercises which took place June 12th and 13th were pronounced a success.

Mountain View Institute is a model high school building, with a chapel, two recitation rooms, an entrance hall and a basket closet on the first floor, and a large audience chamber above, with a capacity of seating seven hundred. The rooms are all finished with well seasoned timber and the chapel is nicely furnished with reversible desks, black-boards, &c. The musical instruments are new and of the best quality. The playground is large and shaded by a magnificent oak grove.

This institution is owned by a joint stock company and managed by a board of directors who are determined that it shall excel in its line. The stock holders are made up of members from the Baptist church and those who call themselves Disciples, or Christians. The interest of the latter is about one-third of the stock invested. The locality is healthful, being situated in Stokes county about eight miles southeast of Pilot Knot, where so many pleasure seekers spend their holidays and where all tourists passing through this section are sure to pay a visit. Sorry Town mountains are also in full view and, occasionally beyond them we get a glimpse of the Blue Ridge themselves. 'Tis said that, with an opera glass, one can plainly see the church spires in Winston—a distance of twenty miles—from our belfry window. The country about us is rolling; the land, fertile; the breezes, invigorating; the spring water clear and cool, and the citizens, full of thrift and energy. The C. F. and Y. V. Railroad has a station three miles from the school-building. Students from a distance will be accommodated to and from the depot. In fact, I do not think any preparatory school in the State, can offer more inducement or better advantages. One thing is lacking, a good Baptist church in our midst. We have the material and the means, I think, but we lack the uniting power. Will not some zealous brother with the work at heart come into our midst and lend us a helping hand? The place is rapidly improving and somebody is going to occupy. Shall we step down and out when our interest is at stake? Let the Baptist cause answer. We would not throw any impediment before the progress of other Christian denomination—nay, we bid them God-speed—but it is expedient that we look after our own interest. Hoping that some brother may feel this a call to conduct a series of meetings for us in the near future and that the RECORDER may continue to spread its influence, I am to it and to the Baptist cause at large, a faithful member. MAGGIE A. PARHAM.

Death of Rev. Isaac Smith.

Early Monday morning, 19th inst., in the town of Lenoir, Rev. Isaac Smith dropped dead. He had walked from home to town, a distance of two or three miles, and apparently was in his usual health. He had for a number of years at times been a great sufferer from rheumatism, and possibly rheumatism of the heart killed him. He was born, lived and died in Caldwell county, and was seventy-four years old. He professed faith in Christ about 1841, and was baptized into the fellowship of Lower Creek church by Rev. Benjamin Beach, and a few years later was ordained a minister of the gospel by the same church.

He reared a large family of children, and was an industrious, hard-working man, but preached the gospel regularly as opportunity offered for some forty years, during which time he was pastor of the following churches: King's Creek, Yadkin, Sardis, Buffalo Cove, Richland's, and possibly others. He was at one time assistant pastor at Lower Creek, and was pastor at the time of his death of Zack's Fork church, which he had been instrumental in organizing only two or three years since. I do not remember ever to have heard him preach, but think he was a good, plain gospel preacher, and was instrumental in doing much good. He was a good citizen, a good neighbor, a good father, and a good husband. He lived the life of the righteous, and died the death of the same. His aged wife, several children and a number of grand children survive him. He was buried in the family graveyard, on the farm of his brother, M. D. Smith. His redeemed spirit has doubtless entered into the rest that remaineth for the people of God.

It is remarkable the number of Baptist preachers that have died in 1893. Bro. Hufham said in his remarks at the close of the Convention in Raleigh, that he hoped there might be no occasion for an obituary committee at next session, but, he added, there will be, and sure enough it is already time.

The Tract, "Our Board and its Work."

Dear Recorder:—I have just received and looked through carefully a little tract, "Our Board and its Work," sent out by Dr. C. Durham for the Board of Missions. It gives in concise and clear statement something of the history of our State Mission work, who and where our missionaries are now at work, as well as statistical information about Home and Foreign Missions. His figures show very gratifying progress, especially in our State Mission work.

The tract shows also how the State Board co-operates with Executive Committees of Associations in making appointments and appropriations to the various mission fields in the State.

I would be glad to see it widely scattered amongst the Baptists throughout the State.

More "Don'ts" Wanted.

Bro. Bailey:—I saw an article in the RECORDER of June 14th headed "Don't," in which the writer added a few "don'ts," every one of which came in its proper place and meant something. I would be glad that those "don'ts" were impressed upon the mind of every Baptist. He said that he had a few more on hand that he would be willing to deal out if he were sure that the brethren and sisters desired them.

The published ones pleased me, and I say let more come.

May God bless the RECORDER and its editor. N. H. GIBBS.

The Good Ship Gryphon; or, On the Right Tack. By J. Macdonald Oxley. 12mo, 248 pages. Price, $1 00. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

As a writer of books for boys, Macdonald Oxley occupies a very high place, as some of his recent works, for example, "Fergus MacTarvish" and "Up Among the Ice Floes," will justify. In the present work the author has struck out on a new track. He has given us a sea story which is as correct in its use of nautical terms as it is breezy in its descriptions. The scene of the story is laid among the West India Islands, and it is concerned with the career and the doings of Mr. Richard Holland, midshipman in the navy of His Majesty, King George III. The time is during the Napoleonic wars, when battles were fought on every sea and in almost every land. The book gives us a glimpse of this in its account of chasing and "cutting out" of privateers, and in the storming and defense of land fortifications, closing up with the battle of Trafalgar, in which the great Nelson lost his life.

The July Californian will be one of the finest examples of magazine making ever produced west of New York. It will contain over 150 illustrations and almost twice the usual number of pages. The cover will be decorated with Poppies in their natural colors; and some of the writers are Ina D. Coolbrith, Chas. Edwin Markham, Sarah Orne Jewett, Rose Hartwick Thorpe, Joaquin Miller, Hon. Thos. J. Geary, John Vance Cheney, Richard H. McDonald, Jr., and Dan de Quille, and many others. The contents of the Magazine cover all the Pacific Slope from Alaska to Southern California, and from Salt Like City to Genoa, Italy. A timely paper is on the Law and the Chinese, by the framer of the Geary Bill, Hon. Thomas J. Geary.

Warren Plains Church.

Dear Recorder:—About a year ago a Sunbeam Society was organized here at Warren Plains church. There were about forty-six members to begin with.

On Thursday, the 22d, the Society held its Children's Day exercises. The exercises consisted in some songs and recitations by the children and some good speeches by brethren T. J. Taylor, W. R. Cullom and N. L. Shaw. A large crowd was in attendance. The pieces were well selected and recited, making the exercises both interesting and instructive.

The financial report of the Society, however, was the most interesting part of the exercises. When the Society was organized a year ago, about forty-four nickles were given to as many members to be invested in any way they might choose, the income from which to be reported at the end of the year. About forty nickles were heard from. How much do you think was thus secured for giving the gospel to the world? Thirty-one dollars and seventy-four cents were handed in! This, together with $3 62 raised for church carpet, and $9.75 from monthly dues, makes an aggregate for the first year of $45.11.

This unparalleled success is largely due to the faithfulness and energy of the President, Miss Annie Wheeler. Quiet, gentle, unostentatious, she has gone about the Lord's work with that persistency which always wins success. She well deserves the hearty appreciation which is so largely shown her. Bro. Cullom's five years' service for this church has been greatly blessed. No pastor ever had more hearty sympathy and active co-operation of his brethren. Everybody loves him, and his place will be hard to fill. May God bless him in his work in a distant State. R. R. DAY.

Union Meeting.

A resolution was passed at our last Association that a meeting of all the Unions of the Tar River Association be held, commencing Friday before last Sunday in July, 1893. That meeting will be held in Littleton, N. C. The program will be published soon.

Let every church in the Association see that she is represented in this meeting. It is hoped that the brethren appointed to discuss the subjects will be present. The meetings will be in the interest of the Home and Foreign Missions. R. VAN DEVENTER.

The Forgiveness of Injuries.

If a man commits an offense against us, misrepresents us, insults us, injures us in any way, what are we to do? Brood over it? That is what some Christian people nearly always do. It is wonderful what care they take to get all the pain and suffering out of an offense they can. They might have brushed it away at once and have done with it; but no, the hasty, bitter word, the selfish act, they lay upon their memory; and they will not forget it, whatever else they forget.

.... If a man injures you, do not brood over it. Nor must you talk about it to everybody you meet. What is your motive for speaking about the injury? Do you want to get your friends to take sides with you against the offender. You ought to want to make the offender himself to take sides with you against the offense. The more people know of the wrong, and the stronger the feeling you can create against the wrongdoer, the harder you make it for him to acknowledge his fault.—R. W. Dale, in Good Words.

Remember that we have no more faith at any time than we have in the hour of trial. All that will not bear to be tested is mere carnal confidence. Fair weather is no faith.—Spurgeon.

New Advertisements.

Your attention is called to the announcement of Dr. J. H. Daniel on the eighth page. Dr. Daniel is highly spoken of by those who know him, and has achieved no small success in the treatment of his specialty.

See advertisement of the Horner Military School in this issue. This institution has established and maintained an enviable reputation for integrity and reliability through many years, and well deserves the patronage which it receives.

Mr. Chas. M. Walsh of Petersburg is well-known in this State as a first class builder of monuments, etc. We are glad to hear that his North Carolina patronage is steadily increasing, as we know him to be thoroughly reliable.

The rapid and wholesome growth of the University is matter for State pride and rejoicing. In two years the student roll has grown from 198 to 316. $20,000 worth of repairs is being made on the buildings this summer; water works, baths, etc., are being supplied. The scholarship of the institution is being recognized everywhere as equal to that of the leading Universities, and soon we shall have in North Carolina the great Southern University. See advertisement.

Oxford Female Seminary.

We invite attention to the advertisement of this old and famous school in another column. It easily ranks among the most progressive schools of the State. Its instruction is of the most thorough kind, and its standard for graduation high.

The teachers are selected with the greatest care—each for the special work which she can best do. The following noted schools are represented in the Faculty: Wake Forest College, N. C., the Sauveur School of Languages of the North, the Western Seminary of Ohio, one of the Brooklyn Schools of Physical Culture—all these in Literary Department. In charge of the Music Department is a pupil of the Royal Conservatory of Berlin, Germany, while the Vocal Teacher received her training in a celebrated Philadelphia Conservatory. The Art Department will be in charge of an accomplished North Carolina Artist who is just completing a very extended course in the great Cooper Union Art School of N. Y., and under the best masters of the city.

We advise Baptist parents to patronize their own schools. They are as good as any others in the State, and it is best in every way to educate our girls in our own schools.

What Makes a Sermon.

Of what should a sermon be composed? My neighbor says, "of instruction, illumination and inspiration," and those who hear him occasionally say that he reaches his ideal. He teaches, illumines his thought until it shines with distinctness and beauty, and then infuses its glow into his hearers. He remembers what Hooker said, that "a thing is not good merely by being, but by being apparent," and that there is as much difference between a thing conceived as thought purely, and a thing lifted up into the imagination, as between a skeleton and a man." He makes what he teaches so attractive that people love it and choose it. It becomes easier for them to do right and harder to do wrong. It is not surprising that people like to hear him. He helps them. There is a vitality and a freshness of nature and insight about him which are as useful as they are pleasing. It is hard to doubt in the presence of so much courage and faith. Perhaps if we all had as much vitality and freshness we would be listened to by more people. At least, the question is an interesting one: Of what should a sermon be composed?—The Advance.

MADE TO THE GRADUATING CLASS OF OXFORD FEMALE SEMINARY, MAY 30, 1893.

Young Ladies:—You have at last reached the goal for which for so long a time you have been striving. Sunshine, flowers, love, all are yours to-day. From far and near friends have gathered to do honor to the occasion of your entrance into the busy world, which sorely needs you among its earnest workers. There is a place for every one of you, and that, too, an important one, if you will make it so. What you shall do is not of so much importance as that you shall do well whatever your hands find to do. Take up the work that lies nearest to you. Begin where you are. By loving words and kind deeds "make as nearly like heaven as you can the corner you may occupy, if it be but a corner, the room, the house, the neighborhood, the world." Religion is not selfish, and heaven should be on earth, but he who lives for himself has not the one, and may not reach the other.

Life is a struggle. I refer not to the struggle for existence of which, alas, there is too much in the world; "but if you would live the highest life, the happiest life, there must be a struggle fierce and unceasing." As our bodies are surrounded by enemies that are constantly attacking and destroying them, so this spiritual, this better part of our nature has its enemies that are constantly lying in wait for it. "The lily has a struggle with the mire to raise its head to the sunlight and pure air." Every one finds this to be a law of his nature—that when he "would do good, evil is present before him." Now there must be an agonizing to bring this evil nature into subjection to the better, and he who has succeeded in doing this has had a foretaste of heaven, and is making heaven all around him. Often you will be discouraged in your effort, but one victory makes another easier, just as the reward of one duty performed is the ability to perform another.

Success in this contest will call for the sacrifice of what you will consider your highest pleasures; but these are not to be reckoned with because of the great issues involved. You can afford to sacrifice your ease, your comfort to make even the slightest growth in the spiritual life. This is the "pearl of great price" which you will do well to buy at any cost. We sometimes talk about the practical, and foolishly, too, meaning some physical good; but there is something very much higher. He who spends his time, his means to secure th s growth of his spiritual nature is engaged in a far more practical work than he who is engaged in buying land, houses and bonds

This is the only happy life. He who lives for others is so far happy. To make sacrifices to secure our own happiness will surely fail of its end; but it is possible from continually making sacrifices to find pleasure in them and to form a habit which will be a source of constant happiness to us. As has been well said, "Heaven lies within—in kindness, in humbleness, in usefulness, in faith, in love, in service. The only perfect life lived here on earth was a life of ceaseless strivings and sacrifices," and though it was full of sorrows and acquainted with grief, it was the only happy life; for sorrow for the sins of others is a far different thing from sorrow for one's own sins. "If you would be a partaker with that life of its happiness and of its triumphs, you must be a partaker of its sacrifices."

"As towards heaven my face was set,
I came into a place where two ways met;
One led to Paradise, and one away.
And fearful of myself lest I should stray,
I paused that I might know
Which was the way wherein I ought to go.
The first was one my weary eyes to please,
Winding along through pleasant fields of ease,
Beneath the shadows of fair branching trees.
'This path of calm and solitude
Surely must lead to heaven,' I cried in joyous mood.
Yon rugged one so rough for weary feet,
The footpath of the world's too busy street,
Lying amid the haunts of human strife,
Can never be the narrow way of life.
But at that moment I thereon espied
A footprint bearing trace of having bled,
And knew it for the Christ's, so bowed my head
And followed where he led."

May you all so live that at the last you may have the hope of the poet:

"Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark,
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark.

For tho' from our bourne of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far;
I hope to see my Pilot face to face,
When I have crost the bar."

God bless and keep you. Farewell.

To Brace Up

the system after "La Grippe," pneumonia, fevers, and other prostrating acute diseases; to build up needed flesh and strength, and to restore health and vigor when you feel "rundown" and used-up, the best thing in the world is Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It promotes all the bodily functions, rouses every organ into healthful action, purifies and enriches the blood, and through it cleanses, repairs, and invigorates the entire system.

For the most stubborn Scrofulous, Skin or Scalp Diseases, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, and kindred ailments, the "Discovery" is the only remedy that's guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back.

Can you think of anything more convincing than the promise that is made by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy? It is this: "If we can't cure your Catarrh, we pay you $500 in cash."

Remember that, if you are a Christian, ... ever, not of money only, not of ... not of ... anything only, but of ... that man may hold—hope, endurance, and a ... and ... self-

Why I Should Give and What.

People who object to beneficent and benevolent institutions might be stimulated to effort and liberal, even bountiful giving by the exercise of a few reasonable thoughts connected with the demand. The demand is, give! It is not simply a modest demand, but it is a pressing command, sustained by justifiable necessity. Now, when you are requested to give, and your covetous heart rises up and sternly objects, call at once upon your enlightened reason and ask, why should I give? The answer is plain: the Master, the great Landlord, to whom all that I use and enjoy, belongs, simply demands of me that which is his own, and not simply that it shall be used for his benefit, but for mine, for sure it is, that the more we benefit others, the more we shall be blessed.

It is a settled fact that this world would be a heaven, good enough for even the best saint in paradise, provided the inhabitants of it were all regenerated, and this is the great, in fact the only end to which charity looks, and charity is the parent of liberality and benevolence.

Now, therefore, when we give we make manifest these truths: first, honesty; second, obedience; third, love; fourth, good sense, as regards our own interests. Honesty, I say, that is, we manifest a disposition to use and apply the goods of another, which are entrusted to us, according to the intention of the lawful owner. Obedience: in that we give at the time, place, and in the quantity, quality, and for the purpose he demands, not stopping to question his right, nor presuming to purloin that which may have been left in our care. Love: in that we manifest a spirit to please, honor, and as much as lieth in us to help the Master. Now if you should see one whom you very much love, striving to accomplish a certain thing, could you in any way better manifest your love for him than to engage with him and assist him to the extent of your ability? So when the heathen are perishing, starving, dieing, for the want of the bread of life, and God says, "How shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach except they be sent?" Manifest your love by rising up at once and giving them as many loaves as they need. It may be midnight in your poor soul, that is, the demand may be seemingly uncalled for, unreasonable, without any good prospect for a reward, you may be in bed with your children, and the door shut, that is, you may imagine that you have nothing to spare from the fancied necessities and coveted aggrandizements of your sinful nature. But, O man, it is thy Friend that calls on thee for the loaves. He needs them in order to send the preacher to proclaim the truth, the pious teacher to enlighten the mind, the religious newspaper to explain and cheer, the little tract, the Bible, the great book of God, which is to testify of him. Why, then, rise and give! Good sense: in that you manifest a mind to invest that which has been entrus ed to you in something substantial, lasting. A young man who, some years ago, had heired a small inheritance from his ancestors, studied how he might invest it so as not to lose it. He came to the conclusion to educate Mrs. B.'s little son. The boy was started to school. Then the question came up how much should be spent on the boy? The answer, suggested by good reason, said, why if it is necessary, spend all you have and all you can get until his education is complete, for if you don't complete his education, you will very likely lose all that you have spent up to now; so he obeyed, and the result was, that he not only had the pleasure to see John graduate, take a high stand in the world, and become great among men, but John, ever mindful of his benefactor, took good care of him when he became old.

Then, when you are asked to give, don't stop to question your ability to give, and to hunt for your smallest bill or coin, or something which you might well spare, but say, "Here, Lord, I give myself." Cast in, as did the widow of old, all your living, and God shall abundantly reward and bless you. Yes, in the great day when he shall call you to account for your stewardship, he will say, "Well done, good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful in a few things, I will make the ruler over many things, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

Affectionately your brother,

D. N. GORE.

Sisters' Duties to Brothers.

Another ruin woman alone can rebuild, is the carelessness with which "brothers" are treated. Some sisters forget that the first, and often most enduring impressions men receive of the sex, come through their sisters' action. Is the girl a vain, petty, selfish being, never considering the brother's needs? Is it any wonder if the brother thinks all girls like his sister? Sisters should seek to be the friends of their brothers. Their gentle, virtuous conduct may do much to create a right tone in the brother's mind, and will inevitably refine and help him. You, dear girls, can do, and you are doing very much in shaping a young man's habits. If the sister shares his youthful troubles, advises him in difficulties, makes his home attractive, refuses to listen to or mix in any wild conversation, seeks to lead him into a right conception of manhood's privileges; in short, becomes a loving companion, then I am sure that many a youth who now sees in girls only vain, giddy creatures, will have that exalted view of womanhood, which will be a safeguard in the days to come. Try to be an angel of the home to the brother. If you have failed here, begin to build this very day. God will give you strength.—Friendly Words to Young Women.

COVINGTON, GA., May 31, 1893.—For about five years I was a great sufferer from neuralgia in my face and eyes, and hemorrhage of the kidneys, which caused a great deal of blood to pass from them, causing me to suffer a great deal from its effects, as well as the daily attacks of neuralgia. A friend induced me to take King's Royal Germetuer. I took ten bottles of it, and have not had an attack of either since. I used the Germetuer in 1890. There are many who will testify to this.

A Few Thoughts.

BY SCATTERHEAD.

"Where is my God?" It is our happy privilege and duty to "rejoice evermore" in the Lord. Our God desires his children to possess a happy and contented spirit. He wants them to so live that they may at all times enjoy his peace which the world cannot give nor take away. He has taken special pains to tell us how we may have a little heaven on earth—may continually feast on that "bread which came from heaven." Yet, notwithstanding the trouble our Lord has taken to make our journey to our heavenly home safe and enjoyable, we find by bitter experience that we pilgrims are a weeping band. Much there is to give us sorrow, and we find we are mourners from the time we start out as pilgrims until we leave this scene of sin and suffering. Mourners we are over our own sins and over the sins of a wicked world ripe for judgment, and therefore grieved that our God is so much dishonored. The pilgrims abode here has truly been called "a valley of tears." Many of us at times are bubbling over with joy, but mighty soon our cisterns are powerful dry. Very close our Lord one day and the next skulking along about out of sight of our blessed Master, pretty soon we are mourning over our gold hearts and every sin that has interrupted the communion between us and our God. When on account of our sins we lose sight of the Lord Jesus that bitter, heart-rending and soul-harrowing cry is wrung from our agonizing spirits, "Where is my God?" O, what sorrow when we realize our sins not confessed and unforgiven hide from our view the face of our Lord. Our Saviour's love does not change, as he is "the same yesterday, to-day, and forever." But we change often. But dear mourning pilgrims our blessed Lord sends you a message to comfort you by the way. Here it is, "The days of thy mourning shall be ended." Joyous thought that our "night of weeping" is about over, and soon the pangs of a lifetime of sorrow will be eternally forgotten. Soon we shall "rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory." A few more heartaches and we shall see our "blessed hope," and shall be taken from a "night of weeping" to a happy realization of the "joy that cometh in the morning," and to enter as privileged citizens a sinless, sorrowless, heaven.

Sure to Please.

Sunday school teachers and superintendents cannot be better suited than with the Picture Lessons of the American Baptist Publication Society for the little ones. They cost next to nothing and yet are models of beauty and of Bible instruction to the smallest children.

A SUPERIOR SYSTEM.

After many years of experience the American Baptist Publication Society have arranged a system of lesson helps so graded as to be suited alike to the smallest child and the gray-haired sire. These lesson helps have the merit of being entertaining, instructive, and strictly doctrinal.

The South Fork Sunday-school Convention.

Editor Recorder:—Please give me space to say a few words about the above-mentioned meeting. It seems to me that there should be more said about our meetings. They should be talked up so as to create an interest. Baptists seem right much forgetful sometimes, and if our meetings are not urged there need not a large attendance be expected.

We meet on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July, and doubtless if some of the ministers were asked when the Sunday-school Convention met they would be forced to say, "I don't know." I have talked with several of the lay brethren who didn't know anything about it at all. How can we expect the brethren to come to our meetings when they don't know where or when they are? We should talk more of our meetings, thereby causing a desire to know what is being done.

As previously stated, the South Fork Sunday-school Convention will convene on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July. There can be no fault found with the time unless it be that the weather is too hot. But if the brethren get too hot, Baptists are not afraid of water, so they can plunge themselves into the water, but it will not do for them "to stay there." So if the weather is hot, there is a chance of getting cool. Let none stay away because of the hot weather.

THE PLACE OF MEETING.

A more desirable place could not have been found within the bounds of the Association. Maiden is situated on the C. & L. R. R. The place is convenient to the whole Association. No one can stay away and say it was too far in one corner of the Association. Maiden is about as central a point as could have been found.

All who attend may expect the very best care and attention. Bro. Hoyle is living in Maiden, but those people will save some of their spring chickens for the Sunday-school Convention. Let a large delegation attend the Sunday-school Convention at Maiden. We need more interest along this line. Those who are appointed as delegates are careless and don't care whether they attend or not. Let's not have it that way this time. Let all the churches and Sunday-schools appoint delegates, and be sure that those who are appointed attend. Besides those who are appointed, let others interested in the Sunday-school work attend also. They will not suffer.

REPORTS.

Let the Sunday-school make out correct reports so that no mistake will occur in the statistical table. In making out reports be sure to give the following: (1) Name of Sunday-school; (2) name of superintendent; (3) number of officers and teachers; (4) number of scholars; (5) the average amount of collection per Sunday.

The program has not yet been published, but a good program may be expected. Bro. Hoyle is chairman of the committee.

Let pastors and Sunday-school workers work together that we may have a "feast of fat things."

Let all remember to come to the Sunday-school Convention at Maiden, N. C., July 21st, 22d, 23d, 1893.

Slipshod Notices.

A young man had occasion lately to spend a few weeks in a large village where he was a complete stranger. Being a Christian, he attended the Sunday morning service of the church of his own denomination where he was courteously received and seated. Finding no card announcing the meetings of the week and hoping to attend some of them, he listened attentively to the notices. He was informed that the Sunday-school would be held as usual, that the Christian Endeavor Society would meet at its usual time and place, that the subject of the regular church prayer-meeting would be, "Bear ye one another's burdens," and that the monthly meeting of the woman's missionary society would be held on Thursday afternoon at four o'clock, with Mrs. Jones. Just one service in regard to which any particulars were given, and that a meeting to which "all ladies are cordially invited!" There may be some churches within whose doors a stranger rarely comes, and possibly this was such a one. For the home congregation announcements "at the usual time" are perhaps sufficient, but, in general, slipshod notices are hardly likely to be the prelude to lively meetings.—Congregationalist.

Woman's Missionary Department.

President Woman's Central Committee of North Carolina, MISS FANNIE E. HECK, Raleigh, N. C.; Secretary, MRS. J. A. BRIGGS, Raleigh, N. C.

The Southern Baptist Convention at its late session in Nashville, Tenn., extended the time of the Centennial of Missions until the close of this year. The Centennial Record Book will also be kept open until that time. It is hoped that renewed efforts will be made for this work, and the Woman's Central Committee of Missions will gladly supply Centennial Missionary Literature, Centennial Chapel Cards, Centennial Day Programs, and Centennial Certificates, free. All who are already entitled to Centennial Certificates can obtain them at once on application. If after application the Certificates are not received within a reasonable time, please renew your application, as some loss may have occurred in the mails. Address Miss Fannie E. Heck, Pres. Woman's Central Committee of Missions, Raleigh, N. C.

Mr. Arthur H. Sloop is entitled to a centennial certificate, but has failed to send his address. The certificate will be forwarded at once on receipt of address.

Work of the Home Board.

In the Indian Territory, besides missionaries among the Creeks, Choctaws and Chickasaws, we have missionaries to the Whites of the Territory, who also preach to the large number of Indians who understand English. The Board has fifteen missionaries among the Indians.

The Indians are appealing to us piteously for more help, and while the Board is seeking to bring them as soon as possible to a plane of self-support, yet we must enlarge our work among them in various directions.

Indian Lands.

The Indian lands are held in common. An Indian is entitled to all land he will enclose as long as he occupies it, but if he abandons the house he has built or the field he has fenced, any one can move in and become lawfully possessed of the improvements.

An Indian can have as many tenants as he chooses, so that already the whites largely outnumber the Indians. A recent statement shows that while the five civilized tribes number less than sixty-five thousand, there are one hundred and twenty thousand white people living on their domains.

Some Dates to Ponder.

The Catholic Indian Missions preceded the Protestant work by more than half a century. Protestant mission work in our country may be held to have begun with Roger Williams about the year 1636. Eliot's work among the Indians began the year 1646. Brainerd's work among the Indians began in April, 1743.

The work of the American Board (Congregational) was begun in 1815. That of the Methodist Episcopal in 1811. The Baptist General Convention began its operations among the Indians in 1814.

Southern Baptists for more than half a century have been actively engaged in the work of evangelizing the Indians.

Indian Education.

Says Bishop Hare, who has spent so many years of his life among the Indians: "Much has been said of the tendency of the educated Indians return to the blanket, and, of course, as in all school work everywhere, one meets with grievous and flagrant cases of non-success. But, as a matter of fact, any careful observer who should travel through the Indian country would have his attention attracted by a large element totally distinct in its bearings and appearance from old Indian life and should he enquire what is the history of the young people who thus attract attention by their appearance and by the work they are doing in the schools, churches, offices and shops, as teachers, catechists, preachers, apprentices, clerks, &c., he would find that they are persons who have had the advantages of education in the mission or government schools. In mission work I know of no field which yields larger results. In the mission of which I have charge (it is but one of several) there have been redeemed from heathenism and now engaged in mission work, nine clergymen, seven candidates for orders, and nearly fifty catechists and other workers, the whole number of communicants being over sixteen hundred."—Missionary Review.

Mexico.

"Mexico! abused, neglected, needy Mexico! This land of Spanish cruelty and papal outrage, is our next-door neighbor—the home field of our Foreign Mission Board, as Cuba is the foreign field of our Home Mission Board."

The population is estimated at about 11,000,000. Of this number some 4,000,000 are of pure Indian blood, 5,000,000 of mixed blood, and the remaining 2,000,000 of Spanish and Caucasian descent.

THE MEXICAN AND HIS HOME.

The blood of the Spaniard and nomadic Indian, mixed, produce the Mexican. He dwells in his house of sun-dried brick, as did his ancestors of three hundred years ago. Short straw is mixed with the clay of which these bricks are made, to hold them together, and they are laid with mortar of the same material.

A MEXICAN WOMAN.

A Mexican woman with hardly an exception has black eyes, and wears a long shawl over her head with the ends brought around in front of the face in such a manner as to leave only the eyes visible; with this arrangement the effect is fine. A swarthy skin or ugly feature is hidden, while the glowing eyes sparkle at you in their beauty from among the folds of the shawl. She exists under difficulties. In cooking, she is restricted by circumstances to such dishes as can be prepared at a fireplace with a small kettle and a flat rock or pieces of sheet iron on which to bake cakes.

When it comes to dress, the poorest women even are equal to the emergency, for when the presence of the musician on the street announces the approach of a dance, every woman in the town is busy with a judicious system of temporary exchanges of clothing, the result of which is a triumphant display at the dance of a combination of dress entirely new to the wearer, and thus her taste is gratified without the expense of shopping. Even a social dance is a serious matter with them. They never laugh at a dance, and the old dance as well as the young.

A Strong Endorsement.

The St. Louis Trade Review and Export Journal in its issue of February 7th, 1893, has this to say:

EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.

One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B. Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Carolina, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1858. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches, and carry in stock a fine line of stationery, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, posters, circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

Ordination

On Sunday night, 18th inst., the following ministers—C. B. Justice, D. K. Bennett, C. E. Gower, J. G. Blalock and C. M. Murchison—met with the church and congregation in Hickory, N. C., for the purpose of ordaining and setting apart to the full work of the gospel ministry, Prof. C. E. Woodruff. The candidate having passed a satisfactory examination, the ordination was performed as follows:

Sermon by Elder Justice. Prayer by Elder Gower. Imposition of hands by the presbytery. Charge by Elder Blalock. Presentation of Bible by Elder Bennett. Right hand of fellowship by the presbytery, Elder Murchison leading. Benediction by the candidate.

A large congregation was present and gave careful attention to the preached word and the impressive services following.

That Call to the Ministry.

I never see an article upon this subject without reading it at once, with the hope that I may find the light that I have been seeking for years. And when I saw that my old friend Harman had discussed the matter, I felt assured I should find the information I have failed to find elsewhere; but alas! I am deceived again.

1. "A call is prerequisite to the ministry." And yet few men can define a call in such a way as to make sure that I have received it. Multitudes have entered the ministry who cannot preach, and whose work has been one long failure; yet they are as certain as any man that they have been called.

2. Moses, Isaiah, Jeremiah and Amos are cited as cases of those whom God called; but prophets were miracle-workers, and what is there common between the preacher and the prophet? Besides, these men received audible calls, and that puts them far away from us to whom no audible call comes. Hence I say it is not just to cite them as cases of men called to the ministry.

Bro. Harman says: "Paul and Barnabas, Timothy and Archippus and the Ephesian elders were called." Grant that this is true, for argument's sake, and then I want to ask, where is the analogy between Paul's call and Bro. Harman's? Paul's call was as much a miracle as the raising of Lazarus. So Barnabas was called miraculously, and the others mentioned received no direct call, as far as the record shows. Yet upon this meagre ground I am asked to believe that the Bible teaches that "men should enter the ministry only as impelled by a special, personal, divine call."

3. I am told further that this call "does not consist in visions and voices;" and yet visions and voices were the only means used in Bible times. If God still calls us, does it not seem a little unfair that the call should be so indistinct that many of us are mistaken about our duty?

4. In the next paragraph, a call is defined to be "a deepening, growing, abiding conviction that it is God's will that one should devote himself to preaching the gospel as a life-work." Now, this reduces the call to my level somewhat, and puts it outside the supernatural. It makes the call simply a conviction. But is this enough? Suppose I have the conviction and nothing else—must I preach any way? Bro. Harman will doubtless answer, but the conviction is from God. Then I will rejoin, why does God make such poor choice in his selection of men? How many are called—or say they are—who cannot preach, whom no one wishes to hear, who have no intellectual fitness and never seek to acquire it?

A number of other questions press upon me, but I have written enough. I am sure we are doing the churches harm by defining a call to the ministry as the article of Bro. Harman does. It admits to the pulpit too many of us who are worthless and who never accomplish any work. Some have entered who cannot speak because they have no voices, no throat; some cannot learn; some have no sort of pulpit gift, no fire, no magnetism, nothing, and we still go on teaching that a call is a mere conviction.

If I were asked to define a call to the ministry, I should say this: The Bible affords us no direct example, but in seeking to follow apostolic precedent, we must say a call is made up of a desire to preach, ability to preach and teach, and the call of our brethren saying we must preach. This will throw the matter back upon the churches, and take it out of the hands of the multitude who rush in unprepared and unfit.

Ignoring prophets and apostles, I should be glad to have Bro. Harman write about the call of a preacher, pure and simple.

Sumter, S. C. C. C. BROWN.

A Present Responsibility Upon Pastors.

Dear Recorder:—We have neither Secretary nor Assistant Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board. Would it not be a proper thing for our people to help those brethren who are charged with the responsible duty of nominating a Secretary, with our prayers, that the guiding hand of the Lord may be upon them?

Our churches, at least for a while, will have to do their work for Foreign Missions, without the aid of those brethren who for so many years have called us to duty.

This should make pastors feel that the churches must now look to them for information and encouragement. This must make us feel that we are now to realize that the responsibility is on us.

Though there is no Secretary, the work must go on, and the salaries of the missionaries will continue to fall due to the amount of $10,000 a month. Our churches can prevent the Board from borrowing money and paying interest enough this year to support two missionaries,—if they will give one-fourth of their contribution to Foreign Missions now, and in the fall one-fourth, and in January one-fourth. If we can't give it all in the beginning of the year, cannot we not divide it up somewhat in this way, and get rid of the experience of past years.

Baptist Statistics.

The total number of white Southern Baptists is 1,276,491, from the following States: K[illegible]tucky, 153,668; North Carolina, 153,648; [illegible]is, 137,860; Texas, 139,734; Missouri, [illegible]35; Tennessee, 106,682; Alabama, 93,185; [illegible]nia, 93,698; Mississippi, 83,315, and [illegible] Carolina, 72,641. The value of white [illegible]ist property in the South is given as [illegible],151,599; in North Carolina, $1,662,405. It may be of interest to our readers to know that, with the exception of Kentucky, no State has more white Baptists in it than any other in the United States, according to the statistics compiled by the U. S. Government.

DIED.

STAFFORD—Died in Newland township, Pasquotank county, N. C., June 15th, 1893, of cholera infantum, little Herbert Augustus, the only son of W. T. and Julia A. Stafford, aged five months and fifteen days. Weep not, dear parents, your baby is not dead, but only sleeping, for Christ said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

GRANDPA.

LEE—Miss Janie Lee died June 5th, 1893, in her seventeenth year. For three years she had been a zealous member of Morehead City Baptist church. She loved the Sunday-school and toiled for its success. She possessed fine intellectual powers. Her disposition was sweet. Her social qualities were attractive. Her record was exemplary. She endured her afflictions with remarkable cheerfulness and courage. Peacefully and triumphantly she passed away. H. C. MOORE.

NICHOLS—Miss M. Janie Nichols, the oldest daughter of Bro. D. B. Nichols, died June 2d, 1893, after a painful illness of about seven weeks. She had just entered her seventeenth summer.

The deceased was unusually bright, and for one so young she had developed wonderfully as a Christian. She is greatly missed by Olive Branch church of which she was a member, by the entire community, but especially by the family. To these sorrowing ones we extend our sympathies, and for them we offer our prayers that God would comfort them in this sore bereavement.

JOHN C. HOCUTT.

LILES—Brother James D. Liles died at his home near Lilesville on May 29th, 1893, in the eighty-seventh year of his age. Bro. Liles was the oldest person connected with the Lilesville Baptist church, and with one exception, that of the venerable Rev. Benjamin Sanders, had been a member the longest time. Ever since I became his pastor, nearly five years ago, I felt that he was too ripe for heaven to remain long on earth.

He was born and died within two miles of Lilesville, and was held in highest esteem by all who knew him as one of the most substantial and useful citizens in Anson county. He was a typical, old-fashioned Southern gentleman, whose heart and home were always open to the needy and distressed. He was full of the "milk of human kindness," and none who came to him in want were ever turned away empty. He took a lively interest in whatever was for the good of his community. As a citizen, his place will be hard to fill. But it was as a Christian that the writer knew him best and loved him most. He was thoroughly acquainted with the workings of the denomination for a half century or more, and loved to talk about the old fathers in Zion whom he knew and heard when he was a boy. He had been a constant reader of the RECORDER for fifty years, and enjoyed reading it more than anything else except his Bible.

It was a rare privilege to sit at his feet and hear his rich experience of grace. For a long time he has been anxiously awaiting the call of the Master. Like Paul, he had "a desire to depart and be with Christ which is far better." The warfare is over, and he has gone to receive his crown.

L. JOHNSON.

SYKES—Departed this life April 19th, 1893, Sister Martha Ann Sykes, aged sixty-nine years. Our sister had been a consistent member of the Baptist church for forty-five years—first at Mt. Tabor, Hertford county; then at Mt. Carmel. She married three times—first to Mr. Wm. Boykin, who lived two months, and in 1845 married John Jenkins (son of uncle Berry Jenkins, an old deacon of Mt. Tabor church) in whom she found a congenial companion; but he lived only about two years, leaving her with one little babe, who has for all these years been known as Johnnie at home, at school and among her neighbors, after the name of the dear departed father. For a number of years Sister Martha lived a widow with Dr. Jno. T. Lewter, her mother and sister Susan Elizabeth. After the doctor moved to Murfreesboro, and her mother died, she married Britton Sykes, who had five daughters and one son. Mr. Sykes did not live but a few years, and now for more than twenty-five years Sister Martha has been with the only daughter, Mrs. Benj. Stancill. In all the relations of life, as step-mother, church member, mistress and neighbor, she was thoughtful of her position, setting a good example; was a constant reader of her Bible and the BIBLICAL RECORDER. She was liberal and prompt in the support of her pastor, and contributed to the enterprises of her denomination. Sister Martha was a great sufferer for eight months before her death, but did not murmur at her Father's chastening dealings with her. It was remarkable to see her manifested joy when her only sister (Sister Lou Deberry) her nieces, nephews and neighbors would visit her in her helpless condition. It reminded one of Jesus' definition of pure religion. Jas. 1: 27.

The writer preached her funeral, using as his thought the appropriate text, 1 Cor. 15: 57, "Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

BUNCH—Another good woman, devoted Christian, faithful wife, watchful mother, and kind neighbor, has gone to her rest. Mrs. Mary Isabell Bunch, wife of Mr. Cullen Bunch of Chowan county, passed from this life to the realms beyond on June 14th, 1893. Her disease was stone cancer. She suffered greatly before death relieved her. She was a model Christian, always present at church on Saturdays and Sundays, unless prevented by sickness or some other cause. She loved her church and pastor, and loved to give to the cause of Christ. She was a member of Rocky-hock church thirty-one years. She was fifty-three years old. She leaves a husband, one son, and three sisters to mourn their loss. Her church and neighborhood sustains a great loss.

Edenton, N. C., June 17, 1893.

CARTER—At his home in Holly Springs, Wake county, on Wednesday, May 17, 1893, the soul of Eli Carter, Esq., the loyal citizen, grand old gentleman and ripe Christian, passed away to meet its reward in the beautiful far-beyond. Being for many years a prominent Mason, his remains were laid to rest on Friday, May 19th, with Masonic honors, Rev. W. S. Olive preaching the funeral. Born in 1825, he was in his sixty-eighth year at the time of his death. He was born in Cumberland county, afterwards Harnett, and from his early young manhood he was one of the most highly respected and influential citizens of his community. Being of rather poor parentage, he was early thrown upon his own resources for an education; and so well did he improve the opportunities that he made for himself, he was one of the best educated men of his time and community. For years he occasionally taught school in his neighborhood, and thus identified himself with the educational interests of his county. And not a few men who are now ready to turn the meridian of life can point back to many useful lessons which his life as a student taught them. His chief occupation was farming, and he devoted his best powers, energies and intelligence to his chosen work. He succeeded far beyond the average farmer, rearing a family of seven sons and one daughter, to each of whom he gave a fair education, and accumulated a comfortable estate besides, and all without any capital but his muscle and brain. In 1854, he married Edith Ann Matthews, who, with the entire family, survives him. In 1868, he was converted and joined the Baptist church, of which he was a devoted and consistent member until his death, and he was prominent in church work until he became too infirm to attend to public duties. Having become somewhat old and infirm, and his sons having gone out into the world for themselves, he moved to Holly Springs to be near two of his sons who were in business there. For years he was a great sufferer, but through it all he was patient and hopeful. His last hours were an inspiration to holy living. Conscious to the last, waiting for the summons of his Lord, he bade his loved ones an assuring farewell, and left a message for all his relatives to meet him in heaven. And then he "fell on sleep." His sterling character and his Christian fortitude, together with like and equal virtues in his noble and consecrated wife, enabled him to leave a living testimonial of his noble life in the virtue and excellence and sterling character of his children, who are well and pleasantly known in Wake and other counties of this State, and some of them beyond the State, and who are all living to call his memory blessed together. Being the fond and trusted uncle of the writer, who was early left without a father's care, the recollections of his father-like counsels and his words of encouragement have been a lantern to my pathway for a full score of years and more; and his life of ceaseless industry, manly independence and child-like trust in God, are an inspiration yet, and shall be to the end of the way.

"And the tear that we shed though in secret it rolls, Shall long keep his memory green in our souls."

Alpha and Omega.

BY NORRA WINSTEAD.

A thing divine translated from another sphere to this,
Encrusted in a shell of earth formed by an angel's kiss;
Forgetful of its erstwhile life, unknowing aught to be,
Born in a strange and mystic world itself a mystery.

The going out of something which we call a living soul,
A fragment's drawing upward to the great and final Whole,
A breaking through the shadows 'yond which stands the unrevealed—
A putting off the earth-life for the death-life there unveiled.

Misspent Time.

There is no remedy for time misspent—
No healing for the waste of idleness,
Whose very languor is a punishment
Heavier than active souls can feel or guess.
O hours of indolence and discontent,
Not now to be redeemed! Ye sting not less
Because I know this span of life was lent
For lofty duties, not for selfishness.
Not to be whiled away in endless dreams,
But to improve ourselves and save mankind,
Life and its choicest faculties were given.
Man should be ever better than he seems
And shape his acts and discipline his mind
To walk adoring earth with hope of heaven.
—Sir Arthur de Vere.

Sympathizing With the Young.

There are few mature persons who give sufficient thought to the griefs and troubles of the young of all ages. Once we have passed the period of childish sorrows and trials, they seem very little to us, and we are quite apt to make light of them or overlook them altogether. The little hearts are entirely unaccustomed to trouble, and trials that seem to us so trivial are to them matters of the greatest moment. The loss or destruction of a doll is for the time as much to the baby girl as her own loss would be to her mother.

The necessity for giving up the pets he has raised and fed and cared for and looked upon as his own is as great a blow to the boy as is the loss of his farm or the burning of his warehouse to the middled aged man.

Quite too little attention is given to the subject of property which is supposed to belong to children. A colt, a calf or a lamb is given to the farmer's boy when it is a tiny weakling. He is told that it is his if he will care for it and bring it up. It is called his property, and much fault is found with him if it is not properly looked after. When it is grown, the youngster comes home from school, some day, to find that it is sold and the father has pocketed the money and, with the most brutal disregard for the child's feelings, actually laughs at the idea of his claiming it.

A man who had made almost a failure of life through lack of ambition, once said that he really believed that his entire future was clouded by treatment of this sort. From the time he was a small boy until he was almost grown it was a common practice of his father to promise this, that and the other of the farm products if he would give special attention to his work. Time after time something was given in this way, each time with renewed and more earnest statements that that should really be his. After awhile, some emergency would arise, and Arthur's colt, calf or lamb was required to cancel some obligation or round out the sum of some purchase money. There was always a sort of apology, a pledge of something better in the future.

If the boy objected, he was mildly reproved for being selfish. He was a natural caretaker, and whatever creature he took in special charge was sure to flourish, and therefore became among the most valuable of the products of the place. But all these things were sacrificed, and with them the boy's hope and ambition. While he would not neglect the animals about the farm, for he was too kind hearted to do that, he grew to do his duty in a careful but mechanical sort of way, and, finally, entirely broke himself of the habit of thinking that anything did or could belong to him. He grew up with the habit of looking after other people's business, and the natural instinct and personal pride which, as a boy, had been one of his marked characteristics, was in time entirely destroyed. His father used to bewail Arthur's lack of enthusiasm. As he arrived at man's estate, he seemed to have no ambition for a place of his own or, indeed, anything of his own, and, much to his father's grief, settled down as a hireling, content to look after the affairs of others. His father lived and died in ignorance of the fact that his unwise conduct in depriving the boy of an object for ambition had dwarfed his capacity and checked his interest in possessing things.

It is well worth while to give to every child something definitely and positively its own. Whatever the situation may be, every youngster should have the privilege of earning something. Special service should be rewarded by tangible results, which should not be interfered with in any way.

The property of a child and its ownership of it should be as much respected as that of the adult. There is as much necessity for education in this line as any other, and care and attention to the cultivation of laudible ambition is one of the most important items in the bringing-up of children.

Probably one of the greatest trials of the young is being deprived of that which they have been led to consider as their own. The trusting nature of childhood takes much for granted and should never be imposed on or disappointed. It would be very [illegible] parents to set aside for some [illegible] purpose the [illegible] of the young animals which their children have lavished their choicest care. If the colt, the calf or the poultry meant a summer trip to some place of interest, a term at college, a few music or painting lessons or a visit to the great Exposition, there would be much more enthusiastic care in the looking after every-day matters of life.—N. Y. Ledger.

The Check-Rein.

BY AN OLD AND WELL-KNOWN LOVER OF THE HORSE.

We practice many cruelties on the horse. We underfeed and overwork him, expose him to cold and wet, work him in ill fitting harness, compel him to stand in narrow, dark, and uncomfortable stalls, annoy his eyes with blinders, jerk his mouth, and whip him.

That portion of the spine in the neck is, in a horse, as in a man, very sensitive. If a man's neck be forced into any constrained position and held there, the keenest suffering quickly follows.

If a horse's head be fastened down a foot below its natural place, he will suffer, but not a tenth part as much as he will if you compel him to hold his own head a foot above its natural place. In this case, within five minutes he begins to suffer, and you may see in his face and in his efforts to release his head how great that suffering is.

First, he will try to relieve himself by letting the weight hang upon his bit. Soon he will carry his head far around on one side and let it hang there a moment; then he will carry it around on the other side, then bring it in front, and throw it up high two or three times. These three movements—the only possible ones—he will continue until his head is released.

How any man can witness this spectacle, without being touched, is a mystery.

The greatest strain is felt in the muscles on top of the neck, just under the collar. The muscles at that point become inflamed and weak, and are at length so reduced in size that an unseemly hollow is produced at that point.

Another common effect of the use of check-reins is stiff shoulder and weak knees. If we leave his head free, his shoulders and knees rarely give way. I have studied the influence of the check-rein a long time. For years I have observed in New York City that the car and omnibus horses, although they work hard and on the hardest pavements, very rarely become stiff forward, because their heads are free, while, even in the country, livery horses wearing tight check-reins are almost sure to become stiff.

In Paris I attended for some time the cliniques in a large horse hospital. The lecturers frequently alluded to a very old gentleman, constantly seen about the premises, as the wisest man upon diseases of the horse in the world.

At the front door this old gentleman said to a company of students, "Do you see that baker's horse? What do you suppose was the cause of those stiff shoulders and trembling knees?"

"Hard pavements," I suggested. "Overdriving," said another.

"Hard pavements and overdriving are bad for the shoulders and knees," replied the old surgeon, "but, gentlemen, the horse is so perfectly made that if you will take off that check rein he will stand a vast deal of hard driving on hard pavements without harm. Gentlemen, come back into the yard, and I will explain. Here, boy, bring that horse this way. Now, gentlemen, these shoulders, this long neck, and this head, together make up a wonderful structure. The Creator seems to have known how to make all these parts and to put them together, and, I fancy, he has taught each horse how to carry his head. You see there are a great many bones and ligaments, and tendons and muscles, and these all work into and with each other, like the various parts in an orchestra. In some horses the natural position of the head is high. In that case, all the bones and ligaments, and tendons and muscles, in the head, and neck, and shoulders, are fitted to a high head, and they work into and with each other in a natural and easy way with the head carried high. But, in the great majority of horses, the natural position of the head is low. Now, in this case, all these bones and ligaments, and tendons and muscles, in the head, and neck, and shoulders, work into and with each other in a natural, easy, and comfortable way only when the head is carried low. If in such a horse the head is fastened above its natural place, you will see at once that all these bones and ligaments, and tendons and muscles, instead of playing into each other in their natural and comfortable way, must work in an unnatural, strained way, and must produce friction, fatigue, and pain.

"When a man leaps from a height, he relieves the shock with bent legs and the elastic substance between the bones of his spine. When a horse comes down hard on one or both of his fore legs,—for example, when he steps into an unexpected hole, there is no bent leg or elastic substance to mitigate the shock. But nature has provided the animal with a perfect protection in this long neck with its free movements. Suppose, for example, the head and neck were one solid stiff bone, and fastened to the shoulders in some firm, inflexible manner. Now suppose the horse is trotting along and steps down six inches lower than he expected, don't you see what a fearful strain the shoulders must suffer, and how soon the shoulders and knees must become sore and weak? Will any of you tell me how this head and neck, fastened up by a strong check-rein, differs in its influence on the shoulders from the solid, stiff bone that I described? The check-rein produces more stiff shoulders and weak knees than all other causes put together."

And then the old man went on to add many arguments against the check-rein, and I remember he asked us whether we supposed the horse could see the road just in front of him as well when his head was a foot or a foot and a half above its natural place, as when he is allowed to carry it in its natural position.

He closed his admirable little speech by an appeal to our sympathies, which I am sure none of us will ever forget. Among other things he said, if you whip a horse or knock him down with a club, the pain will soon pass away, but the torture of the check-rein continues from morning till night and every day of the year.—Our Dumb Animals.

Cares and Prayers.

Learn to entwine with your prayers the small cares, the trifling sorrows, little wants of daily life. Whatever affects you, be it a changed look, an altered tone, an unkind word, a wrong, a wound, a demand you cannot meet, a sorrow you cannot disclose—turn it into prayer and send it up to God. Disclosures you may not make to man you can make to the Lord. Men may be too little for your great matter; God is not too great for your small ones. Only give yourself to prayer, whatever be the occasion that calls for it.—Interior.

AS A CLEANSER of the blood, nothing sweeps as clean as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It purifies the blood as well as enriches it. The truth is, an emulsion of cod liver oil is good for building up fat—no doubt about it. But—ugh! a weak stomach loathes it.

Fortunately, there's a tissue-builder, that's even better for making healthy flesh. Pleasant in taste—effective in result. That's the "Discovery." It goes to work in the right way, by regulating, cleansing, and repairing all the organs of the body.

When the germs of disease are round about us we do not all get them. Why? Some of us are in too good a condition. The germs of Consumption, Grippe, Malaria, and all the infectious diseases, pass you by if you are strong to resist their attack. Outlines of a Sermon.

PREACHED AT THE DEDICATION OF THE NEW BAPTIST CHURCH HOUSE AT MT. ZION, FLAT RIVER ASSOCIATION, JUNE 4, 1893, BY REV. J. A. STRADLEY, AND PUBLISHED BY REQUEST OF THE CHURCH.

Text—"And of Zion it shall be said, This and that man was born in her." Psalm 87: 5.

I. The church is God's own institution.

1. May it not be said that it is God's only institution? God seems to have given directions for the framing of the Jewish national government. Before and since then, governments have been formed according to the wishes or wisdom of men. God has left men to form republics and monarchies (absolute or limited), while he has bestowed his wisdom, care and love on his own institution, the church. Human organizations may flourish and the world be helped but little—they may fail, and not much evil follows; but by the church the world is to be helped, blest and be saved.

2. God intends the church to meet all the social, intellectual and spiritual needs ...ed.

...ity that cannot be and is not fos... Christian church degenerates into ... Each church should be a teach... ...ern of morality in the community ... located. None but Christians are ...rch-members. There can be no ...istianity without pure morality. A true church, on account of her own purity, is the best teacher of morality. Ancient philosophers taught systems of morality that contained much that was good and beautiful, but they also contained much that was false and corrupting. God intends the church to meet the moral needs of mankind. They can be fully met from no other source.

God has invested the church with power to meet the social needs of mankind. We are made to be social—to enjoy each other's society. The purest social circles are those that are pervaded by a genuine Christianity. Christianity is not intended to be a stern, repulsive, selfish thing; but genial, pleasant, attractive. It is to be social, so as to draw, please, purify and elevate others. All needed sociability can be enjoyed under the care and control of churches.

God intends the church to meet the intellectual needs of mankind. God has endowed man with the highest intellectual powers; capable of almost unlimited development. From this it may be argued, that he intended these powers to be cultivated under the best influences. He has not left a transcendently important work to be done by incompetent workmen. Pure, true intellectual culture, can only be given by Christian teachers. Everything in the universe that the human mind can comprehend is the work of God. No one is fit to teach who does not recognize this fact. God intends to be glorified, not only by Christianity, but by all that is in the physical and mental world. All teaching should be given under christian influences. Nearly all schools in Christian lands are conducted under this influence. No thoughtful parent would be willing to educate a child under ungodly, especially infidel teachers. It is apparent then, that the church can only fully meet man's intellectual needs.

God intends the church to meet man's spiritual needs. Man is pre-eminently a spiritual being. It is his spiritual nature that lifts him above all other created things. It makes him immortal, and capable of the noblest destiny. Man cannot teach what he does not know. An ungodly man cannot teach godliness. The church is the only truly spiritual organization, therefore it alone can meet man's spiritual needs. The command to preach the gospel to all the world is given to the church, not to societies. God has made the church to do the work of universal evangelization.

3. To do this great work the church has withstood all the changes of time. For six thousand years various organizations have arisen, flourished and failed, but the church has stood and strengthened. Wicked men have combined to overthrow the church. Voltaire said he was tired of hearing that twelve men could establish Christianity in the world; and he would show that one man could overthrow it. But he soon found he needed help, and associated other infidels with him. Their watch word was, "Crush the wretch," meaning Jesus. But the scheme of these infidels has failed, and Christianity lives with ever growing power. The church has withstood all the assaults of the Devil; and it shall stand. Dan. 2: 44. Matt. 16: 18.

4. All civilization, elevation, refinement and salvation comes through the church.

Civilization, in its best sense, can only be reached under gospel influences. To realize this, compare a christianized with the best of unchristianized nations.

Nothing but Christianity can take a man corrupted, degraded and fallen by sin, and elevate him to purity and nobility of character here, and give him citizenship in heaven, and make him an "heir of God and a joint heir with Jesus Christ."

The whole tendency of sin is to make men worldly, sensual, devilish, rough, uncouth. But Christianity changes the vilest and roughest into pure, gentle, refined beings. Christianity is the highest type of etiquette.

All men are born sinners. As such they are lost, ruined, helpless, hopeless. God has made it the mission of the church to bring salvation to these ruined ones. He has commissioned no other organization to do this work. It is by the agency of the church that the "kingdoms of this world are to become the kingdoms of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."

So God has invested the church with powers to meet all the higher and most important demands of mankind. It, therefore, towers in grand importance above all other organizations. "Glorious things are spoken of thee, O city of God." Ps. 87: 3. See also Isaiah, chapter 60.

II. God has designed Zion as the birthplace of his people: "This and that man was born in her."

1. It is a remarkable fact that nearly all Christians have been brought to the "new birth" in direct connection with church work. I once asked all in a congregation, who were satisfied they were Christians and who had been led to conversion by church-work, to stand and be counted: 101 stood. Then all who had been converted separate from church work were asked to stand: two arose. One of these told me afterwards that she was convicted under a sermon preached at church; so 102 were born in Zion, and one elsewhere.

2. Persons can only be born into the church by the spiritual birth. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the spirit is spirit." John, third chapter.

But right in the face of these plain Bible teachings, there are those who teach that children are born in the covenant—are born holy, and therefore are fit for baptism and church membership. There are some who will receive into their churches those who are avowedly unregenerate. Some claim that persons are made Christians by baptism. Campbellites teach that immersion is the finishing act of salvation. In catechisms people are taught that infant baptism made them Christians. Proof: "What is your name? Answer. My name is N. or M. Who gave you this name? Answer. My sponsors in baptism; wherein I was made a member of Christ, the child of God, and an inheritor of the kingdom of heaven." Some believe that confirmation makes them church members. Many teach, and thousands believe, that Christianity consists in simply resolving to live better lives and joining the church. But all who are in the church except by the spiritual birth are resting upon a deceptive and false foundation. It will fail them when the test comes.

2. Let preachers remember that the grandest work on earth is to lead souls to be born in Zion. Let them not leave this highest work, and condescend to the low work of drawing crowds—pleasing the people—being popular.

Let your church in all her work—in prayer-meeting, Sunday-school, preaching, &c., keep your God-given work constantly in view, namely, the work of leading souls to be born in Zion. And may God grant that within this house, built for his worship, thousands of souls may experience the new birth and rise to the Mt. Zion above.

III. God will make an individual examination of church members:

"This and that man was born in her"—"When he writeth up the people"—When he comes to see what each has done, or left undone. Each Christian will be examined as though there was no other Christian, or worker. God has assigned to each of you work to do. He will come to see if you have done it, left it undone, or turned it over to others to do. But we notice,

1. That many professed Christians do not realize their individual responsibility to God. They claim to be glad that religious work is going on, but they take but little or no part in it. Ask one, "Does your church keep up a prayer-meeting?" "Yes we have a prayer-meeting; and they say it is a very good one. I do not attend it often. It is held at a time that does not suit me very well. I have business, or society meetings claiming my attention at that time. I am sorry I cannot attend. But the brethren keep up a good prayer-meeting. I hope it is doing much good."

Ask another, "Does your church have a Sunday-school?" "O, yes, of course we do. They say it is one of the best." "Do you attend it, and help to keep it up?" "Well—no—I—don't—go—often. I have to work all the week and when Sunday comes I am tired, and want to sleep some. I am so busy all the week, that I am obliged to attend to some little business matters on Sunday. Then, too, that is the only day I can spare to visit my relatives and neighbors, and talk with them about our worldly affairs. But if nothing else was in my way, I live two or three miles away from church, and you know that is too far to go." "Does your church have regular preaching?" "Yes, certainly. We would not think of doing without a preacher." "Do you attend his ministry and help pay him?" "I go sometimes, when I am not too busy, or tired, or have no company, or am not obliged to attend some society meeting. I sometimes pay the preacher something when I have a little money I can spare. Times are hard, taxes are high and I can't pay much, but our church pays our preacher well." Ask about all kinds of church work, and there are some ready to say: "Yes, our church is working along all these lines," while they themselves are doing nothing, or according to their opportunities the same as nothing. When God comes to "write up the people," such persons will not get credit for what others have done. Each one will have to give an account of himself to God. Your reward will be according to your work, not the work of others.

2. God will examine individuals as connected with Zion, and not as connected with human societies. All the Christian work they do, ought to be done by the church, God's institution. He has instituted the church as the agency by which all Christian work ought to be done. Let the church be made what it can be, what it ought to be, what God intended it to be, and we need no other societies to do Christian work. If the work given to societies, were given to the church, God would be better pleased, and more good would be done. God will examine church, not society work.

3. In God's individual examination he will love each person he finds to have been born in Zion. He will love them because they have believed, loved, and obeyed him, and are in his institution to carry on its blessed work of saving the world.

4. God will notice the individual agency by which his people were brought to the new birth. Have you, has your church, your Sunday-school been instrumental in bringing souls to Christ? In all your Christian work, as individuals and as a church, let your one great aim be to bring souls to be born in Zion. This is the church's God-given work. The church alone can do it. It is the grandest of all work.

In this house, which to-day we dedicate to the service of Almighty God, may it be found, when he "writeth up the people," that "this and that man was born in her."

Three things to govern—temper, tongue, and conduct.

Predestination.

Is predestination taught in the Bible? Did God actually choose some of his creatures to salvation before the foundation of the world, and leave others to perish in their sins? Election is defined to be God's choice in the exercise of his sovereign grace of some men, or a part of the human race, to salvation by Jesus Christ. "Chosen in Christ" and "chosen to salvation" are expressions often met with in the New Testament Scriptures. They are designated as vessels of mercy prepared upto glory. The three views called supralapsarian, the sublapsarian, and the Armenian theory cannot all be correct. Both the supralapsarians and the sublapsarians agree as to God's purpose in his unconditionally choosing some to eternal life and dooming others according to their ill deserts in everlasting misery, which is opposed to the Armenian theory, which claims that whatever God has decreed respecting his intelligent creatures, is founded on foreseen goodness in his chosen.

The question with us is, whether or not God's holy and inscrutible sovereignty, which he has made known in his works of creation, providence and redemption, forms the basis of his action? It is agreed that love reigned in the heart of the Saviour and actuated him in the arduous work committed to him in bringing men in contact with the insulted Deity in which he should "see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied." Love to our fallen race, love the ruling passion, in anticipation of his coming sorrows could say, "I have a baptism to be baptized with, and how am I straitened till it be accomplished," and to silence anything of a boasting spirit in his disciples, reminds them, "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that you should go and bring forth fruit." So far from being chosen on the ground of any moral qualification or foreseen goodness, he assured them that his love was antecedent to theirs. Instead of their first loving him, he first loved them; for, says the inspired Apostle, "we love him, because he first loved us," "he having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ, according to the good pleasure of his will"—not predestinated on account of good in us, but "according to the good pleasure of his will." True, the death of Christ opens the door of hope to Adam's race. Many will not avail themselves of the benefits of his atonement, however the serious declaration, "Ye will not come to me that ye might have life"; then again, "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him." All men will not be saved, but the redeemed will be numerous enough to give the Son of man the most exulting triumph over his malignant enemies and satisfy him for all his humiliation, shame and agonies of his incarnation and death; all that the Father hath given him he will bring with him. The actual purpose of the cross is to save that part of the human race embraced in the covenant. They are saved by "grace." Faith, around which other Christian graces cluster and begets love, is the gift of God. The office of the Holy Spirit is to carry on the work Christ came to do for the elect. It is he who applies the benefits of Christ's purchase by teaching and guiding them (John 14: 26), by convincing and reproving them of sin (John 16: 7,) by renewing and sanctifying their souls (Tit. 3: 5, and 1 Pet. 1: 2), and by mortifying sin in them (Rom. 8: 13). He leads them, mortifies sin in them, gives faith, inspires hope.

Why some born of the same parents give evidence of sincere piety, while others are incorrigibly wicked, why some live to advanced life while others die in infancy, are as inscrutable as his other decrees.

MONTGOMERY.

Who is Servant?

I have been very much mortified by a number of unpleasant communications which have appeared in our denominational papers recently. I am none the less ashamed that I am a Baptist, but I am pained, grieved and bored that Baptists are pleased to lay aside their legitimate occupation in order that selfish ends may be materialized.

I would not be misunderstood. I would not add one particle of mist to the already thickening fog. I have never yet taken my pen in hand to enter the varied contests of my brethren through the "public prints." I have never felt an appetite for such food, but it seems to me that I would not be true to myself and my churches if I fail to make this inquiry now. Therefore, I ask "Who is servant?"

I notice that one of our leading Southern lights at the Southern Baptist Convention claimed as the reason for failure along Centennial lines, "the want of organization among Baptists." I admit the claim in one sense, but I do not admit it in its entirety. There is no need of denying facts of any kind. Those who do so only "kick against the pricks," and weaken their own cause.

We have organization, if I understand the definition of the term, but is it the duty of the organization to compel confidence on the part of all our people? Whenever there has been an effort made to organize some new machinery for advancing denominational work, invariably should a cautious brother venture to oppose centralization of, or federal, power, he has been silenced by the same utterance, "The Boards and their Secretaries are the servants of the churches, or brethren, and therefore you have a right at any time to ask, or demand, an insight into their works." On many occasions, cautious, consecrated, God fearing men have withdrawn their opposition and quieted their fears by believing that such would be the case.

Now, candidly, to all parties concerned, has such a course always been pursued by the organized powers after the power was conferred? Have they always shown a disposition to serve the wishes of the brethren? Have they, on the other hand, ever manifested a spirit to compel the brethren to serve their wishes?

How many men—composing the different Boards with their officers—in our Convention work, are superior to mistakes? Leaving these questions to be answered in the consciences of those concerned, we again repeat the question, "Who is servant?"

A soldier, who having the battles to fight, (already bearing scars, reminds of former skirmishes), when there are no big guns to frighten by their thunders at his back, but a foe in every bush and behind every hedge to encounter him and bushwhackers following in his rear to demolish the little success and enterprise accompliished, has a right, an undeniable right, to ask whose orders he shall obey.

Every unselfish member of the churches composing the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina would appreciate organization of such a nature as to double, yes, quadruple, the work of the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools. Still they are manly or foolish enough to believe that there are rights belonging to the churches and associations. And as they created the Boards, the Boards should show them some respect.

I have had some hard fights in my own, as well as other, associations, to keep the relationship existing between the Boards and themselves as of former years. "There is dissatisfaction," and lots of it, "existing all over the State among the churches." We cannot deny it. We cannot persuade ourselves to the contrary. Then let us turn our attention to channels in which we may remove this unpleasantness instead of creating more of it.

I believe that if the brethren would pray more that the Holy Spirit would guide the Boards and their officers aright in all departments of the work, that there would be less friction and need of criticism. I am persuaded, on the other hand, that should the Secretary, with others, realize more clearly that they are the occupants of places of confidence and trust conferred upon them by the brethren as a proof of confidence and trust, and therefore that every reasonable request should receive a courteous and faithful reply either by letter, verbally, or through the BIBLICAL RECORDER, which is "the organ of North Carolina Baptists," that their skirts would be clear from much cause of complaint.

We claim as our motto, "North Carolina for Jesus." I feel, sometimes, that we forget it, and therefore drop the name of Jesus, and in its stead place the name of some poor, frail, feeble, selfish man. Certainly, it would be a position to be envied for even the greatest and best among us—the great hosts of our people gathering every word and gesture, obeying every mandate, gratifying every desire, following without question one man; but we have ever preached and striven against such things in others, and we cannot consistently go back on our teachings, however much we might desire so to do.

Just at this point, the mail comes, and with it a number of tracts from Brother C. Durham. Perhaps they will answer the question. Let us see. Well, I have only time to glance at the title, "Our Board and its Work, 1830—1893." If the contents settles the question, I am done, if not, I shall probably come again for information as to "Who is servant?"

Sincerely, C. M. MURCHISON.

Amen to Bro. Broughton's Call for Peace.

Dear Recorder.—I regard myself as in the "Amen corner." I have not, nor do I propose to make a speech through the RECORDER. But to so much of Bro. L. G. Broughton's article in RECORDER of June 21, as begs for peace, I want to say, amen and amen and amen.

"Master, the tempest is raging, * * *
* * * * * *
O waken and save, I pray."

"Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." How sweet it will be to sing,

"Master, the terror is over."

C. S. CASHWELL.

The Pulpit Scold.

The scold in the pulpit is out of place. People tire of him. He loses caste and influence. He forgets his mission, though he fancies that he is doing God service. It is his to instruct, not to indulge in tirade. He is to win and to persuade, not to berate and asperse. He is to warn and entreat, not to threaten and abuse. Evils he must expose, but not in a curt, rasping, cutting manner. Wrongs he must denounce, but in a kindly and loving spirit. While faithful in admonition, regard must be had to time and occasion, and it must be seen that the minister is not a sensational enunciator or pulpit scold, but a faithful, judicious, broad-minded, level-headed herald of his Lord, caring after his glory, and for the ... and public welfare.—Presbyterian

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 5, 1893.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

"What Baptists Believe," by the late J. L. Burrows, will be given to every new subscriber to the BIBLICAL RECORDER who will pay $2.00 in advance for a years' subscription. We will also give the book to every old subscriber who will pay his subscription to date and a year in advance.

Think of it! Your denominational paper, the subscription price of which is $2.00, one year, and a neatly bound book of over a hundred pages, containing a clear and fair expression of what Baptists believe and practice, all for the price of the paper.

Remember, this offer is to new and old subscribers alike.

THE FIFTY-NINTH YEAR OF THE RECORDER

With this issue the RECORDER enters on the fifty ninth year of its publication. Its past is too well known to the Baptists of North Carolina to require a review at our hands. It speaks for itself, and needs no individual commendation. But few who read its first numbers are living now. Long since have its founders—wise men and true—passed away. They were among the best men that the denomination has ever known, and to them is due the strength and power of many of our institutions and organizations to day.

The RECORDER has grown with its years. In its fifty-eight volumes filed away is faithfully preserved the history of the wonderful growth and conservative progress of our denomination in North Carolina for almost six decades. It is a history full of struggles and full of triumph, and in these struggles and triumphs is the history of the RECORDER, for ever have the trials of the denomination been its organ's trials, and its triumphs its organ's triumphs. Thus from the beginning have they labored in the same vineyard for the same great end, in God-given Christian peace and harmony.

In the future we shall, we trust, by the divine guidance, devote our energies to the great work that God has committed to his people, the establishment of his kingdom and the salvation of souls, as we have in the past. Whatever be the times and seasons, the changes and events of this life, the editor, no less than the churches and pastors, has his one great mission in the service of God.

We expect to continue the course so long pursued unbiased by questions of policy or prejudice, and aided by the successes and inspirations of the past to increase our diligence in the task before us. We are ready to advocate and defend whatever tends to the glory of God and the well-being of our fellow man. For bickering and petty and personal strife we have neither time nor space. We wish to instruct, to lead, to encourage, and to serve the toilers in the Master's vineyard—to help the weak, and to direct the erring, to hinder no servant in the service of our Lord, while we shall faithfully warn the great denomination of which we are the servant of any change that would endanger the cause of Christ.

To the extent of our powers we shall aid the Convention and the Associations in their work, always remaining true to the Baptist principles and the imperishable truths of Jesus Christ, for the furtherance of which the RECORDER was established, and which it has served as faithfully as it could these fifty-eight years.

We believe in missions and in education as the great work of this and the rising generation, and we want the day to hasten when every church is a missionary society, and when our schools and colleges are filled with students.

With these few words, we enter on our fifty-ninth year, thanking our friends who have sustained us in the past, and praying God's richest blessings on his people everywhere.

NUMBER OF BAPTISTS IN THIS STATE.

The last "Census Bulletin" in the "Statistics of Churches" from the Census Office, Washington, D. C., giving the figures, in detail and summary, of all the religious denominations in the United States has been received. The facts about North Carolina, and especially about the Baptists of our State, should be of interest to all of our people. We give them, therefore, from the [illegible] tables of 1890 just published:

BAPTISTS IN NORTH CAROLINA.

[illegible] Baptists (white)	153,648
[illegible] Baptists (colored)	146,856
[illegible] or Missionary Baptists	299,504

These figures are, to our knowledge, too small by many thousands. We take for an illustration and demonstration, Durham county. In this county the census gives seven churches, seven houses of worship valued at $5,450, and 750 church members. We take up the minutes of the Mount Zion Association for 1890, and we find in Durham county for that year eleven churches, eleven houses of worship and 1,668 members. The church property was that year worth about $28,500.

Here is a gain in one of the smallest counties in the State of four churches, 913 members, and $22,000 in church property. We could go through the census and show mistake after mistake, which would enlarge the number of Baptists in the State over the report given, but the one illustration is enough. Berea with 147 members, Bethesda with 120, Cedar Fork with 189, Durham, First church, with 467; Durham, Second church, with 141, Durham, Third church, with 103, Rose of Sharon with 117, Roberson's Grove with 112, Red Mountain with 80, Sandy Level with 90, and Yates with 102, are the churches in Durham county and the number of members in each for the year 1890 as published in the minutes.

If we make the necessary corrections in the figures of the census for 1890, and add the absolute gain to the Baptists for 1891 and 1892, the number will reach somewhere between 325,000 and 330,000 members.

But there are other Baptist brethren in the State, and the census taker has not neglected them because their numbers were small. We give them:

Primitive Baptists, white and colored,	11,914
Original Free-will Baptists, (white and colored)	10,224
Baptist Church of Christ	659
Old Two Seed Baptists, (white and colored)	183

The Primitive or Anti mission Baptists are in sixty one counties. Their largest numbers are in Wilkes county, 1,141; Surry, 805; Ashe, 730; Wilson, 612; and Johnston, 508. There are only 414 in Edgecombe county.

The original Free-will Baptists are in twenty one counties. Their largest numbers are in Pitt county, 1,664; Wayne, 1,164; Lenoir, 931; Pamlico, 915; Greene, 889; Beaufort, 743; Craven, 720; Johnston, 678; Wilson, 601, and on down in smaller numbers in the other counties.

The Baptist Church of Christ is located in six counties, viz., Alexander, Davie, Iredell, Surry, Wilkes and Yadkin. Their largest membership is in Wilkes, 261; and Davie, 131.

The Old Two-Seed Baptists are located in three counties only, viz, Forsyth, Stokes and Surry. Their largest numbers are in Stokes, 183.

The total of all the Baptists in North Carolina, as given in the census for 1890 (not counting the Christian or Campbellite Baptists) is 313,494.

But, if the proper corrections were made, as indicated above, the number of Baptists of all names (counting the Christian or Campbellite Baptists, numbering about 10,000) will go right much above 350,000. The population of North Carolina is given at 1,617,947. There is, therefore, out of every five men, women and children in the State, at least, one member of a Baptist church. This shows great activity in State Missions in the past; almost unlimited responsibilities and opportunities now and in the future.

DR. STEPHEN B. WEEKS, of Trinity College has written a book upon the early colonial history of our State, which has been published by Johns Hopkins University. In it he alleges that in colonial times no one was allowed to conduct a school in North Carolina unless he was a member of the Episcopal church, and to that fact is attributed "the backwardness of intellectual activity characteristic of the State to-day." Dr. Weeks also says in his book "that Presbyterian ministers were not allowed to perform the marriage ceremony till 1766, and when they did perform it, the fee went to the local minister of the church of England."

The editor of the News and Observer last week controverts both these statements, and says the first is "very incorrect," and that while there is much in Dr. Weeks' book to commend, "he was not content to narrate the story, but had an objective point to work up to." In regard to Presbyterian ministers marrying people the editor says he is uncertain how it was before 1741, but after that year the Presbyterian ministers could marry people, and if they could not, Presbyterian justices of the peace could, and there were a great many of them.

We do not know whether the editor of the News and Observer or Dr. Weeks is right about the matters mentioned, but so far as we have read the colonial history of this State and Virginia we are led to say that we would not be surprised if Dr. Weeks has authority for his statements. The Episcopal brethren back in those old colonial times had a large opportunity, and these brethren, so far as we have observed, wherever they have had a chance have always been very "assumptuous."

Those who have been through the records of colonial times, and have written down their investigations, have generally brought out a great deal of intolerance on the part of the established church of those times. Some of the histories that have recorded these things have not been very well relished by some.

It may be that Dr. Weeks is wrong in regard to the matters menticned above, but if it shall so turn out, there are still some matters along the same line that have been lodged in our mind that we would like to have additional information about, and while we would not ask a newspaper published for general readers to devote itself too much to the defence of any particular church, yet when the editor of the News and Observer has some space which he can properly devote to the matter, we should like to know whether or not ministers of other denominations than the Episcopal were put in jail in Virginia in colonial times for preaching the gospel, and whether they were also required in those times to give bond for claiming the same privilege in this State.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

Out of these hard times, of which we hear so much now, we are not only to get some useful lessons in economy, but other changes are to be made which will add to the interest of our State in its material prosperity. Necessity, after all, is what causes men to lay aside the old way of doing things, and look out for a better way of bringing things to pass. Nothing short of the impossibility of making cotton at the present low prices could have suggested the various resources which are just now being discovered in the soil of eastern North Carolina. At a few years ago, the only crop for market thought of was cotton. Last week I heard more said about Irish potatoes than I did about cotton: hundreds of barrels are now being shipped, and the farmers are getting fine prices for them. I heard of a farmer in the trucking section who has this season shipped $12,000 worth of cucumbers—a little fortune out of what many of us have supposed contained mostly colic, possibly cholera. I hear of acres of tomatoes and canning factories to be started later on, and a number of other things are to happen soon for the prosperity and enrichment of this portion of the State, which never would have been thought of if cotton had sold for ten cents a pound. Hon. Mr. "Hardtimes," representative "at large," is behind all this.

Bro. Vann is at Nag's Head, under orders to remain till he is thoroughly rested and strong again.

Captain Kitchen received his commission to go to New Orleans and look after the registering of the Chinese who come to this country, or, rather, who are already here. I don't think from the little speech the Captain made when he received his commission, that he would make a very good missionary to China. We hope, however, he may find his duties more pleasant than he anticipates. Capt. Kitchen is a true man, an ardent patriot, and his State owes much to the work and sacrifices he has made in its service.

It is refreshing to find a man these days who don't want anything. W. A. Dunn, one of the best lawyers of his age in the State, is satisfied to practice law six days in the week, and to listen to Dick Vann preach, and read the BIBLICAL RECORDER on Sunday. Sensible man.

Prof. Allen had a good school last session, and thinks his prospects fine for next session.

Soon after getting to Scotland Neck I heard Noah Biggs laugh, and was then certain I had gotten off at the right station.

Many friends in the State will learn with pleasure that Dr. W. McDowell has recovered his health, and considers himself thoroughly cured.

Bro. Hilliard was, as he always is, very kind and helpful to me in my work. The citizens here show a just appreciation of the valuable service he has rendered the town and community in making such a paper as the Scotland Neck Democrat. The factories, schools and various business interests of the town, owe largely what they are to the wise, vigorous and aggressive policy of this paper.

The cheerful presence of Dr. Liverman, A. McDowell, Frank Shields and John Futrell helped me to shorten the time for me to start to GREENVILLE.

Among the first things these brethren asked about was, "Have you seen or heard from Bro. Lamberth?" The whole town, Baptists and others, seem to be thoroughly in love with him. Few men ever have the opportunity which seems to hang around Bro. Lamberth's ministry in this section.

Bro. B. W. Spilman is supplying here for the vacation. He was busy visiting and getting acquainted with the members, and so had a good opportunity to help me get subscribers for the RECORDER.

WELDON.

Here Brother Harman has a comfortable home, nice fruit, and a fine garden. Also, he and one of his "hardshell" brethren have a potato patch between them. Bro. Harman is very much pleased with his work in Weldon as well as his church in the country. The ministry of the Tar River Association is notable just now both in number and ability. Bro. Taylor's people at have just matured plans for the repairs of the church. The changes involve practically the building of a new church. A Sunday-school room, the reseating, putting in new windows, the re-adjusting of the floor, papering walls, &c., are among the specifications named. I was impressed with the business which characterized the meeting This work, which is so important to the comfort, but especially so for the better facilities it will afford for doing the work of the church, will begin just as soon as the work of the architect and other necessary preliminaries are completed.

My week's work closed with a day spent with Bro. Van Deventer and his people at HENDERSON.

I thought I could see a decided revival in the church interests here. Bro. Lassiter was in his usual fine humor and good spirits. Sister Parham has again taken her place in church work. The ladies have on every Friday night a sociable in the old church building where ice cream, music and pleasant conversation are attracting large numbers. Every week the proceeds of these meetings are applied as the church may determine. Bro Van Deventer is much interested in Foreign Missions at all times, but especially so now, as there is no Corresponding Secretary to push this work. He is looking around among our North Carolina brethren for a suitable man to nominate for this position. Possibly some of the brethren may help him in this matter. J. C. C.

....I am well pleased with Bro. Durham's tract, "Our Board and its Work." It contains the information our people need. I want three dozen for my churches.—E. D. Teeter, Locust Level, N. C.

....Rev. Walter M. Gilmore is at present doing missionary work in the Nelson Association, Ky. He writes that his work is pleasant and situation congenial, but that he can't do without the RECORDER.

....We enjoy the RECORDER as we would a breath of our dear old North Carolina mountain air, and we rejoice at the many indications it gives of prosperity and health. —Mrs. L. G. Crawford, Ocala, Fla.

....Rev. D. B. Nelson tells us that Mr. Vanderbilt is going to build the Baptists a church at Biltmore, and present it to them in return for an inferior one which occupies a lot that he desires.—Charity and Children.

....This statement—"Our Board and its Work,"—will make more intelligent givers, and I hope more liberal givers too. I can use it in my churches to good advantages. Send me twenty-five copies or more.—C. E. Gower.

....The Union Meeting of the South Yadkin Association is to be held in New Hope, Iredell county, on the 28th inst. As this is the first Union Meeting of the Association for over a year, it is earnestly desired that every pastor in the Association will be present.

....A. J. Diaz, our leading missionary in Cuba, was born in 1852, and is the oldest of twenty four children born to one mother, who was married at the age of twelve years, and is now in good health, and looks young and fresh.

....We regret to hear of the death of Rev. R. D. Harper at Castalia, N. C., June 26th. Bro. Harper was in the prime of life, and doing good work for the Master. An extended notice of his death will appear in our next issue.

....We regret to hear of the dangerous accident which befell Mr. A. E. Owen, Jr., son of Dr. Owen of Portsmouth, while in a cellar filled with gas, which was ignited by the lighting of a match. We hope the injuries will not prove serious.

....Rev. J. A. Howard, pastor of the Baptist church at Reidsville, has been given a vacation, and visit to relatives and friends in Georgia and elsewhere. Rev. Frank M. Royall, missionary-elect to China, will occupy his pulpit during his absence.

....Maj. W. W. Vass of this city has resigned his position as Treasurer of the Raleigh and Gaston Railroad, held by him for forty-eight years with honor and credit, and will hereafter confine his attention to the lighter duties of secretary of the road.

... Bro. W. S. Ballard will, within the next ninety days, complete and dedicate a church at Tillery's, on the Scotland Neck Railroad. The organization will consist of twenty-five or thirty members. They have a splendid Sunday-school, and the outlook for a strong church there is very good.

....Eight persons were baptized by Dr. N. B. Cobb at Pittsboro last Sunday, after which the hand of church fellowship was extended to these and one more, making nine additions to the Baptist church at that place. The fence around the church has been painted in addition to other improvements and repairs recently made.

....Rev. S. C. Tapp, formerly of this State, but recently a student of Chicago, is supplying the Baptist pulpit at Lancaster, Wis. He writes that the University of Chicago will close its doors during the middle of the summer on account of the fair.

....Rev. John E. White has resigned the pastorate of the Wilson church, and will supply at Edenton until October, when he enters the Louisville Seminary. Bro. White had become greatly beloved by his Wilson charge, and his resignation is very much regretted.

....Prof. Carlyle of Wake Forest College was in the city the 3d inst. The professor is doing as good work for the College in vacation as he does in school time. He left for Leadvale, Tenn., yesterday morning. The College cannot have two many workers of his stamp.

....A brother from Macon county writes: "Bro. H. H. Mashburn has been doing some good preaching for his home folks since his return from Wake Forest College. After listening to his sermon a few days ago, an old citizen remarked, 'It does my soul good to hear a young man advance a gospel so rich and so full.'"

....Rev. Hight C. Moore has resigned the pastorate of the Morehead City Baptist church, to take effect August 1st, 1893. At present we are not informed as to Brother Moore's intentions, but hope for him a good field within the State. Bro Moore is one of our brightest young ministers.

....Another excellent addition has been made to the School of Law at Wake Forest College, in the selection of Judge George V. Strong of this city to aid Judge Clark and Mr. Gulley. These three gentlemen well deserve a goodly number of students next year, as they are certainly as capable lawyers as this State affords.

....The tract—"Our Board and its Work,"—has been received. I like it very much, and am glad so much important information in regard to the work is put in so small a compass that our people can and will read it. I can make good use of it. Send me fifty copies.—W. C. Tyree.

....Bro. Durham will gladly send by express to any who may wish them for distribution, ten, fifteen or twenty copies of the minutes of the last Southern Baptist Convention. They cost nothing. The express can be paid at your own office on receipt of the minutes. These minutes are very valuable.

....Late information from Rev. M. E. Parrish, who was lately called to the pastorate of the Baptist church here for three months, is to the effect that he cannot reach this place before September, on account of other engagements. The church here, owing to the delay, has decided to call some one else.—Wadesboro Messenger and Intelligencer.

....Rev. A. A. Newhall, who lost his wife on June 26th, will continue to reside at Southern Pines, and would like to secure work as a minister at such points as he can easily reach by railroad. He is a scholarly Christian gentleman and a close expounder of the Scriptures. Any pastorless churches in that section would do well to secure his services.

....Through our Board of Missions the Baptist cause has been aided in its struggles at more than sixty of the county seats in this State. Wilmington, Edenton, Asheville, Fayetteville and Raleigh have been among the places aided. At all of these places our cause is now strong, and the brethren are liberal supporters of the State Mission work.

....The little tract, "Our Board and its Work" prepared by Bro. Durham is in my judgment a good thing and a move in the right direction. What all thinking Baptists need is information in a small compass about the working and methods of our denominational enterprises. Send one hundred copies to me at once for distribution among my people.—L. M. Curtis.

....I thank Bro. Durham for his tract about "Our Board and its Work." It shows that much labor and pains have been bestowed upon its preparation. It seems to me that it answers all the questions which can reasonably be asked about the workings of the Board, and the wonderful results of past labor are made so manifest that their publication ought to create a wave of new enthusiasm for State Missions.—C. E. Taylor.

....Dr. N. B. Cobb has now a regular monthly preaching appointment in the new Episcopal church at Southern Pines at 8 p. m. on fourth Sundays. By the dying request of the rector, Rev. Dr. Thorne, the first services in this church were conducted by Rev. A. A. Newhall at its opening on the third Sunday in June. It is the handsomest house of worship in Moore county, finished on the interior in the native woods of that section, and seated with comfortable opera chairs.

....Rev. Joseph Blount Cheshire, Jr., D. D., was elected assistant bishop of the diocese of North Carolina on June 28th. Dr. Cheshire was born in Tarboro May 20th, 1850, and was educated at Trinity College, Hartford, Conn. For the past twelve years he has been a resident of Charlotte as rector of the Episcopal church of that city. The Charlotte Observer speaks of him in the following terms: "Dr. Cheshire is of high Christian character—his genuine piety is known to all who know the man. He is a gentleman of scholarly attainments. He is a recognized authority upon the history of his own church and enjoys large familiarity with the whole range of literature. He has been for many years one of the most painstaking students of North Carolina history, and few if any of our people have as ample and as accurate knowledge of the early history of the State. He is a man of fine intellectual endowment, a deep thinker and an able preacher, and has force of character and administrative ability."

....The friends of Rev. Dr. H. M. Tupper of Shaw University will regret to learn that he is suffering with an affection of the limbs of so serious a character that the amputation of one of his feet was lately deemed necessary. He is at present at Cottage City.—Christian Inquirer. Dr. Tupper has done a great work in this State, and we deeply sympathize with him in this affliction, and hope that he may be spared to many years of usefulness.

....An evangelist called upon every man in the congregation who had paid his debts to stand up. They rose en masse. He added, "Sit down, and every man in this meeting who has not paid his debts, stand up." Only one man arose. He explained that he was "the editor of a religious paper," adding, "nearly every member of this congregation owes me for my paper." This caused a sensation. A good many paid up on the spot and others settled next day. Three got angry and demanded "stop my paper."—Western Recorder. We cannot vouch for the truth of the foregoing, but how often is it the case that subscribers forget that an unpaid subscription is an honest debt!

....On June 25th Rev. S. J. Porter of Orton, N. C., and Miss Kate Munn of Maysville, N. C., were united in marriage at Maysville, Rev. A. H. Porter officiating, and on July 1st the couple sailed for Rio, Brazil, their future missionary field. Bro. Porter is a recent graduate of Wake Forest, and is considered by his professors one of the most promising young men that ever attended the College. Miss Munn is a daughter of Maj. A. Munn of Maysville, N. C., and is well and favorably known in her community. We join their many friends in prayers and best wishes for their success and happiness in their distant home.

....A story has been extensively circulated that the body of a dead man was recently immersed at Eagle Cliff, Ga., and this act has been supposed to have been performed by a Baptist minister. The Christian Index being desirous to know the truth wrote to the postmaster at Eagle Cliff, and he makes this reply: "Yes, there was a dead man by the name of Massy, sprinkled by a Methodist minister near this place by the name of J. W. Drennon; but he did it to satisfy the request made by Massy to his wife before his death. He told his wife if he could not be baptized before his death, to have it done afterwards at the grave. Drennon did not want to administer baptism, but thought it would impress the people to attend the church and its commands while they were in health. So he sprinkled the corpse at the grave. This is about all I know in regard to the matter." That's enough. If some presiding elder or bishop does not rebuke such a fool as this Rev. Mr. Drennon the more's the pity.—Christian Inquirer.

The Ministers' Relief Board.

Dear Recorder:—I have seen nothing of late about the Ministers' Relief Board. Perhaps the hard times have not struck the old preachers. I yet think when a man wears himself out in serving his churches trying to make erring man better, both for his sojourn here and also for his welfare in the world to come, that he should feel that there was a sure competence for him for the balance of his days in this world.

I think many good preachers feel a delicacy in asking for this object; for fear some one will attribute to them a selfish motive, in that they some day would be pensioners, and were therefore building up a fund for themselves. Well, if we stop to kick every fice dog that barks at us as we go along through life, we would never accomplish much; so just do what you think is right regardless of what others say or think, and thus go forward, and if afterwards you find you are wrong, go back, as John Bunyan did, and start at the right place again, and go forward.

I yet think the orphan work deserves more funds than it gets.

Would it not be well to have quarterly reports in the RECORDER of the work of the Ministers' Relief Board?

Yours truly, D. L. GORE.

Wilmington, June 27, 1893.

Rev. J. P. Mason,

This beloved brother passed away on Saturday night last, June 24th, 1893, in the sixty-seventh year of his age. I conducted his funeral services yesterday afternoon in the presence of a large company of sympathizing friends and brethren.

Bro. Mason had been a patient sufferer for a long time. Some years ago he was sorely bereaved in the death of his two bright and lovely daughters, the last of his children. I am informed that from that time his health seemed to begin to give way, and he has been gradually declining ever since. His end was calm and peaceful, and he in the full possession of his faculties. His last words were, "I am going." We laid him away by the side of his children to rest until the resurrection trump shall sound.

Bro. Mason was a good man, and for many years an active and useful minister of Jesus Christ. His hold upon the affections of the people was attested by the large concourse attending his funeral. Although it was on Monday afternoon, and at a very busy time, his large house and yard were thronged by the sad and sorrowful company of his acquaintances and friends. Peace be to his ashes.

Sister Mason, the faithful and affectionate companion of his earthly pilgrimage, is indeed bereaved. When the last of her children was taken away, she had the strong arm and warm heart of her husband to lean upon. But now her last earthly prop is removed, and she is left alone in the home once made so bright and happy by the presence of her beloved family. How much does she need the tender sympathy and prayers of all her friends. J. L. CARROLL.

Chapel Hill, June 27, 1893.

The State Board and the Kickers.

I do not endorse all the methods of the Board. There are some things which might have been changed, but I am persuaded that the Board, which is composed of our best brethren, have acted according to their best judgment. If the critics were placed in the same circumstances, they would have done likewise—some, I know, much worse. I deplore some of the unkind things said by some brethren. And some things I have seen in certain papers are disgusting. I do not believe we have a better officer in the State than Bro. Durham. I do not agree with him in some things, but I shall give him my hearty support in his work. I should have little respect for the Secretary or Board if they pander to the demands of some cranky critics.

The cry raised in certain quarters of 'bossism' is a cry of "sour grapes." Some people who cry "bossism" are little aspirants for the same position. These unkind criticisms in our papers are harmful. Let the brethren wait till the Convention meets and appoint a committee of investigation if it is needed. Some of the recent discussions along certain lines have been unworthy of Christians. Let peace and love prevail.

Let every one read the recent tract, "Our Board and Its Work." It is an interesting and helpful tract, and is worthy of study. Let it be widely circulated.

Church Organized.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—In answer to a call from quite a number of brethren and sisters in the town of Haw River, representatives from Burlington, Graham, and Swepsonville churches assembled there (at Haw River) the 4th Sunday in June to consider the advisability of organizing a church in that town. These representatives organized by electing Dr. J. L. Carroll of Chapel Hill, as moderator, and the writer, as clerk.

After a statement of the reasons why a church should be organized, a motion was passed authorizing the presbytery composed of brethren J. L. Carroll, E. J. Edwards, Alvis Andrews, and the writer, to effect this organization.

Letters of dismission were received from Baptist churches for thirty three brethren and sisters. After these adopted the church Covenant, Declaration of Faith, Constitution, and Rules of Decorum, they were publicly recognized as Haw River Baptist church, and the right hand-of-fellowship was extended by Dr. Carroll.

Dr. Carroll preached a strong and appropriate sermon from 1 Tim. 3: 15. "The church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth."

In the afternoon, we re-assembled; and after a discourse showing the qualifications and duties of deacons, delivered by Dr. Carroll, brethren Geo. W. P. Pates and Charles Wynn were ordained to that office.

There is much to encourage us in our work at Haw River.

Allow me to say this—since I have been in Alamance county, I have understood, as never before, what the Savior meant when he said, "The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few." Between the Mt. Zion Association and the Liberty on the west, and the Beulah on the north, there is immense territory almost entirely destitute of Baptist preaching. Here is work for these three Associations to do. We are going to try to do our part. Fraternally,

JOHN C. HOCUTT.

Burlington, N. C., June 29, 1893.

Baptist Female University.

During the session of the Baptist State Convention at Greensboro, 1888, Col. L. L. Polk, then President of the Convention, offered the following resolution: "That a committee of nine, to wit: W. R. Gwaltney, R. R. Overby, T. H. Pritchard, J. D. Hufham, R. T. Vann, N. B. Broughton, R. H. Marsh, A. G. McManaway, H. W. Battle, be and are hereby appointed to consider the expediency and feasibility of establishing a Baptist Female University in this State.

Resolved, That said committee be and it is hereby authorized and empowered to ascertain the best available locality, and to make estimates as to the approximate cost of inaugurating such institution and report the same to the next annual session of this Convention."

On motion, Bro. Polk was added to the committee as chairman. At the next session of the Convention at Henderson the committee reported favoring the enterprise. After a very enthusiastic discussion of the work, on motion of Rev. C. Durham the number was increased to twenty-five whose duty it should be to select the location and otherwise arrange for the establishment of the institution. This committee (Trustees) was composed of brethren selected from the sea coast to the mountains. They at once put themselves in an attitude to receive propositions from different towns desiring it. Propositions were made, and after mature consideration and deliberation, Raleigh was unanimously chosen as the place for the institution. Raleigh's proposition was in ever instance accepted by the Trustees, and I am satisfied, after thorough investigation, that Raleigh will more than make good her proposition. But why has the work been delayed so long? The subscriptions of individuals were made payable by instalments extending through three years, to meet the payments on the property purchased by the Trustees. The last payment was not due until last January. Since then the last payment on the property has been made a morally certain thing, and there is nothing in the way of beginning the work on the main building first of October, and having the school to begin as early as September, 1894.

This school does not belong to Raleigh, but to the Baptist State Convention, to be managed by its Trustees to answer the demands of the Convention in the education of the women of the State. As a Baptist I am no more interested in a school for women in Raleigh than I am in any other city or town in the State. What this school is to be depends upon the individuals composing the Baptist State Convention. What do you say, brethren? It is both impracticable and unreasonable to postpone this much needed school until all the buildings are erected which may be necessary for use half a century hence, and an endowment of one or two hundred thousand dollars to begin with. Such a thing would be very desirable, but if we wait for that, it will not be begun in ten centuries. The history of Wake Forest College has many lessons for us along this line. The Baptist State Convention under God has achieved great success in its work at Wake Forest, and now with ten times the means within our reach, with the necessity of such a school as this so imperative, the good Lord will make a way for its accomplishment.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Many thanks to my many personal friends for their interest in me as a minister. Let me assure you that my work as Financial Secretary of the Baptist Female University, does not and shall not conflict with my most delightful work of telling the "wonderful story" of Jesus and his love. I am unworthy of the great honor I have of being the pastor of four country churches, which are in hearty sympathy with me and my work, and am ready and willing as ever to aid my brethren in protracted meetings where I may be needed most.

I enter upon this work as confident of success as the Lord's name will be glorified by the existence of such an institution. I most humbly ask every Baptist preacher in the State to write me freely. Any suggestion you may make relative to the Baptist Female University will be highly appreciated by your Executive Committee, and any question pertaining to the work will be most cheerfully answered.

Fraternally, O. L. STRINGFIELD.

Wakefield, N. C., June 26, 1893.

"Our Board and Its Work."

Dr. Durham has put into twenty pages, "Our Board and Its Work," just such facts as no Baptist in North Carolina can afford to be without. Clear-cut statements, and all needful facts, are brought under such heads as: "How the Board is Appointed," "State Missions Defined," "How Appropriations are Made in State Work," "Application and Commission Forms," "Quarterly Report Forms," "Tabulated and Comparative Lists of Contributions for sixty-three Years," "The Names and Fields of all the Missionaries now Employed in the State," &c. As a stranger in the denomination, these pages are inestimable to me. I can see every cog in the great master wheel of co operative Christian work. It is not made to crush anybody but the Devil and his works.

If the people will read this little document, it will bring the whole church into sympathetic touch with, and practical support of, our State Board of Missions and Sunday-schools.

The only trouble about this document is, that it is free. Every man ought to pay a dollar for it, then he would read it. I want fifty copies for Elizabeth City to start on.

CALVIN S. BLACKWELL.

I have received an admirable little tract, "Our Board and its Work," which should be carefully read by all the Baptists in the State. The object of this little "publication is to give information mainly about State Missions," and we have here much in little space.

I would call special attention to what is said on pages twelve and thirteen under the heading "Treasurer's Report."

God has greatly blessed our work in the past, and we should give the Board and our laborious and efficient Corresponding Secretary our confidence, sympathy, prayers, and hearty co operation.

G. W. HARMAN.

Letter from Missouri.

Do you care to read a begging letter? See if this be one.

More than eight years ago I located in St. Joseph. Rev. E. S. Dulin, D. D., LL. D., in his declining life, established what is now known as Patee Park Baptist church. When the church was young I went into the pulpit. At the first prayer-meeting I attended there were present six women and one man. It was on a bright April night.

The meeting-house was bought from the Methodist people. It was located on Twelfth and Renick streets. Renick street was composed of a railroad and an open sewer. We moved from that place as soon as possible. I preached in a hall a while.

In 1890 we built on Tenth street just east of Patee Parke square. The ground cost us $6,000. Our house is 90x56 feet and two stories high with a gallery. It is located amid a laboring population. It is about four blocks from the Union depot. Many railroad people are in the congregation. We have occupied the lecture room or basement since the fall of 1890.

We began the construction of the building in the palmy days of the Western boom. The boom left us with the building not finished and with a debt of between $10,000 and $11,000. We have slowly gone forward in getting the main room finished and in decreasing the debt. We owe $8,000. We have put in floors, gas, water, pool, stairways, plastering. I have baptized twenty people in the main room.

A gentleman, a former North Carolinian, proposed to pay $500 toward finishing the building. Believing firmly that he would be able to meet this obligation, we ordered pews. The pews cost at the factory $811. The freight will be about $100. The placing of them will make the bill about $1,000. Disappointed in my hopes, I have decided to call on my old friends in North Carolina to help me pay for these pews. This is my plan: To record the name of the donor on the end of a pew. That is if you pay fifteen dollars for a pew, I'll inscribe on that pew "Donated by ——" using your name. Or I'll put on the pew the name of any one you may choose, saying "Donated in memory of ——." This is for a church or an individual.

It would be impossible with words to tell how depressed have been financial affairs in Missouri river cities. Eighteen months ago when some of my leading supporters lost all their material wealth, I had my people to withdraw their salary contract with me. So I have worked eighteen months without a stated salary. In January I was offered a nice home and a good salary. I was strongly inclined to leave. I calculated in January how much I was sacrificing to stay. I was offered for that month $200 and an elegant home. Here I have no home given and my income from salary was not a $100. I believe in this work. There'll be better times. This church will be one of the mightiest in the West. We send out the gospel. Maggie Rice went from this church to Brazil. To California and throughout the West go our members. Before I had been here one year, 135 had joined this church. Four great Roman Catholic churches are close to this Patee Park Baptist church.

Do you want to invest money in this work. This church works with the Southern Baptist Convention although Eastern and Northern people are in it. Bro. Otto Beckelman sent to St. Joseph by the Atlanta Board is at home in this church. Stand by a fellow Tar Heel. I must have the money for these pews right away or be in trouble. They are finished. Last month I spent within six dollars of my salary on this work. Many factories have shut down this summer for awhile. The banks were failing and managers of big enterprises got scared. Many of my people are hard run for the necessaries of life. Did you ever help in the work of Christ in the great wicked West? Help now. Help me. Write to me and cheer me on my way. Your burdened brother,

N. B. PITTMAN.

St. Joseph, Missouri.

We invite attention to the advertisement in our columns of Littleton High School and Business Institute. The catalogue shows 96 in attendance. For climate, location, and healthfulness, it claims to be unexcelled. A good place for a young man to prepare himself for college or the practical duties of life.

We call attention to the advertisement of the Scotland Neck Military Academy, found in another column. It is a young school, only two years old, but it has grown in usefulness and patronage until it stands without a rival in eastern North Carolina. It is under the supervision of experienced teachers, who are thoroughly qualified to direct the thoughts of the boy or young man. A neatly gotten up catalogue will explain terms, and show character of school. No young man can make a mistake by entering this school.

The State Fair for 1893.

We have received from the Secretary, H. W. Ayer, a copy of the premium list for the State Fair of 1893. It is a more artistic publication than ever before, being embellished with handsome illustrations of North Carolina scenery, agricultural and fishing industries, &c. The list has been thoroughly revised, especially in the departments in which ladies are interested, and the premiums are very liberal. The usual star premium of fifty dollars in gold is offered for the best exhibit made by a lady resident of the State, with a second premium of twenty dollars. There is also a premium of fifty dollars for the best display of any kind in the Main Exhibit Building. Fruit growers and poultry fanciers, as well as others, will find the list for this year very interesting. Anybody can get copies by applying to H. W. Ayer, Raleigh, N. C. Everybody should have one.

The Pastor and the Inquirer.

One of the most vitally important parts of a pastor's work is his dealing with inquirers. A long essay might be written on this subject; but I must content myself with a few suggestions drawn from my own experience, and my observation of the methods of some sagacious physicians of sick or troubled souls. If there be any class in the congregation to whom a pastor's door should always "stand ajar," and who should always have a cordial welcome, it is that class who are seeking spiritual guidance. However busy you are, gladly lay aside your sermon or your books, and give attention to those with whom the Holy Spirit is striving. It is a good plan to have a fixed hour of some afternoon or evening in every week when you will be happy to see any one who may call for strictly religious conversation.

But there are times when the spirit of God is manifestly moving upon the hearts of your people, and you will require more frequent opportunities to get into contact with awakened souls. Shrewd old Dr. Lyman Beecher, who had great skill in conducting revival work, used to say that he never publicly appointed an inquiry meeting unless he knew that there would be one or more persons to attend it; but as soon as he discovered any inquirers, he arranged at once for such a meeting. The most commonly chosen time for such interviews is at the close of the services on the Sabbath or during the evenings of the week. The place for the interviews may be either in the lecture room or the pastor's study, or whatever other convenient place that may be most free from interruptions. The invitation to all seeking souls should be as cordial as possible. Many cases will come before a pastor that require more full and extended treatment than can be given during the brief time allotted to a meeting. The best way to reach these individual cases is to visit them at their residences, or to appoint an hour when they can call at your study. Some people are very shy about speaking of their inner heart-experiences before others, and must be seen, like Nicodemus, privately. Others have complications of difficulties and hindrances that require long and patient handling. One of the best men in my church crept along like a snail for many weeks, and wanted to have every stone removed out of his path. It is very important for a pastor to study human temperaments; and there are some persons of naturally slow and cautious temperament who will not be hurried even in securing their own salvation, push them as much as we may.

There is no place on earth where a minister of Jesus Christ should more fervently seek his Master's presence and the guidance of his Spirit than in a meeting of anxious inquirers. No rash, inexperienced person or fanatical rider of religious "hobbies" should be allowed to enter an inquiry-room. Some very well-meaning people are only successful in bungling. Surely we would not call in the first person who was passing our doors to prescribe for a case of dangerous sickness in our family; and it is no less hazardous to permit an inexperienced Christian to come in and apply his crude and unwise methods to one who is settling the most momentous of all questions. An earnest zeal and a copy of a limp backed Bible are not always a sufficient equipment for an inquiry-room. When there are but few to be conversed with the pastor had better conduct the conversations himself; if there are too many for him to reach, he may take in with him some discreet officers of his church, or certain men or women who are endowed with a large measure of grace and good common sense. While a vast amount of effective spiritual work has been accomplished in inquiry meetings, yet there are very many cases that require to be dealt with alone. It consumes time to see all such individuals (especially during a revival season) by themselves; but it is time well spent. A minister who should consume most of his week in conversing with awakened sinners or backsliding professors or troubled souls of any sort would not need to elaborate any discourse; he would be gathering materials for a powerful sermon as he went. We commonly do our best preaching during a revival, for we are in closer touch with the Holy Spirit.

When we are striving to lead an inquiring soul to the Saviour, we need to have a Bible in our hands, or a great deal of Bible "handy" in our memories. Frankness, fidelity, and tenderness of speech should be all combined in our talk with an anxious soul. The first thing is to find out, if possible, just what it is that is keeping that soul from Christ. Sometimes the inquirer may not himself suspect just what the hindrance is until he is probed. In some cases it is a besetting sin that has got a mastery of the heart. In other cases it is an evil habit, or a course of sinful practices, or secret sensualities, or dishonest methods in business, or something else that must go out before Jesus Christ will come in. Dr. Chas. G. Finney tells us that he once had a man on his knees beside him, and the man promised to surrender everything to God until it came to his "business." The man bolted at that test point, and said: "I can't give that to God, for I am a liquor-seller." The poor fellow refused to yield there and went away, like Felix, trembling but hardened. This case illustrates what I mean by ascertaining the hindrance that "stops the blessing." We must convince all sincere inquirers that they must surrender their favorite sin or sins, even if it be like plucking out a right eye or lopping off a right arm. Commonly the chief hindrance lies in a wicked, stubborn heart. It has always been a task hard to convince the awakened person that unless he or she was willing to give up all to Jesus, and to "do the will" of God, there was no hope for them. We must lead souls to Christ. In doing this there may be instances in which physicians, and it may be [illegible] sharp sorrow or keen [illegible] a means of grace; the person begins by getting provoked at us, and ends with getting angry with himself. If the Holy Spirit is pushing that soul, we must co operate with the Spirit and work on the same lines. That Spirit always leads toward repentance of sin, abandonment of it, and a full surrender of the soul to the Saviour.

As Jesus Christ is the terminal point toward whom we must lead every inquirer, so the Bible is the best guide. The case of the Philippian jailer, the healing of blind Bartimeus, the conversation of Christ with Nicodemus, are very helpful in directing the seekers after salvation. Each pastor must choose for himself the weapons out of God's armory. The truth that is best adapted to the case of A may not be exactly what B or C or D may require. This emphasizes the necessity of dealing with each individual by himself or herself. We may preach to a multitude; but souls are saved or lost one by one. Hand picked apples keep the longest. The Book of the Acts of the Apostles is largely the narrative of apostolic labors with individual souls. One immortal soul is always a tremendous audience.

During my early ministry I obtained much help from a constant study of that extraordinary book, Dr. Ichabod S. Spencer's "Pastor's Sketches; or, Conversations with Anxious Inquirers." He had a Shakespearean insight into the human heart, and his narratives are both thrilling in interest and amazingly helpful in showing pastors how to co operate with the Divine Spirit. If the book is out of print, it ought to be reprinted for the use of young ministers. I found it second only to John Bunyan's "Pilgrim" in throwing heavenly light upon the pathway of salvation. Valuable as this or any other volume may be, every pastor must himself inquire for the Holy Spirit's guidance and aid before he can lead any inquirers to Jesus Christ.—Rev. T. L Cuyler, D. D., in The Homiletic Review.

Divine Communion.

There is no possible way of finding comfort amid the providences that come to us in life but in an intimate and habitual communion with God. Much as we may desire to avoid providences, often of an afflictive and disciplinary character, our Heavenly Father sees it wise to administer his government over us in a manner that often hides his love to our human thought. Doubtless, in this way, he would keep us from pride and vanity, impress upon us our absolute dependence upon his guidance, instil a deeper religious conviction in our minds, perfect more fully our ideals of a true life, and clarify our vision of spiritual things. But, theorizing thus, as we often do, how few accept his way with unruffled composure, rejoicing that we are in his hands! Such blessed rest in God comes to us only through one well trodden path—the path of holy prayer We do not mean an approach to the mercy seat merely at stated times and in formal utterances, but a constant drawing near to him in the silent depths of devotion, in the soul's unuttered supplications, in the hourly spiritual contact of the human with the divine heart. But this power to pause amid conflicting uncertainties, and let God give light upon the path in his own good time, is not the product of human philosophy. This ability to wait until he shall solve the problem belongs only to souls that are constantly closeted in his presence. Helping him to decide difficult questions is one of his ways of "rewarding them openly."

And who will say that this is not a rich reward for obeying our Lord's command, "Enter into thy closet?" Can anything surpass such comfort as is found here? Toiling, weary pilgrim, wherever thou art found, enter into the inclosure of prayer, and abide very near to him who "seeth in secret." O what safety is here!—New York Advocate.

For Headache and Indigestion,
Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

A prominent physician of Buffalo, N. Y., says of it: "I have severe headaches, and it relieves them. I am fond of the pleasures of the table, and as a consequence of my indulgence there, I have to pay the penalty. It divides penalty with me. Indeed, it is an indispensable article to me."

Praying for More Faith.

I hear men praying everywhere for more faith, but when I listen to them carefully and get at the real heart of their prayer, very often it is not more faith at all that they are wanting, but a change from faith to sight.

"What shall I do with this sorrow that God has sent me?"

"Take it up and bear it, and get strength and blessing out of it."

"Ah, if I only knew what blessing there was in it, if I saw how it would help me, then I could bear it."

"What shall I do with this hard, hateful duty which Christ has laid right in my way?"

"Do it, and grow by doing it."

"Ah, yes, if I could only see that it would make me grow."

In both these cases do you not see that what you are begging for is not more faith, although you think it is, but sight?

You want to see for yourself the blessing in the sorrow, the strength in the hard and hateful task.

Faith says not, "I see that it is good for me, and so God must have sent it," but, "God sent it, and so it must be good for me." Faith walking in the dark with God only prays him to clasp its hand more closely, does not even ask him for the lighting of the darkness, so that the man may find the way himself.—Phillips Brooks.

John Y. MacRae, druggist, Raleigh, N. C., will tell you that Johnson's Magnetic Oil always gives satisfaction and is the cheapest.

Loss of Interest.

The preacher who runs around the streets until Saturday, and then turns to refurbish some of his old exhortations for Sunday morning; the Sunday-school teacher who is irregularly with his class, and often unprepared when he is with them; the Christian hand which fumbles in the pocket for some accidental coin to drop into the Lord's treasury; every Christian, indeed, whose activities are superficial and unmeaning—all these will suffer loss, the loss of interest in all Christian work and duty. More and more they will come to despise that which they have slighted. That is the reason why every church has in it so many who have no interest whatever in any part of Christian duty.

Their hearts say now: "It is unworthy my attention." But it is their own unfaithfulness which has made it unworthy. Their slighting of it has minimized it before the eyes of their soul. Attenuating it to a careless formality, it has grown more and more tenuous, until now it has no body with which to impinge upon their vision.—Rev. S. S. Mitchell, D. D., in The Watchman.

Making Relatives Friends.

Even in families joined by the closest ties of blood hearts may be alienated or grow cold. The little feet that have kept step with each other often take widely diverging paths in life. Jealousy separates brothers and sisters who have knelt at the same mother's knee. A conscientious and habitual effort to be useful to each other, and to share lovingly each other's joys and sorrows, may forestall estrangement and knit more closely the family bond. The simplest means for this purpose should not be despised. A garment made by a sister's hand for the brother's new baby, joy promptly expressed for the success of a sister's boy at school, an invitation to meet an agreeable stranger, or to join a choice gathering of friends, may give pleasure and show the sincere wish to keep old ties unbroken. Frequent letters during times of necessary separation can keep hearts far separated by space very close together; this often costs real self-sacrifice, but it should be perseveringly and conscientiously done if you would not have your distant brothers and sisters and their families becoming to you as indifferent strangers.—Sarah J. Baker.

You must choose whom you will serve. You cannot serve God and mammon; you cannot be a friend of Christ and a friend of the world at the same time. The way is narrow and rough, and there is no use saying it is not; but depend upon it, there can be no saving religion without sacrifice and self denial.—Kyle.

STUDY TOPICS.—Knowledge of the missionaries. Encountered difficulties. Past results. Future prospects. The Centennial, a pivotal era in missions. Chapel building.

The Southern Baptist Convention at its late session in Nashville, Tenn., extended the time of the Centennial of Missions until the close of this year. The Centennial Record Book will also be kept open until that time. It is hoped that renewed efforts will be made for this work, and the Woman's Central Committee of Missions will gladly supply Centennial Missionary Literature, Centennial Chapel Cards, Centennial Day Programs, and Centennial Certificates, free. All who are already entitled to Centennial Certificates can obtain them at once on application. If after application the Certificates are not received within a reasonable time, please renew your application, as some loss may have occurred in the mails. Address Miss Fannie E. Heck, Pres. Woman's Central Committee of Missions, Raleigh, N. C.

Recommendations of Foreign Board, S. B. C.

The following recommendations were presented to Woman's Missionary Union assembled at Nashville, May 12th, and adopted by that body:—

1. That Woman's Mission Societies aim to raise the sum required to support our women missionaries in foreign lands.

2. That the object of next Christmas Offering be the work in Japan.

3. That Woman's Missionary Union (seeking from the S. S. Board in Nashville their co-operation, which, we understand, will be cheerfully given) aim to introduce the observance of "Missionary Day" in all our Sunday-schools, prepare programs, attend to the distribution, and do all else that is possible to make the occasion a success.

RICHMOND, VA., May 3, 1893.

Miss Annie W. Armstrong, Cor. Sec., Baltimore, Md.:

DEAR MISS ARMSTRONG:—In presenting to the Baptist women of the South the recommendations which have been sent to you, the Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention take the occasion to thank our Southern sisterhood for the very efficient aid that they have given to the foreign work of the Convention. The sum of money that they have contributed is large. But, even greater than that, is the wide spread influence of the literature disseminated, the meetings held, and the many examples of self denying endeavor, over the churches and homes of our Southland.

It is recommended for the year ensuing that special attention be directed to the children. This is the foundation of all permanent work for the future. As much as the present generation may do, to give the gospel to mankind, it will be increased many fold if the seed of missionary truth be wisely lodged in the mind and heart of the little one. The S. S. Board of the Convention is raised up, just at the time its agency is most needed for this important department of Christian enterprise.

The recommendation that Japan—worked for last Christmas—shall be the object for the next "Christmas Offerings," will be pleasing to the ladies the Board feel assured—there is something wonderfully interesting and fascinating in that country, whether viewed physically, politically, socially or religiously. All that is needed is information, to excite the deepest sympathy with this "people of the rising sun." Our force there, brothers and sisters McCollum and Waine, is so small that we would be painfully concerned were it not that Providence is smiling upon their labors, and there will be this year increased interest awakened among our people. (Note.—The Christmas Offering of last year, as reported by Central Committees, amounted to $5,068 82. A. W. A., Sec. W. M. U.)

The support of all our women missionaries is commended again to your consideration, because the work is a grand and inspiring one, and the Board is sure that it will be accomplished in the near future.

It is needless for the Board to say anything in praise of the executive department of the Woman's Missionary Union located in Baltimore. The planning of their heads and the performances of their hands, with the consecration of their spirits, as read between the lines of their incessant toils, are one of the most healthful stimulants to the Lord's workers of the Convention, and do not escape the eyes of him who seeth in secret and rewardeth openly.

In behalf of the Foreign Mission Board, I am, ladies, yours very truly,

H. A. TUPPER, Cor. Sec.

The Birth of Missions.

"One hundred years ago modern missions may be said to have hardly had birth. Here and there, both in Europe and America, the Spirit of God had been moving upon the hearts of individuals.

The modern missionary movement may be said to have been born when Carey, in May, 1792, at the Baptist Association at Nottingham preached his famous sermon from Isaiah 54: 2, 3. The fire kindled in the hearts of Carey and his co-workers spread until not only the Baptists, but all other denominations, were first warmed, then set on fire. But for a time it was not so. Individuals, church councils and Parliament itself sought to cast contempt upon the movement."

The Foreign Mission Board—What is It?

"It is simply a committee of twenty-one brethren, to whom the Southern Baptists, through their delegates assembled in Convention, commit the care and direction of their foreign mission work. These twenty-one form the 'Board of Managers' and have the real direction of the work.

The Board of Managers, all of whom reside in Richmond, Virginia, for convenience, are all busy men, college professors, pastors, lawyers, business men; together with two secretaries, who give their whole time to the work. These two secretaries receive full salaries, and with the treasurer, who receives only a small sum, are the only members of the Board who receive any pay for their services. Perhaps the denomination little realize how much it owes to the busy men who compose this Board, who lay down their own work time and again to obey the call of the Secretary to come together to think, talk, pray and work for the interest which has been committed to their hands and hearts."

A Strong Endorsement.

The St. Louis Trade Review and Export Journal in its issue of February 7th, 1893, has this to say:

EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.

One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B. Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Carolina, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1858. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches, and carry in stock a fine line of stationery, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, postal circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

Ordination.

On Sunday morning, June 25th, 1893, at Pleasant Grove church, Bro. L. A. Loyd was ordained to the full work of the ministry. The presbytery consisted of Revs. G. M. Duke, J. A. Bridges and pastor, A. A. Pippin.

Rev. G. M. Duke examined Bro. Loyd searchingly on his christian experience, call to the ministry, and the teachings and doctrines of the Bible. Bro. Duke read the Scriptures and preached the ordination sermon. Then the presbytery laid on hands, and the pastor made the ordaining prayer. After the prayer, Bro. Bridges delivered the charge and presented the Bible.

Bro. Duke preached a very impressive sermon from 1 Timothy 4: 16.

Bro. Loyd seems to have the confidence of his entire community. The benediction was pronounced by Bro. Duke.

A. A. PIPPIN.

Mount Zion Union.

The next session of the Mount Zion Union will convene with the Baptist church at Graham, N. C., on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July, 1893, at 10 o'clock.

At eight o'clock, Bro. A. A. Butler is requested to preach, with Bro. J. W. Watson as alternate.

SUBJECTS FOR DISCUSSION.

1. Is it practicable for country churches to have parsonages for their pastors? if so, how best secured? (continued from last Union); Bro. C. W. Blanchard leading.

2. The relation of education to religion; Bro. W. C. Tyree leading.

3. Is our present system of missionary work according to the New Testament teaching? Dr. J. L. Carroll leading.

4. Our Associational Mission work; Bro. J. C. Hocutt leading.

In order to comply with the resolution previously adopted, the brethren, and pastors especially, are requested to take up collections for Associational Missions to pay the quarterly dues of the brethren laboring as missionaries.

J. F. MACDUFFIE, Chairman.

South Fork S. S. Association.

The South Fork Sunday-school Association will hold its fourth annual session with the Baptist church in Maiden, N. C., July 28th, 29th and 30th. Introductory sermon by Rev. C. M. Murchison.

QUERIES.

1. What relation does the pastor sustain to the school. Speakers—Rev. C. E. Gower, Rev. W. J. Wyatt, A. W. Setzar and J. F. Click.

2. What is the necessary qualification of a Sunday-school Superintendent. Speakers—Rev. J. F. Morris, Rev. J. G. Blalock, A. B. Erwin and J. T. McLean.

3. Has the interest in our Sunday-school work increased by the organization of our Association. Speakers—W. A. Graham, J. S. Bridges, D. A. Whisnant and Rev. J. A. Kennedy.

4. What is the greatest hinderance to our Sunday-school work. Speakers—Rev. D. P. Bridges, E. S. Whisnant and D. K. Bennett.

5. Origin of Sunday-schools in America and by whom. Speakers—Rev. M. P. Matheny, Rev. D. W. Thomason and Rev. C. E. Woodruff.

6. What is the leading object of the school. Speakers—C. H. Harris, G. M. Shives, D. H. Ramsaur and A. J. Cook.

Other interesting subject will be discussed. Let every Sunday-school send a good delegation.

J. A. HOYLE,
Committee on Programme.

Central Association.

Union Meetings will be held Saturday and Sunday, July 29th and 30th, with Wake Union and Mount Vernon churches.

Introductory sermon at Wake Union by Rev. W. R. Gwaltney; at Mount Vernon by Rev. W. B. Royall.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION.

1. What is the duty of a church towards its members who do not believe in and give to the support of Missions? To lead in the discussion at Wake Union, Bro. A. B. Wester; at Mount Vernon, Rev. J. H. Hutchinson.

2. Ought there to be a special work assigned each church member? To lead in the discussion at Wake Union, Bro. S. F. Allen; at Mount Vernon, Bro. D. F. Lawrence.

3. How can church members who are unable to attend the Sunday-school regularly, best encourage and promote the work? To lead the discussion at Wake Union, Bro. N. Y. Gulley; at Mount Vernon, Bro. J. B. Carlyle.

4. Whose duty is it to become teachers and workers in the Sunday-school, and how should the officers be selected? To lead in the discussion at Wake Union, Bro. P. W. Johnson; at Mount Vernon, Bro. C. E. Brewer.

The Baptist Cause in Southport.

Dear Recorder:—I am so encouraged by the news received in the RECORDER from the different fields, that I sometimes think that your numerous readers believe there is no destitution in the State that is without a ministry of the gospel of Christ. As said above, I hear from the different parts of the field of the work that Christ's servants are doing, even though Southport and Brunswick county seem to have good news to report. [illegible] without a pastor [illegible] months, and now we have no prospects of ever having another. Our membership is scattered. We have on our church-roll seventy-four. Of these, twenty-three should ask for letters and unite with the churches near them, which only leaves us a membership of fifty-one, of which some are in need of discipline.

Our lot is truly hard here. Bro. W. W. Ruark is our Sunday-school superintendent, and a godly man he is—always ready and willing to make any sacrifice for the upbuilding of Christ's work here. Our church is not united, and we are getting spiritually further apart and from God our Father.

It would be a great pleasure for me to give the Baptist host a cheering account of this naturally beautiful place, for which God has done so much and man so little. Other denominations are building up and taking the town. Our Methodist brethren finished a new church but a few years ago, and their membership now is sufficient for two buildings; but they, like we, have not enough charity; hence, at this time, if we would only wake up, while everybody is spiritually cold, and warm them up with the gospel truth, we might save our church from rotting and rear our boys and girls as we are commanded. But enough.

Your editorials and letters from pastors give me encouragement that, perhaps, the great work which the army of the Lord is doing in the interior of our State will one day reach Southport; and may God hasten the day. Yours in Christ,

D. I. WATSON.

Rev. R. T. Bryan's Departure from China.

Dear Recorder:—Last Saturday (May 27), Bro. R. T. B[illegible]y[illegible]n and family took their departure for North Carolina. We miss them severely. We expected we would, but knowing the circumstances, we did not have the heart to stay "Don't go" a single time. The entire family need the change, and the workers need rest. Do your part in seeing that they get it till the summer is passed at least.

The last Sunday Bro. Bryan worshipped with us, we had the pleasure of witnessing him baptize four women. One brother from the Chinkiang church was received by letter at the same time. In my last letter, I wrote you that I was expecting to baptize a man the following Sunday. Before the time came, another man was received, and I had the pleasure of baptizing the two. If I may be pardoned for counting, I will say that thus far this year we have baptized seven into the fellowship of our church. We thank the Lord for these, and pray that others who have been saved may be added to our number. Yours fraternally,

E. F. TATUM.

No Doctor or Medicine.

FOR TWO YEARS A FAMILY OF TEN PEOPLE HAVE SAVED THIS EXPENSE BY USING THE ELECTROPOISE.

Dear Sir:—I have had an Electropoise in use in my family, of ten persons, for two years. I have not had a doctor in that time or used any medicine, and would not be without the Poise, for I use it for every thing, from being tired as a housekeeper to any sickness we have had. My husband was restored to health in three months' treatment, although he could not be induced to use it until he was so reduced in strength, it was his last hope. He had had several attacks of La Grippe, and besides being so weak, the least exercise would cause the limbs to swell to twice the natural size. Three months' use of the instrument cured him, and he has not had any swelling or pain in his limbs since.

I treated my little boy, twelve years old, with best results, when I felt sure he would have Pneumonia. I think his general health is even better than before for he was not a strong child. I cured "poison oak" eruption just with the Poise by plain directions. My cook had had Rheumatism in her arms, from a child, sometimes could not grasp anything with her hands, not even knit. I treated her with the plain directions, and she is so much benefited she thinks it the greatest thing in the world, would not leave me, though she has been offered double the wages I pay. My oldest son came home last winter, after being at work for three years. The doctors said his liver was torpid and would swell up. I treated as you directed for three months. He is now in perfect health, and says he don't expect to take any more medicine. After the good it has done in our family, no one can wonder at our being so loud in the praise of the Electropoise. Yours respectfully,

MRS. JOHN B. SMITH.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Raleigh Affairs.

Mrs. A. W. Fraps of this city, committed suicide at her home last Thursday morning, by severing the jugular vein with a razor. She had been in poor health for months and for sometime her mind had been considerably affected.

A very unfortunate affair occurred here on a playground Tuesday evening of last week. Two young boys, Percy Whitaker, and Alex. B. Stronach, Jr., members of well known families, quarrelled and fought. Whitaker was stabbed with a pocket knife in four places. His injuries are serious, but his condition is reported favorable.

Maj. Jno. C. Winder for many years connected with the Raleigh and Gaston railroad, and who in recent years has been the General Manager of the Seaboard Air Line System, was at the late meeting of the directors, elected Vice-President of the Company, and will also continue as General Manager.

State News.

Mr. Wesley Atwater of Orange county was recently kicked to death by a pair of mules.

Mr. Robt. Greene, Sr., of Greenville, died recently of lock jaw caused by sticking a nail in his foot.

Dr. W. A. Graham of Charlotte, has been appointed assistant physician at the Seaside hospital, Staten Island, N. Y.

The seven-year-old son of Mr. John Jones of Gulledge's township, Anson county, was instantly killed by lightning last Wednesday week.

Evans' Chapel, a church for colored people at Fayetteville, was destroyed by fire Monday week. Origin unknown. Insurance $3,000.

Ed. Arnet, a mill operative at Hope Mills, Cumberland county, committed suicide, Monday of last week, by shooting himself with a pistol.

Maj. Wm. M. Robbins of Statesville, has been offered, and has declined the Consulship to Dundee, Scotland. The position pays about $4,000.

Malignant typhoid fever has become an epidemic in the Core Creek neighborhood. Recently several cases have resulted fatally. —Newbern Journal.

The large planing mills and dry-kilns of Leavit and Leavit at Aberdeen, were destroyed by fire on the 23d ult. Loss about $20,000; insurance $12,000.

A Newbern firm shipped in one day recently five car loads of cucumbers. The vines from which they were gathered were picked clean three days before.

Maj. W. W. McDowell, one of the most prominent citizens of Western North Carolina, died at his home in Buncombe county on the 23d ult., aged seventy years.

Mrs. T. R. Magill of Charlotte, was found dead in a well at her home in that city last Friday. It is supposed she went to the well for a drink of water and accidentally fell in.

At Goose Creek, Pamlico county, some days ago, Geo. Green, a white farmer, quarreled with his wife and it is said threatened to kill her. That night she died, though she had not been reported sick before. Her husband refused to let any of the neighbors dress the corpse or even look at the face of the deceased. He attended to those matters himself and arranged for the burial. When the coroner heard of the proceedings he had the remains disinterred and held an inquest. It was found that there were bruises on her throat, face and back part of her head. The verdict of the jury was that the deceased came to her death at the hands of her husband and a posse started to Green's house to arrest him. When they arrived they found his dead body. He had blown his brains out with a shot gun.

W. R. Pool, a former well-to-do farmer of Clayton, is in jail at Smithfield, charged with conspiring with a negro to burn the town of Clayton. Sometime ago Pool was recommended by Hon. B. H. Bunn, for the office of postmaster of Clayton after he had received the endorsement of many of the best citizens of the town. Some weeks after he had been recommended for postmaster, it is said that he became very cruel to his wife. The good people of the town (most of whom had signed the recommendation of Pool) became so indignant at his treatment of his wife, that they wrote to Mr. Bunn to have Pool's recommendation for postmaster cancelled and another party recommended in his stead. This highly incensed Pool, who conspired with a negro to burn the town, in order that he might be revenged.

Mr. Chas. H. Conrad of Danville, Va., fell from a train near Amelia Court House, Va., on the night of June 22d, and was killed. Mr. Conrad was a son-in-law of Col. T. B. Keogh of Greensboro, N. C.

The Fayetteville Light Infantry it seems, is no longer a part of the State Guard. The Inspector General has issued the following order: "The Fayetteville Light Infantry having failed to parade for annual inspection by the Inspector General, as required by law, is on recommendation dropped from the State Guard. Its annual appropriation is forfeited, and all property owned by it is to be turned over to the Quarter Master General."

General News.

In the case of Miss Julia Force of Atlanta, who was tried for the killing of her two sisters, the jury returned a verdict of not guilty, Miss Force having been adjudged insane. She has been sent to the State Insane Asylum.

On Friday, June 30th, President Cleveland issued his proclamation calling upon both houses of the Congress of the United States to convene at the Capitol in the city of Washington on the 7th day of August next.

DIED.

BRANHAM—J. H. Branham, a member and deacon of Benson Baptist church, died in Benson on May 30th, 1893, of consumption, aged thirty-two years, seven months and ten days. Cut down in the prime of life, truly a good man has fallen. He leaves a wife and two small children, and a host of friends, to mourn their loss. His family, his church, and his town will greatly miss him. May God be with us all.

J. M. HOLLEMAN, Pastor.

MOORE—Mrs S. A. Moore, wife of R. R. Moore of Greensboro, died June 19th, 1893 at 3:30 p. m. A noble woman is gone—a keeper at home; opposed to woman suffrage; a lover of Jesus. Her admonitions to preachers were to preach the gospel of Christ, not the law. She was liberal to the poor, and a helper to all sufferers of all races and people. She was a great reader to the last of the BIBLICAL RECORDER, Sabbath-school and mission papers; a Bible student and a believer in the truth of the Bible. She was buried at Siler City, Chatham county, N. C. R. R. MOORE.

JONES—Thorney F. Jones, son of Andrew D. Jones of Wake county, N. C., died in Eufala, Alabama, on Sunday, June 25th, 1893, aged twenty two years. He had only been in that State two weeks. He was a consistent member of the Baptist church at Piny Grove, Wake county, N. C., but carried a letter of dismission with him when he left the State. His remains were sent home and buried by the side of his deceased mother, who died several years ago. He leaves a father, stepmother, brothers and sisters, to mourn their loss. His funeral was preached on Tuesday by the writer. J. M. HOLLEMAN.

NEWHALL—Mrs. Marie M. Newhall, wife of Rev. A. A. Newhall, returned missionary from Central India, departed this life June 26, 1893, aged fifty years and one month. Mrs. Newhall was a native of Germany, and a formal member of the Lutheran (State) church. She was brought to an experimental knowledge of Christ by the study of the Scriptures at the age of sixteen. Much of her early life was spent as a governess. She taught German, music and other studies in Red Hill, Brighton and London, England. Her health failing in England, she sought relief from bronchial asthma by a residence in Southern France. While there she met, in the city of Nice, Rev. A. A. Newhall on his way from India to America, and after frequent religious conversations with him on the teachings of the Scriptures, decided to sever her connection with the Lutheran church and embrace the first opportunity to unite with the Baptists. She was baptized into the fellowship of the Baptist church in Westphalia on her return to Germany. A few months after her baptism, through the influence of friends in Europe and America, she was appointed a missionary to Madras, India. After two years' experience as a missionary among the Telugus, she was married to Rev. A. A. Newhall Sept. 22d, 1883, and continued her work with him as a missionary (under the Foreign Missionary Union, located in Boston,) for seven years in Hanamaconda, Central India. Failing health compelled her to seek restoration in a more favorable climate. She returned with her husband to America three years ago. After trying various health resorts in Europe and America, they finally located at Southern Pines in Moore county, N. C., where her bronchial trouble was much relieved, and for some months she had hopes of recovery; but other diseases intervened and she died of strangulated hernia. Hers was the first interment in the new Southern Pines cemetery, which is beautifully located on a high ridge about one mile south of Southern Pines. The funeral services were conducted by the writer. She leaves but one child, a lad of eight years, born in India, who will remain with his father.

N. B. COBB.

BRITT—Departed this life about 11 o'clock, Saturday night, June 17th, 1893, Bro. Moses Britt, Sr., of Falling Creek Baptist church, Wayne county, N. C.

Bro. Britt was born Sept. 29th, 1824, and was therefore nearly sixty-nine years of age when he died. He was baptized into the fellowship of Falling Creek church by Rev. A. B. Alderman about the date of 1850 or '57; and from that date to his death the claims of his church and Redeemer were, in his estimation, paramount to all others.

Bro. Britt was, in some respects, a remarkable man. He began life with nothing but such blessings as are common to all men. By industry and economy he acquired a good competency. He never enjoyed the advantages of school training, yet in such high estimation did he hold the cultured intellect that he gave all his children a liberal education, having sent three of them to Wake Forest College.

He was a model husband and father, kind, affectionate, and considerate of the welfare and comfort of others rather than of himself. In all the relations of life, he acted well his part, and has left behind him an example worthy the emulation of his survivors.

After his funeral sermon—preached by the writer—he was buried in the family cemetery in the presence of a large assemblage of his fellow citizens on Monday evening, June 19th, 1893.

I said he was, in some respects, a remarkable man. Having known him for many years, I know whereof I speak.

1. He was a man of great patience under affliction. He was a great sufferer for the last fifteen or twenty years of his life.

2. He was the unwavering friend and helper of his pastor. Several years ago, during a season of great bodily affliction whose protracted severity kept the writer away from his churches for several months, Bro. Britt, keenly alive to the welfare of his pastor, forwarded to him a liberal sum of money, with his sympathy and prayers. This was in addition to his part of the pastor's salary.

3. The constancy of his devotion to his church was remarkable. Over thirty years ago I was first his pastor. True, I have not borne this relation to him during all the years that have passed away since then, but my pastorate with his church embraces several years, and I cannot now recall a single church meeting during my entire pastorate at which he was absent. The only time during his life that I ever preached to his church without preaching to him was the day on which he died.

(It is proper to add here that the present pastor of the church is Bro. G. L. Finch, who got me to relieve him while he could go away for a season in quest of health.)

RAIFORD—Mr. R. B. Raiford, son of W. P. Raiford, was born near Princeton, Johnston county, N. C., Sept. 16th, 1857, and died at his home in aforesaid county, June 14th, 1893, aged nearly thirty-six years.

Bro. Raiford professed hope in Christ while a student at Prof. T. L. Troy's school in Princeton, N. C., and gave his membership to the Methodist church. This revival among the students spread to many outside the school, and many souls were happily converted to God. Bro. Raiford's conversion gladdened the hearts of his parents and others who had been long praying for him. He was a bright convert, and immediately started out on a line of usefulness. Soon many of his brethren were willing to look up to him for counsel and Christian example. He was superintendent of the Sunday-school and steward of his church, and used both offices well. He continued faithful to the trusts reposed in him by his church (the Methodist) until about the last of September, 1889, when he made application for membership in the little Missionary Baptist church at Princeton, and followed his conviction into the water. He was baptized by the writer on the fourth Sunday afternoon in October, 1889. Not many days after he was elected and ordained deacon, which office he filled to the satisfaction of all so long as his health would permit him to discharge its duties. He was the second addition to our little church after its organization, and is the second to go from us by death to the church in heaven. He was sorely afflicted with cancer during the last two years of his life, and was nearly all the while undergoing severe and expensive operations in the hope of relief, but all to no profit. He bore up undef and through all with wonderful patience and Christian fortitude. The word of the Lord was precious to him to the last moment of life, and sometimes during the lonely hours of the night he would wake his companion and say, "My dear, I am so happy! The Lord has been and is still so precious to me that I feel it would be delightful to rise and shout his praise aloud!" All this, and more, as the result of meditating upon the precious promises of "our Father." He has been taken from us while young, but not before his life had been finished. "Every life is a finished life," so some one else has put it, and we are inclined to believe it. Some short lives grow long when measured by good deeds, and some long lives become short when measured by the good they have done in this world.

He leaves a widow, seven children, a brother and some sisters, several distant relatives, and a large circle of friends to mourn his absence from earth. We sorrow in hope of reunion "over there."

Tributes of Respect.

We, the members of Elam Baptist Sunday-school, desire to pay a tribute of respect to the memory of Sammie T. Wheeler, who died at the home of his parents, R. T. and C. V. Wheeler, near Garysburg, N. C., April 24th, 1893, aged nine years.

Resolved 1. That we bow in humble submission to the divine will, feeling that our loss is his gain.

2. That our school has lost a bright, attentive and regular attendant, and the parents an affectionate son.

3. That we extend to the loved ones our warmest sympathy in their sad bereavement.

"A bud of beauty nipt by death!
O, no! but upward borne
Where no rude wind or poisoned breath
Can blast a flower of paradise;
Though earth may boast one gem the less
May not e'en heaven the richer be."

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication, and a copy be spread on the record of this school.

Dear Brethren:—I am now confined at home with erysipelas in my foot and leg; therefore I am hindered at present from colportage work. I desire to thank the brethren for their kindness, and especially the pastors.

I also note with pleasure the signs of improvement in some of our churches, especially White Oak, under the care of Rev. J. L. Stuart, and Piny Grove, under the care of Rev. R. Honeycutt.

The Lord willing, I hope to be out again in time to visit all the churches by the meeting of the Association. S. C. PAGE.

The Bells of Liberty.

Ring out, O bells of liberty!
Ring out with joy and mirth,
And send the rapture of your chimes
Around the listening earth;
Ring loud and clear that all may hear—
The fettered and the free—
The voice of liberty.

Ring out, O bells! ring once again,
A purer, holier chime,
And send the echoes of your strain
Far up the hills of Time:
Ring, ring with clear, prophetic voice
The bliss that yet shall be,—
Say to the earth, "Rejoice, rejoice!
For love is liberty!"

Ring tuneful bells, ring sweet and clear
A hymn of prayer and praise
That God will guide us year by year
Through His appointed ways.
Ring, ring harmonious to His will,—
For only those are free
Who in the love of God fulfil
His law of liberty.

—Ida Whipple Benham, in Youth's Companion.

A Lucky Blow.

Here is a story that proves the old saying that "truth is stranger than fiction." The incident happened in the State of Washington, and not very far from Olympia, the capital.

Two little boys, whose names were Freddie and Tom, set out for school one fine summer morning a little over a year ago. Fred was seven years old, and Tom, who was nearly eleven, felt that his little brother was his especial charge. Their mother had made them up a lunch; for the distance to school was too great to permit them to come home at dinner-time. Fred carried the bread and cheese in a little basket, while Tom had a bottle of milk under his arm—a good, large, strong bottle.

"Take good care of Freddie, Tom!" said their mother, as she kissed them good-by.

Tom always liked to be told this; and he would straighten back his sturdy shoulders, and hold his curly head a little higher every time it was said to him.

"Yes, mother," he answered. "Come along, Fred, or we'll be late."

And away the little fellows trudged, while their mother went back into the house breathing, as she always did when the boys left home, a brief prayer to Him who

"Over the loving and the gentle gives His holy angels charge."

Between the boys' home and the schoolhouse was a piece of woods where tall maple, ash and cottonwood trees grew, with a dense undergrowth of alder. It was a lonely looking place, especially because the road did not go straight through it, but turned first to one side and then to another, to avoid trees that had seemed too big to cut. So tall and close together were the trees, that the sun could not find its way through the leaves, and even on the brightest days it was always dark and gloomy. The boys always liked to hurry through it, and this morning they quickened their steps as soon as they got within the shadow, taking opposite sides of the wagon track, so as not to be in each other's way.

They had just passed the first turn in the road when a cracking noise was heard in the woods on Freddie's side. Before they had time to speak to each other, a lithe brown form leaped from between two alder bushes, and alighting in the centre of the road, stood facing the boys. They did not know what it was, but seeing it crouch for a spring, Tom ran to get between it and Freddie. There was a deep hole in the road, which he had to go around, and, delayed by this, he saw the creature spring forward at Freddie, as a cat springs upon a mouse, and, striking the little fellow with one of its powerful paws, bear him to the earth. Poor little Freddie, too much surprised and frightened to cry, lay prostrate, the beast, which was a cougar of the largest size, standing over him, its horrible fangs glistening as it made ready to seize him by the throat.

There was only one thing for Tom to do, and he did it. Seizing his milk bottle by the neck, he swung it above his head, and then, as he sprang forward, brought it down with all the strength of which his young arm was capable, between the cougar's eyes. It was a well aimed blow, and strong enough to smash the bottle into a dozen fragments. The milk ran into the cougar's eyes and down his nose into Freddie's face. Never was a cougar more astonished. Bottles of milk and little boys were things it did not know anything about, and it gave a great bound over Freddie's head, as he lay quietly on the ground, and disappeared into the woods.

"Did it hurt you, Freddie?" asked Tom.

"Guess not," was the little fellow's answer, as he rose to his feet.

"Oh, he did, Freddie!" exclaimed Tom. "There's blood on your coat and the sleeve's all torn."

Fred looked at the place indicated and burst into tears.

"There's blood running down my arm," he cried.

"Let's run home," answered his brother; and, taking the little fellow's uninjured arm, he ran along through the mud by his side.

Freddie almost fainted from the loss of blood; but his mother, who saw them coming, knew something must be the matter, and hurried to meet them, and, without waiting to hear the story, which Tom told as he ran beside her to the house, seized the little boy in her arms and bore him home as fast as her feet could carry her. The doctor, when summoned, found it necessary to put several stitches in Freddie's wound, which the cougar had made by the stroke of its paw; but the little fellow was soon himself again, and not a little proud of his scars.

The cougar did not fare so well; for when Tom told his father of the adventure, he called his neighbors to his assistance, and, with rifles, they set out for the forest. After a few hours' hunt in which Hero, a splendid black hound, did his share of the work, they came upon the cougar and shot it. The skin was given to Tom as a reward for his rescue of his brother, and it lies on the floor before the boys' bed in their little attic room. Freddie carries in his pocket one of the claws that made the scars upon his arm.—Charles H. Lugrin, in The Independent.

For Girls.

If girls are brought up simply with the idea they must do nothing but look pretty and strive to be leaders of fashion, then it would be far better for them when children to inhale the deadly miasma of the East, which blights only the body, than to be reared under such influences which will blight mind, body and soul and cause them to be a curse rather then a blessing.

The strongest tie on earth is the one that binds a child to its mother and the only way to keep this tie inviolate is to educate our girls to be practical, and teach them that their duty to God and themselves is not to plume their bodies with jewels and silks, and think only of the latest styles, but to learn to make home attractive, and to fit themselves for the sphere in which God has placed them.

The man who marries a "stylish lady," who unites his life with one who thinks only of her personal appearance and who stands before the mirror an hour every day trying to hide from the gaze of her sensual admirers the defects which God himself wrote on her face to show that she was frail and human, and of the earth, earthy and imperfect—yea, that man who marries the "lady" who has no God but fashion, no thought but style, and no aspiration but the admiration of other men,—such a man need not die to find a torment, for he finds it here, in his union with that heartless creature, who desecrates the hallowed office of marriage by assuming the sacred title of wife.—Selected.

A Mother's Privileges.

If you allow your duties to run you like a machine you will soon break down in body and mind, with no chance to recuperate. It is the constant succession that wears your patience and strength, especially if you have a large family.

If you are pressed for funds, the closest economy is necessary and right; if not, a jacket or a shoe is of little value compared to your health and happiness. Every woman has tastes, wishes and preferences. She should require them to be respected. If you choose to omit a small duty for a pleasure that is more valuable to you, take the liberty to do so. You owe your family a bright face and well informed mind, as well as buttons and patches. Just as you accustom them in this respect will their demands be. So many mothers are draining their lives away in little steps and stitches!

If you have a distaste for any special work, there is some way out of it without neglecting or hurting anybody. Teach a servant to do it, or exchange with a friend who likes it. For several years one of my friends did my plain sewing, while I did fancy work for her. Each set a price on her work and kept an account of it, but no money was paid; we only balanced accounts occasionally. If you claim your privileges they will be granted you, and vice versa.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Do Not Deceive Them.

When the children are ill, do not tell them that the medicine is "nice," when you know that it is positively nauseous; do not induce them to swallow the dose under the pretense that it is "good." Children never forget white lies of this sort, and their confidence once shaken never regains firmness. Better by far tell the truth, that it is disagreeable, but necessary to their health, and you desire them to take it at once. Ten to one they will swallow it with half the trouble of coaxing and worry of words, and love you better for your firm and decided manner. Don't teach the children by your example to tell white lies to each other and to their neighbors. Guard your lips and bridle your tongue, if you desire to have the coming generation truthful.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

In Glass.

That's the way Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets come. And it's a more important point than you think. It keeps them always fresh and reliable, unlike the ordinary pills in cheap wooden or pasteboard boxes.

They're put up in a better way, and they act in a better way, than the huge, old-fashioned pills. No griping, no violence, no reaction afterward that sometimes leaves you worse off than before. In that way, they cure permanently. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels, are prevented, relieved and cured.

They're tiny, sugar coated granules, a compound of refined and concentrated vegetable extracts—the smallest in size, the easiest to take, and the cheapest pill you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for the good you get.

There's nothing likely to be "just as good."

When out in the open air walk erect, head up, and with shoulders thrown back; inflate the lungs to their fullest capacity, hold the air a second or two, then gently let it out as in ordinary breathing. Keep this up and practice it several times a day. If your business does not call you out, you must take time; go out. This is the best lung developer.—Exchange.

Beecham's pills cure bilious and nervous ills.

Well Answered.

A Buffalo paper tells a story of a New Hampshire boy's quickness at repartee. A gentleman was traveling in the country at Stoddard, where it is all rocks and bowlders, abandoned farms and farm houses going to ruin. He saw a boy of twelve or fourteen hoeing in a cornfield on the side of what would be pasture land on any one else's farm. The corn was poor looking. The traveler reined in his horse and spoke to the boy. He said to him: "Your corn is rather small."

"Well," said the boy, "we planted dwarf corn."

"Well, it looks yellow, poor and thin."

"Well, we planted yellow corn."

"Well," said the traveler, "I don't mean that. It don't look as if you would get more than half a crop."

"I don't expect to. I planted it on shares."

We have noticed going the rounds of the press, says the Franklin Times, a long and expensive remedy for curing the poison-oak. Here is a better one, which is worth preserving, and costs you nothing:

Put a small handful of dried, chipped beef in a half tea-cup full of new milk, simmer a few minutes by a slow fire. Then rub the parts affected with it, a time or two, and you'll be astonished at its effects. It will cure it, and will not be long about it. In advance, you are welcome.

The Reflections of a Married Woman

This is the time to build up her strength and cure those weaknesses or ailments which are the seat of her trouble.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription regulates and promotes all the proper functions of womanhood, improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, melancholy and nervousness, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and strength.

It's a safe remedial agent, a tonic and nervine guaranteed to cure those disorders and derangements incident to womanhood, or the money paid for it is returned.

It would not pay to sell a poor medicine on these terms.

Calling to the Ministry.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I have been reading the dear old BIBLICAL RECORDER more or less from the days of its being edited by Bro. J. J. James, and I must say that it seems to me to improve with every number. I see so many good, rich articles in it, I asked a brother not long since to give me his name and the sum of two dollars, and I would see that he should have the next week's issue of the RECORDER to read. "O," said he, "I want it, but I don't see how I could spare two dollars just now." I told him if he would read the RECORDER one month, I felt quite sure that he would find out how to raise and spare two dollars for it each year as long as he should live. He promised me to come and see me soon and bring the cash.

Among some of the good things which I read are the articles written by Bro. Harman and Brother Brown on the call to the ministry. But while Bro. Brown demurs to the opinions of Bro. Harman, I must say that I don't see that his idea of getting the preacher into the field, properly authorized, is any better. The only one point in Bro. Harman's article, which Bro. Brown admits to approximate his idea, is "a deepening, growing, abiding conviction that it is God's will that one should devote himself to preaching the gospel as a lifework." Now, I cannot see how the church could know this to be a fact, and settle down upon it, as being of divine origin, any more so, than to be able to decide as to whether the aspirant would be popular or unpopular, or whether his lungs and throat would hold out long or fail soon. The church can have no evidence of the fact except from the man who is seeking ordination, and he may be deceived, or attempting to practice a fraud, or it may be of God; hence in this case we must await results. I am unwilling to accept this as a justifiable reason for deciding on a call to the ministry.

Then, in the second place, and in conclusion, Bro. Brown seems to prefer throwing the burden upon the churches. I don't see how the churches are to mend the matter. I agree with Bro. Brown that there are many of us who can't preach, never have, and perhaps never will, and yet this "abiding sense, this to us seeming conviction that it is God's will." Then there are those in whom the church has seemed to have the greatest confidence, and have insisted on the presbytery, called on to ordain, to be sure to loose them and let them go, as they are all right, and yet they can't preach. There are as many failures among the selections made by the church as from any other selection; besides, I fail to see in the Scriptures any satisfactory authority for leaving the matter with the church.

I do not presume to answer for Bro. Harman, nor do I presume to be able to know anything that my dear Bro. Brown does not know, for while I do not mean to attempt to be guilty of such a sin as to flatter Brother Brown, nor to speak of his ability to the disparagement of any other able brother, yet I am sure that I don't know of the minister of the gospel whose opinions are superior to his, so far as I can understand.

But I will say, in conclusion, that I regard a call to the ministry as coming in the following manner, viz:

1st. The person called must be a regenerated man.

2d. He must have complied with the requisite ordinances of the church.

3d. He must possess the qualifications required, as are set forth in the Epistles to Timothy and Titus, and it does seem clear to me that when such is the case, that there would never be any mistake in getting ministers such as could and would honor the cause of Christ.

4th. I think that the proper judges of the above qualifications are those who are best acquainted with the applicant, and that the presbytery of elders called upon to ordain any one to the work of a preacher of the gospel should not, at any time, or under any circumstance, proceed to ordain any one until they can be satisfied that it would be for the good of the cause. To my mind, it seems more likely to be according to apostolic method that the matter of settling the question as to the call and qualifications of preachers be left to the antecedent preachers. Christ chose the first apostles and sent them out, and they, in their work and in the discharge of their duty, ordained others, and nowhere in the New Testament can it be found that any bishop or elder of apostolic times acted from any other authority or by any other method. Some might claim that Paul was an exception to this rule; if so, then please read for your better instruction Galatians, second chapter. We see that Paul had been preaching at least seventeen years, and notwithstanding his firm and honest convictions, based upon unmistakable evidences of a personal call from God himself, and also having been further qualified by the setting apart by Ananias, yet he (Paul) confers with James, Cephas and John, fearing that without their sanction and approval, he had preached in vain; that is, he might have been mistaken in his gift and calling. Yet in this day, men are willing, nay even anxious to preach, and will arrogate to themselves the great, responsible, and of all work the most important, the office of preaching the gospel, and, too, with no other conviction than that they may be permitted to enjoy the honor of being called a preacher, of being admitted into good society, and perhaps get a living out of it, simply as they might expect to do from any worldly profession. Some of such characters know nothing whatever of an experience of grace, and of course nothing of any special enlightening from the Holy Spirit, and many amongst them could not give the analysis of the most simple text in the Bible. Still they succeed in filling up every Sabbath with churches of which they boast of being pastors, "and as the priests, so are the people." The result is, we have dear Dr. Durham's "Omissionaries, Trunk Baptists," &c., of which he so beautifully wrote two or three weeks ago. Fall into line! O, church of the living God! go back to the New Testament way of making preachers, and then your preachers will be sure to "preach those things which become sound doctrine."

I don't want to be regarded as a preacher, unless my dear old brethren such as Lennon, Hill, Drs. Skinner, Bailey, Pritchard, Brown and others, to whom God has given the call and made it manifest by their works, can do by me as did James, Cephas and John to Paul. I do hope for the day when Christian honesty and true fidelity to Christ shall take the place of common politeness among Baptists.

Your humble brother and lovingly,
D. N. GORE.

Gains and Losses.

PROGRESS OF THE WORK IN SOUTH CHINA.

Canton is the capital of Kwang Tung Province. This Province is about as large as North Carolina, with a population more than ten times as large, Canton itself having almost as many people as the whole State of North Carolina. Our work lies mainly in the northwestern part of the Province. There are two or three stations south of Canton, where there are many Chinese returned from California. These are constantly coming and going, so that the work has never taken such permanent shape as in other places. Misses North and Hartwell have just returned from a stay of two months in that district. They visited several villages, and at some remained two or three weeks. During the day they went from house to house reading the Bible and telling the story of the gospel. At night they gathered the girls and women in their temporary residence and tried to teach them the way of the Lord. They came again and again night after night, from twenty to fifty, and many of them seemed to grasp the truth and to believe in Jesus as their personal Saviour. At another village they found a man converted in California who was previously unknown to the members of our mission. He entertained them and greatly helped them in their work. Miss White was with them part of the time, but the work in Canton was pressing too heavy on Mrs. Graves, and she returned to her help. Misses Whilden and McMinn have spent some weeks at Shiu Hing and in the neighboring villages. In the villages they were able to do much work that promises results in the future. Sometimes women would get them into a room and shut the door to prevent the crowds gathering, so that they might have quiet to learn more fully the way of salvation through Jesus.

Negotiations are in progress for the purchase of a lot in Shiu Hing and the building of a residence, so that some of us may reside there permanently. We are looking for a physician to join us there and open a hospital, for which there is a fine opening. Is the man we want to be found in North Carolina?

Bro. Simmons has recently returned from a visit to Shek Kak and Tsing Uen. In the latter city he spent nearly two weeks, preaching to crowded houses of interested hearers, and explaining the Scriptures to the brethren. The work there, where there has been much persecution, grows more hopeful with every visit.

West of this Province is Kwong Sai, in which no missionary has ever yet been permitted to reside long at a time. But our native preachers and colporteurs have gone to and fro in the Province, and several have heard and believed, and the converts have built a chapel in one of the smaller towns. Bro. McClay recently spent several days at this chapel, gathered the brethren and sisters for the study of the truths of the gospel, and at the close baptized seven believers. One of these came a journey of four days on foot to meet Bro. McClay and receive baptism. The opposition is not dying out, but the officials have been instructed to suppress any hostile outbreaks against Christianity. While the government of the United States, a model for its principles of freedom, is putting new restraints on the resident Chinese, the Chinese government, the synonym for unreasoning despotism, is manifesting greater willingness to protect foreigners who come bringing a foreign religion. The Chinese in the United States are interfering with the power of some to make money, and letting their religion alone; so "the Chinese must go." It is becoming evident that the missionaries are here, not for money, but to preach religion, and so they may receive protection. The money is worth more than the religion, in the eyes of a few voters, and so both political parties are afraid to carry out national pledges to the "half-civilized Chinese." Are the right thinking people of the United States content that the contrast between the two governments should continue thus?

But while there are signs of progress in the work, we have recently suffered serious loss in the death of two of our most useful preachers. Bro. Au Yung Honge was converted more than twenty years ago. Against great opposition he was baptized and had to flee from home to save his life. For ten years or more he has been an earnest and effective preacher. He was living at Tsung Fa, his native village, and looking after the work there, but had gone on a preaching tour far up the Sz Wai river, and was taken sick and died there. The church in Canton raised the money to have his body brought down and buried here.

Bro. Tso Fat Tsuen was the pastor at Tsing Uen. He was converted in South America, where he saved some money. Coming home, he preached without salary as long as his money lasted. He was with Bro. Simmons in his meeting at Tsing Uen, and came a day's journey down the river with him, and then turned up the West River to visit his native village. There he died after a very brief illness.

Mrs. Graves has been quite sick with typhoid fever for some time, but seems to be slowly improving.

Not long ago Dr. E. P. Thwing, of the Northern Presbyterians, died here. He was not officially connected with their mission, but had accompanied his son and daughter who recently joined the mission. He was looking after a proposed insane asylum to which, I think, he had given a considerable amount of money, and was constantly striving to do good. His wife, also, nearly sixty years old, was studying the language and trying to do missionary work, when she was stricken with fever, and is still far from well.

The Presbyterians have recently suffered losses, sickness necessitating the going home of several. Two prominent physicians, Drs. Kerr and Thompson, had worked long and needed a rest. Dr. McCandlish, working on the island of Hainan, has recently been ordered home on account of his wife's health. Dr. Macley has broken down at a distant inland station, and has gone to Macao, hoping to avoid going home. He left at that station Miss Johnston, his adopted mother, who remains alone, far away from any foreigner, to look after the work.

A few days before our arrival in Canton, Mr. Lingle and his wife left for this station. They remained a few months and Mrs. L. was stricken with heart-disease and they had to go home just as they were ready for work. It was not thought she could survive the voyage, but I hear that she is improving. Mr. Lingle is a native of Rowan county, N. C., and I hear that he is now at the home of his father near Salisbury.

Letter from Sister Nannie S. Britton in China.

Bro. Bailey:—This beautiful spring weather affords many good days for country work. Mr. Britton is giving much of his present time to preaching and personal work among the people in the numerous villages and hamlets northeast of Soochow. He usually starts in the early morning, spending the day out, and returns at night. After supper he goes immediately to the chapel where he or Mr. Tsu preaches. This night preaching was begun about a month ago with the hope of giving to our neighbors, who on account of their work cannot attend the afternoon services, an opportunity to hear the gospel. The congregations are often large and quiet for a collection of heathen, but at other times they are quite noisy.

We are thankful to note a few hopeful cases among those who attend our meetings more regularly. I will mention one who is the son of a blind widow. His mother was baptized by Mr. Britton in the summer of 1891. Ever since her baptism she has shown that she is happy in the hope she has in the Lord. May the son soon rejoice in the same blessed hope.

We returned yesterday from Wongdai and Leku. At Wongdai lives one Mrs. Tun, who was in Mrs. Yates' boarding school five years. She was baptized by Dr. Yates while in Shanghai. On marrying (seven years ago), she moved to her present home. There she has remained the only Christian in her town these years, having no one to worship with her, but many to deride her trust in Christ. She has seen very few Christian people since she left Shanghai, but she speaks with great pleasure of the time Dr. Yates visited her before his death. It is encouraging to hear her talk of God, her ever-present Friend, and Jesus, her Saviour.

The people of Wongdai were making elaborate preparations to bring out one of their idols and give him an airing with a parade on the streets, so they were too busy to listen to the gospel of our Lord and Master.

We pushed back to Leku, where more attentive ears awaited us, and there many, both young and old, heard of Christ's love for them.

Mr. Tatum was with us not long ago and did some good preaching. He was taken sick and had to leave after only a short stay. We are glad to learn that he is better now.

We keep hoping to hear soon of newly appointed missionaries to share in the work of this great city and surrounding country.

Mr. Britton is working in Lo-ming and vicinity to-day. T. C. B., Jr., now six months old, is well and grows fast. He adds much joy and sunshine to our home and hearts.

With best wishes for all of our North Carolina friends, I am sincerely,

NANNIE S. BRITTON.

Many brethren are inclined to criticize the sayings and doings of others, and many are inclined to be sensitive to criticism. It is well, therefore, to consider the proper limits of the criticism of people.

Every public act and utterance of any man is a legitimate subject for criticism. Whatever a man utters in a sermon or public address, whatever he puts in print, and whatever he does, either as a representative or in a public manner, may properly be criticized, and he has no right to be offended at such criticism. His private affairs, however, and his private conversation and correspondence, are not proper subjects for public criticism, and no one has any right to drag these things before the public.

On the other hand, the critic has no right to assail the motives of the one criticised. Every man has a right to have his motives respected, however much his acts and utterances may be condemned. Just here is where most critics fail. They condemn, not simply the act or utterance, but the man. They either charge or intimate that he is prompted by some bad motive. And when he becomes offended, as should have been expected, they turn round and say that he is not above criticism, that they have a perfect right to express their opinions, etc. His taking offense at one insult is made the occasion of giving him another. Such criticism should be ruled out of decent society. It has no place among right-thinking people.

Then, even if the man's motives are respected, the critic should consider what will be the probable effects of the criticism—whether it will help or hinder the cause of truth and righteousness. We have no right to use even legitimate criticism to the injury of the cause we ought to promote. If the man criticised is in charge of important interests whose success depends on his having the sympathy and co-operation of the people, no criticism which would interfere with that sympathy and co-operation, should be offered. It is wrong to strike a blow at a good cause.

And, besides, the motives of the critic should be pure. He should have no personal end to gain. Criticism must not cover up personal ambition or personal ill will. Indeed a man ought to be very careful how he trusts himself to criticise the public sayings and doings of one he dislikes. The person equation is sure to show itself in the result. And nothing discounts a man in the estimation of thinking people, more than his seeking to use criticism to promote his personal ends.

Let the critic always consider whether it be the design of his criticism to help or to hinder the man criticised, i. e., whether it be friendly or unfriendly. Let the critic pray for the brethren criticised before writing his criticism, and let him be very sure he does unto them as he would have them do unto him. Let the brother criticised stop and consider what the criticism contains which may be made helpful to him, even though the criticism be unjust. The impression made upon the critic's mind, though an unjust one, may have been made upon the minds of many others, and this may render it desirable for something to be said or done to remove this impression, and care should be exercised against making such impressions in the future. Napoleon said he got more profit from the criticism of enemies than from the compliments of friends, since thus his faults were revealed to him.

In replying to criticism, also, let not the motives of the critic be assailed. He has an equal right with the man criticised to have his motives respected. Not every criticism is worth a reply, but if a reply is made let it be of the right kind.—Western Recorder.

Fretting.

There is one sin which seems to me is everywhere and by everybody underestimated, and quite too much overlooked in valuations of character. It is the sin of fretting. It is as common as air, as speech; so common that unless it rises above its usual monotone we do not even observe it. Watch any ordinary coming together of people, and see how many minutes it will be before somebody frets—that is, makes more or less complaining statement of something or other, which most probably every one in the room, or in the car, or on the street corner, it may be, knew before, and which probably nobody can help. Why say anything about it? It is cold, it is hot, it is wet, it is dry; somebody has broken an appointment, ill-cooked a meal; stupidity or bad faith somewhere has resulted in discomfort. There are plenty of things to fret about. It is simply astonishing how much annoyance may be found in the course of every day's living, even at the simplest, if one only keeps a sharp eye out on that side of things. Even Holy Writ says we are prone to trouble as sparks to fly upward. But even to the sparks flying upward, in the blackest of smoke, there is a blue sky above, and the less time they waste on the road the sooner they will reach it. Fretting is all time wasted on the road.—Helen Hunt, in The Watchman.

Christ and His Sheep.

An American who was traveling in Syria saw three native shepherds bring their flocks to the same brook, and the flocks drank there together. At length one shepherd arose and called out, "Men-ah, men-ah," which is the Arabic word for "Follow me." His sheep came out of the common herd and followed him up the hillside. Then the next shepherd did the same, and his sheep went away with him, and the man did not even stop to count them. The American said to the remaining shepherd, "Just give me your cloak and turban and crook, and see if they won't follow me as soon as they will you." So he put on the shepherd's dress, and called out "Men-ah, men-ah," but not a sheep moved an inch. They knew not the voice of a stranger. Is it not just so with the flock of Christ? Christ is the Good Shepherd and knows his sheep, and is known of them.—The Worker.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 12, 1893.

Rev. C. T. BAILEY, Editor and Proprietor.
J. C. CADDELL, Agent and Correspondent.

"What Baptists Believe," by the late J. L. Burrows, will be given to every new subscriber to the Biblical Recorder who will pay $2.00 in advance for a years' subscription. We will also give the book to every old subscriber who will pay his subscription to date and a year in advance.

Think of it! Your denominational paper, the subscription price of which is $2.00, one year, and a neatly bound book of over a hundred pages, containing a clear and fair expression of what Baptists believe and practice, all for the price of the paper.

Remember, this offer is to new and old subscribers alike.

THE PATH OF DUTY.

A great American soldier once said, "Duty is the noblest word in the English language." The very life of a soldier is one which must impress upon him the importance of obeying orders; of doing one's duty. Having a general in whom he can trust, he can go forward and do what he knows that general requires of him, leaving results and responsibilities with him. So Christ's soldiers can and ought to press forward in the work the Master has placed before them, with implicit confidence in his judgment, knowing that he will order all things wisely. Really, the Christian ought to be a bold and happy man; for he need not fear what men can do unto him, and God being his friend, will control his actions and his destiny for good.

Some one again has said, "The path of duty is the path of safety." This saying, we think, will bear the test of analysis and of experience. Many who are tempted to forsake the path of duty find the temptation hard to resist, or yield to it, because to walk in it at times may seem to threaten them with bodily harm or personal discomfort. Those who thus give way under the pressure of temptation, forget that out of the path of duty may lie difficulties and dangers that cannot be foreseen, and for which they are not prepared. When battling with these difficulties, there must be much mental anguish, resulting from a consciousness or the fear that one is not in the path of duty. And it does not require much experience in this line for a man to learn how much braver and persistent one can be when he meets difficulties or dangers, knowing that he is doing right and going the way the Master would have him go. It was this consciousness of right doing, of being in the path of duty, that enabled Peter and John to make the manly declaration, "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye; for we cannot but speak the things we have seen and heard;" and Martin Luther to cry out, "Though there be as many devils in Worms as there are tiles on the houses, yet will I go."

Let us earnestly strive, then, to know the path of duty, and walk in it, though many difficulties may seem to beset it. As an encouragement to do so, let us in addition to what has been said remember these facts:—

1. As this is the path that the Master marks out for us, he will give us strength to walk in it. This he has promised to do; "As thy days so shall thy strength be;" "My grace shall be sufficient for thee." He has not promised to give us either strength or comfort in the path of disobedience.

2. The Lord knows full well how to give his people unseen joys, and hidden comforts by the way, when they are walking in this path. In ancient times this was done by visible assurances of his presence and by miraculous intervention of his power; and while he has mostly discontinued these means, which appealed to the sense of sight, he can and does use means now that appeal in language that cannot be misunderstood, to man's spiritual perception and consciousness. Ah, let us never cease to thank God for the hidden manna on which the soul of the Christian is fed!

3. God has a work for each one of his servants to do; and that work is found, day by day, in the path of duty. We are often disposed to dodge duty and leave to others the work which the Lord has qualified us to do. It is well that we should have an humble opinion of our piety and of our gifts; yet if the Lord counts us worthy to do a certain [illegible] placing it before us, and endowing [illegible] that would enable us to do it, [illegible] we to avoid it? Do we not [illegible] while the words, "Well [illegible] servant; enter thou [illegible] Lord?" We should not [illegible] but seek ourselves [illegible]

GIVE US THE PROOF.

While "higher critics," and others who are fond of displaying their learning even at the expense of divine truth, are filling the air and the public prints with the assertion that there are errors in the Bible, it is remarkable what a miserably slim array of passages or incidents recorded in the Bible they have thus far produced by way of establishing their assertions. When pressed for an answer to the question, "Where is your proof?" they either furnish the slim array alluded to, or claim to be so considerate of the authenticity of a Book so long believed to be fully inspired, and as coming direct from God, and also of the simple faith of those who have built their hope of salvation upon its teachings, that they pose as martyrs of kindness, and keep their dread secrets to themselves.

Now as to the slim array alluded to, even when we examine that which can be furnished by the most talented higher critics, it is a significant fact that nearly all the supposed errors are found in the Old Testament, and especially among the prophets, who indulged in highly wrought figures and in some poetic license. As to supposed mistakes in history, geography, chronology, &c., every true scholar knows how unfairly any modern writer reasons when he makes assertions about the words of men who lived in countries he has never seen, and who were familiar with the lore of generations long passed away, living as they did in times between which and the present long centuries have intervened. Many of the historical statements of Herodotus, which were once supposed to be fabulous or mythical, have been proven to be correct by the inscriptions on the buried monuments of antiquity which have recently been brought to light. If Herodotus was long disbelieved on some points, and yet vindicated thus by the unerring hand of destiny, and of God, may not the same be true of the inspired men whose writings are recorded in God's word? In fact, this very thing has happened, and some of the supposed errors of the Bible have vanished, like mists before the morning sun, in the presence of the buried, but now exhumed, monuments of Egypt, Palestine and Assyria. God will thus in his own way continue to vindicate his servants, and the authenticity of the Book on which from the beginning he has placed his seal that it is true. We remember a few years since examining a list of supposed errors contained in the Bible, furnished by one of the most talented higher critics of the day, and were surprised to find how easy it was to give the passages a different interpretation from the one given by the writer. He was adroit enough to claim that the ones mentioned were only specimen errors; but we have looked in vain for a fuller list from him.

As for those who are posing as martyrs of kindness to their unthinking brethren, and who carry in their bosoms dread secrets that had better be kept from the lamb-like people about them, it may not be amiss for us to say to them, "Gentlemen, bring forth your proof. If there is a skeleton in your theological closet, please bring it forth. It is hardly necessary for you to pose any longer; and when some credulous reader of God's word asks you for the dread secrets which you think you have discovered, it is hardly necessary for you to place your fingers on your lips, roll your eyes, and look far away, as if you feared the near approach of the giant who comes to ring defiance in the ears of the Lord's host. Let him come; and if you prefer, hie you to the shelter of his shield. The Lord will not fail to find a David or a Jonathan in his camp. And if your wonderful discoveries are the result of your superior wisdom, will you not give the world the benefit of it? Let the seal of your silence be broken; speak, oh speak!

WAKE FOREST LAW SCHOOL.

The action of the Trustees of Wake Forest College in establishing a law school is a new departure, and in our opinion one that ought to have been made. The College is now strong enough to commence looking after those departments of business life which are claiming the attention of the leading institutions of the country. Other departments will no doubt be gradually added. Wake Forest is fortunately situated for a law school, and we see no reason why it should not be successful from the start.

Judge Walter Clark, of the Supreme Court, is the leading instructor, with Judge George V. Strong and Mr. N. Y. Gulley as assistants. This is a very strong faculty, and will be so recognized by the people of the State. Those to whom the duty of choosing a faculty was committed are to be congratulated on the selections made. Let the young men of the State thinking of studying law take into consideration the Wake Forest law school. They will find no where superior instructors.

THE OTHER SIDE.

Recently we have thought it would be a good investment to send out some good-looking brother, one who is not only sensible but free from dyspepsia, gout and all similar disorders, and let him have a line of appointments to speak exclusively upon the good things the world contains, the peace, joy and blessings which are about us in such abundance, and which may be had simply for the asking. We have heard so much of the other side of the picture, that we are in danger of losing sight of the fact that the world is yet full of the choicest blessings and splendid possibilities for every one who chooses to make the best of his chances. This ought to be especially true of the man who trusts not to the world, nor to the things of the world, for his highest joys, but is looking to him who has promised to withhold no good thing from those who love him and put their trust in him. Yet, strange as it may seem, almost every week some of our brethren are dealing out their spite and spleen in a way, both grievous and humiliating to every one who really loves the cause and whose joy is in the upbuilding of the Lord's kingdom on the earth.

But for fear of silence with reference to these groundless and intensely foolish attacks and criticisms concerning our work and the brethren who represent it, we should continue to treat them with the supreme indifference they so richly deserve.

What is the matter any way? Where does the sombre brother who hears distant thunder and the rumbling of stones and earthquakes get his bearings? Once he appears in sackcloth and ashes and solemnly proclaims that the denomination, with all its dearest interests, is soon to be dominated by "bossism," unless he is speedily consulted and the emanations of his fertile brain shall be followed without question or comment.

Again, he makes the startling discovery that the State Mission Board is run by just a few members; that the apportionment of its funds are unequal and unjust; that the missionaries are unpaid and neglected, not even so much as having an opportunity to be heard, &c. The management of the Orphanage also comes in for its share of attacks and anonymous criticisms.

Thus from week to week we have seen this picking to pieces business, questions suggestive of suspicion, and reflecting upon the veracity and faithfulness of brethren who are the representatives of our work and the duly elected servants of our Convention. We say these things ought not to be; and we say further, they would not be, if these censorious brethren were free from prejudice, and would forever abandon the absurd notion that the shortest road to prominence and distinction is to criticise and find fault with the work of others rather than earnestly and faithfully do their own work whatever that may be.

Again, we ask what is the matter? Again the answer comes, "Nothing"—absolutely nothing! Were Baptists ever freer or more like Baptists than they are to-day? Has not the State Mission Board done more up to the present time than ever before since the organization of the Convention? Was ever such a showing made at the Southern Baptist Convention as cheered the hosts of brethren who recently met in Nashville? Has not Wake Forest College just ended one of the best sessions the institution ever enjoyed? Has not the missionaries been paid every cent of their salaries for last year and interest from January, 1893, to the date of settlement? Have you done as well by your pastor who was not a missionary?

If you are a grumbler, grumble no more. Get a higher, holier occupation. If you have a mind to work, take your place; if not, retire, and stop firing from behind trees into the ranks of those who are going on conquering and to conquer.

While we dislike very much to remind our friends of their obligations to us, the stringency of the times forces us to call on all who are in arrears to pay up immediately. We must have money to meet our debts. We have asked our creditors to wait on us until they can wait no longer. If every one who is behind in his or her subscription would pay up, we could easily pass through these dull times without incurring further debt. Don't wait. Your money just at this time will be worth more to us, and will be appreciated more highly, than at any other season of the year. It is only a dollar or two from you, but it is thousands to us. See the label on your paper.

A Tennessee brother writes: "Though my lot is now cast with the Baptists of Tennessee I love the Recorder none the less, and it always comes to me like a welcome letter from the 'old folks at home.' May the Lord bless you and grant many more years in which to live and labor for his cause." Such words are always appreciated

Hollins Institute, also, has great cause for congratulation, for in Mrs. Pendleton it secures a woman of highest culture and bright intellect, as well as purest Christian character. She has few equals anywhere and carries additional honor to this already honored institution."

....Speaking of Rev. Dr. McDonald, yesterday, a well known gentleman said: "There goes a man whom Atlanta does well to honor. Not long ago, when I was suffering from the terrible effects of a spree, I was trying to make my way to the St. Joseph's Infirmary. I met Dr. McDonald and mistook him for Dr. Kendrick. I asked him to help me get to the hospital. He put his arm about me, patted me affectionately and talked to me with the kindest tones I had ever heard. He importuned the good sisters to take me in and make me comfortable and telling me how truly he sympathized with me and would pray for my recovery to strength and a better life, left me with his benediction upon my troubled spirit. He is a man among a thousand and I love him!" It was a genuine and whole-souled tribute to one of the best known ministers in Atlanta, and because of its honest recognition of the spirit of the Good Samaritan that Dr. McDonald is, it should be a precious testimony to all who love that godly man.—Constitution.

Expenses of the Board.

"We want him to give the expenses of the Mission Board."—Editorial in North Carolina Baptist, July 5, 1893.

The connection shows that the pronoun "him" in the above quotation refers to me, and I suppose "Mission Board" refers to our "Board of Missions and Sunday-schools," I therefore gladly answer—

1. The Treasurer is a bonded officer. He reports to the Baptist State Convention annually. His report shows all the expenses of the Board. The report is plain, definite, business-like, full. The report is published in the Minutes. The Minutes are sent all over the State. Their preparation, publication and distribution this year was $171.80 of the Board's expenses. These Minutes have been in the hands of the brethren about six months. The Auditor, a singularly clear-headed business lawyer, examines each year the Treasurer's books, acknowledgements, receipts, vouchers, &c., and attaches his certificate to the report. The books of the Treasurer are as well kept as the books of any bank in our city, and are open to all the Baptists of the State.

2. I have nothing whatever to do with the Treasurer's work or his report. I do not receive, acknowledge, control, or pay out the money of the Board. I do not prepare the report for the Convention. Our reliable, accommodating, and efficient Treasurer does his own work.

3. If by "expense of the Mission Board" the salary of the Corresponding Secretary is the "expense" referred to, I will say only a few things.

(a) The Treasurer's report shows every dollar paid the Corresponding Secretary each year, and it shows also from what sources it comes.

(b) The present salary of the Corresponding Secretary was fixed not for me, but for my predecessor, John E. Ray, and the salary is the same that was paid him.

(c) Whatever I have been, and all I have ever received, as salary or otherwise, as pastor or in the present position, has gone into thing I own in the world was sold, it would not, I think, bring three hundred dollars.

(d) The time and services of the Corresponding Secretary and the clerk in the Supply Store do not really cost the denomination a dollar. No, not a dollar. The amount made by the business conducted by them—the Supply Store—(and which amount goes into the different departments of our denominational work, as shown by the Treasurer's report and the report on the Supply Store) is more than their salaries. In 1881 a few brethren at the Convention in Winston subscribed $1,000 to start this store. Only about $700 of it, however, was ever paid. There never has, I think, been a wiser or a more fruitful investment made for the denomination in the State.

BUT IF BY

"expenses" the SUPPLY STORE expenses are referred to, I can only say—

1. The Treasurer's report shows every dollar of these expenses.

2. The rent is not $480, as published in an editorial in Charity and Children of April 14th, 1893, but as the Treasurer's report shows for the Supply Store room $200, and for the Mission Room $100—just the rent the Board has paid for ten years.

3. When the Board, in January, 1892, changed from its old location on Hargett street to its present position, the committee that unanimously recommended the change was not from Raleigh, but was composed of such men as J. B. Holman, moderator of the South Yadkin Association, Prof. F. P. Hobgood of Oxford, Rev. H. W. Battle of Wilson, now of Virginia, and Rev. O. C. Horton of Selma.

4. The Supply Store pays all of its own expenses and much of the expenses of the other departments It costs the denomination nothing whatever. It is true, however, its expenses are, at times, necessarily high, as it seems to me, and I do whatever I can to reduce them. I give as one illustration:—

A double column, three-inch, one-month advertisement of the Supply Store was, about March 1st, 1893, sent to four papers. It was the same advertisement, same space, same time in each paper. No contract was made. The bills were sent in, and the Treasurer's books show that for this advertisement we paid the following amounts to each paper:—

Biblical Recorder	$ 4 80
North Carolina Baptist	8.00
Asheville Baptist	3.60
Charity and Children	3.25
Total	$19.65

This $19.65 was part of the "expenses" of the Board for that month.

AGAIN

in the same editorial of the North Carolina Baptist of July 5th, it is said: "He (referring to me) should tell us what he is doing." I gladly do so. My duties are prescribed by the Constitution of the Baptist State Convention in Art. 10. This one thing I do—just what the Constitution prescribes—all the time, and all there is of me is in the work.

I have for the past six years prepared the report of the Board to the Convention, and at a meeting called for that purpose, have submitted the same to the Board for amendment, addition, subtraction, correction and adoption. This report has not dealt with what the Corresponding Secretary has done, or what he has not done. In all of these reports there is, I think, no allusion personal to myself or my work. The report deals with what the missionaries, the pastors, the churches, the Associations, the denomination, have done, and not what the Secretary has done. It will be thus, with the report, so long as I prepare it.

But I am just in receipt of the following demands by a brother who is the pastor of four country churches. The heat is up to 98, and I must beg for "cooling time" before I try to answer these DEMANDS.

"I see in the North Carolina Baptist a very modest request that you publish the "expenses of the Board." Now, brother, come forth with the amount of salary you get for being shot at, and what you do with said salary; whether you live high or low, eat in dining room or kitchen, what you have to eat, what do you eat it with, knife, fork or pewter spoon, hot or cold, cooked or raw. Where do you sleep? How long? On a bed or on the floor? Do you ride on bicycle or street car? Do you shave yourself, or do you pay a barber to shave you? Do you dare take the money of the poor hardworking countryman to pay such expenses?

Come forth, brother, with this much-needed information."

C. DURHAM.

Union of Central and Raleigh Associations.

[We have been requested to publish the following as a proposition which is likely to come before the next session of the Central Association.—EDITOR.]

1. Resolved, That in our opinion it would be wise for the churches of the Central and Raleigh Associations to unite and form one Association.

2. Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to meet a similar committee, if appointed, from the Raleigh Association, in Raleigh, Oct. 30th, 1893, at 10 o'clock a. m., and submit the question of said union to the churches of both Associations, to be voted on by each church at their regular monthly conference in November next.

3. Resolved, That the clerk of each church be requested to certify to said committee the result of the vote in his church on the question of this union so soon as practical after the vote is taken.

4. Resolved, That if a majority of the churches in each Association shall vote for this union, the committee shall make all needed arrangments for the first session of the united body.

Our Foreign Mission Board.

It is with many regrets that I am called upon to announce the retirement of Dr. H. A. Tupper from the position he has filled with so much fidelity and success for more than twenty years. On the 30th of June he turned over to the President of the Board, according to previous arrangement, the books, papers and responsibilities of the office. It seemed best to take a little time for the careful selection of a successor, in which very grave matter we ask the brethren to join us in earnestly invoking divine guidance that we may be led to select the right man to take up and carry forward the great work of giving the gospel to a lost world.

Meantime the Board, on the 3d of July, appointed the undersigned Secretary ad interim, and devolved the duties of President on Rev. J. B. Hutson. It has not been possible in a few days to get the work of the office fully in hand, find out what is to be done and how to do it most expeditiously; but there is one fact that stares us in the face and demands the sympathy and aid of our brethren everywhere:

AN EMPTY TREASURY.

We began the Conventional year with a balance of $18,400 (in round numbers). The receipts since May 1st have been $8,800. The expenses, a little heavier at and just after the Convention than at any other time of the year, and the regular drafts of our missionaries, nearly $10,000 a month, have exhausted the treasury entirely. And observe that while more than two months, one sixth of the year, have elapsed, our receipts amount to only one-twentieth part of what the churches gave last year and what is necessary to support the work on its present basis. True some missionaries have retired from the service or returned for a short time to recuperate wasted health and "rehearse what God has done with them and how he has opened the door of faith to the Gentiles;" but as I write my prayers go out in behalf of two on the Pacific and four on the Atlantic speeding to their chosen fields, while others are under appointment to sail in a few months, and every field is calling loudly for reinforcements. It is very bad to be in arrears with a pastor or a State missionary in a destitute region, or a Home missionary on the frontier; is it not worse to fail to support promptly our representatives in far off heathen and papal lands among unfriendly, if not actively hostile, people? The present financial stringency, which has no doubt diminished contributions, makes it difficult and dangerous to borrow. The late Secretary used freely his personal credit to help the Board. This can hardly be expected of one who is merely locum tenens, nor is his name worth much on change.

WHAT CAN BE DONE

North Carolina gave us last year nearly $10,000, including $1,750 for Centennial. It will be a poor compliment to brethren Newton and Bryan, now temporarily at home, and to your noble representatives in heathen lands, if you do not give more this year. But up to date less than fifty dollars have been received. These facts and figures speak for themselves and plead more eloquently than any comment of mine can do for speedy collection and prompt remittance of funds for Foreign Missions. If all who can do so will help, the present difficulty can be safely passed.

Fraternally, H. H. HARRIS.

Richmond, Va., July 8. 1893.

Letter from Wake Forest College.

I have just read in the Advocate a ringing address from the Trustees of Trinity College to the Methodists of North Carolina. It closes as follows:

"We appeal directly to the Methodists of North Carolina, preachers and laymen alike, to stand as one man, to this our own college from this time forth, and to show their loyalty by sending at least 250 students for the opening in September next. With present prospects it is only reasonable to expect this. To realize it, every man and woman should go to work at once to secure that number of students as a certainty. The future of the college lies with the church which owns it; if the church does her duty by giving the institution her enthusiastic and undivided support, we are confident, beyond a doubt, that its permanent prosperity will then be assured."

Judging from the letters which I receive, there is no need for an appeal to be made to the loyalty of very many, at least, of the friends of Wake Forest. These, I know, are doing all they can to increase the patronage of the College. But we need the aid of every Baptist in the State. If we do not "stand as one man to this our own College," we may rest assured that others will not. We have not the means with which to subsidize the secular press, and advertise in all the papers, as we should like to do. But through our own people we ought to be able to reach every young man in the State who can reasonably be expected to become a student at Wake Forest. And I am very sure that if our friends go to work at once for the College, we shall have next September more than the three hundred students spoken of at the Alumni Banquet.

THE NEW LAW SCHOOL.

The announcement of this department in our College work has been received with enthusiasm. The prospect is that it will be a great success. Instead, however, of giving my own opinions, I will print extracts from letters which have recently come to me from lawyers. These gentlemen are in position to speak with authority. Some of these letters are the spontaneous expression of gratification and approval. Others are in response to my request for the opinions of the writers.

Mr. G. W. Blount of Wilson says:

"I am glad to see in the papers the announcement that the recommendation of the Trustees to have a Law School has culminated in the election of teachers for it. I am satisfied that no better instructors could have been found. Judge Clark is a painstaking student, as well as an eminent judge. Judge Strong is known to the Bar and to the people of the State as one of the best teachers of law in the State. Mr. Gulley, though a younger man, is not unknown to the people and Bar of the State as an industrious student, well read in the litrature of the law and devoted to its scientific study. All these go to make up a Law Faculty of eminent merit; and students of law at Wake Forest will be abreast with those of the best schools of the land."

Mr. H. R. Scott of Reidsville writes:

"I am gratified to see that Wake Forest has added to her curriculum a department for the study of Law. The selection of Judge Walter Clark of the Supreme Court, to take charge of this department, is eminently wise. He is fond and proud of his profession; and is thorough, painstaking, accurate, and lucid. I consider the institution fortunate, also, in the selection of his assistants, men of irreproachable character, industry, and ability, and devoted to their calling. I feel assured of the success of the new departure."

Mr. E. B. Jones of Winston says:

"I think that the Law School at Wake Forest, under the supervision of the gentlemen selected will prove a success. It will meet with the hearty approval of all the friends of the institution. The selection of Judges Strong and Clark and Mr. Gulley is certainly adding experience, research and activity to acknowledged ability. Judge Strong has for years stood high in his profession. And Judge Clark's studious face is a true index to his learned decisions. Mr. Gulley, while a younger man, has carried into his profession the energy and studious habits which characterized him as a student in College. These made him a success then. He has achieved success at the Bar. And other and greater successes await him."

Mr. E. J. Justice of Marion says:

"In my opinion, the establishment of the School of Law at Wake Forest is a wise step. It broadens the field of usefulness of the College. * * * As to the Faculty; a practice of five years before Judge Walter Clark, while he was on the Superior Court Bench, and while he has been a Justice of the Supreme Court, has convinced me that he has no superior in the State as a learned lawyer and a clear and terse writer. His opinions indicate that he will make an able instructor. His services guarantee the success of the School. Judge Strong and Mr. Gulley I only know by reputation."

Mr. E E Hilliard of Scotland Neck writes:

"I am delighted with the new departure which establishes a School of Law at Wake Forest. It is a department for which many friends and sons of the institution have been waiting and hoping for years. I regard the selection of Judge Clark as manager of the department wise and fortunate. Assisted by Judge Strong and the scholarly Mr. Gulley, he will make the School all that the most sanguine could expect. It is a long stride forward for the College."

Mr. S. E. Williams of Lexington writes:

"I am glad to note that Wake Forest has decided to establish a School of Law. * * * With the moral atmosphere of the place, and a faculty composed of such men as Judge Clark, Judge Strong and Mr. Gulley, the Wake Forest Law School ought to turn out men who will weigh in the future counsels of the State and nation."

Mr. B. F. Montague of Raleigh writes:

"I have noted with pride and pleasure the establishment of a Law Department at Wake Forest College. It is another evidence of the progressive spirit which has marked the Baptists of this State. The authorities at Wake Forest have acted wisely in putting Associate Justice Walter Clark in the lead. He is an educated man in a wide sense, a sound lawyer and an able judge. Judge Strong has long been one of the leading lawyers in eastern and central North Carolina, and has had much experience in teaching Law, equity being a favorite branch. Mr. N. Y. Gulley is a student, a growing lawyer, and an active and successful practitioner. Properly managed, as doubtless it will be, there exists no reason why it should not be a success, even from its incipiency."

The following, from Mr. C. S. Vann of Edenton, N. C., was written before Judge Strong's name was announced as a member of the Law Faculty:

"You have done well in the selection of teachers for the Wake Forest Law School. Judge Clark, in my judgment, will prove to be one of the best instructors in the State. He is well educated, a student and well up in the history and principles of the Law. * * * I do not know Mr. Gulley as a lawyer, but four and a half years of student life with him lead me to feel satisfied that no mistake has been made in associating him with Judge Clark. I congratulate the College upon the selection of these gentlemen."

Mr. W. N. Jones of Raleigh says:

"In my opinion, the Trustees of the College acted wisely in establishing a Law School at Wake Forest. I regret that it was not done twenty years ago. If it had been, the College, the denomination, and the State would have been greatly benefited. There is no better place for a student than Wake Forest. It is every way a healthful place for a young man seeking law training, and has an advantage in being in easy reach of Raleigh where the Courts—Federal, State, and County—are held. The new departure is a wise, and I believe will be a successful, one. No stronger Faculty than the one chosen could have been selected. No better lawyers and instructors in law are to be found in the State than Judges Clark and Strong. That fact is well known. Mr. Gulley was in my class, and I know him well. He has a clear, close, analytical mind. He can do as much with a book as any one I have known, is a successful lawyer, and will make an admirable teacher of law."

C. E. TAYLOR.

Beecham's pills sell well because they cure.

North Carolina Baptist Sunday-school Chautauqua.

For several years a number of us engaged in the Sunday school work in North Carolina have felt the need of a chautauqua or summer school, where we could meet and exchange plans of conducting the Sunday-school, methods of teaching, &c., and to consider many things that might aid us in more effectively doing the work we have in charge.

After consulting some of the brethren, Dr. C. A. Rominger of Reidsville, and myself, met at Mt. Vernon Springs, near Ore Hill, on the C. F. & Y. V. R. R., on Tuesday, July 4th, and made arrangements with the proprietor of the hotel at that summer resort for the accommodation of all who shall attend the chautauqua at $1.00 per day. We found close at hand a large and well-arranged school building, and Mt. Vernon Springs Baptist church, both of which will be at our disposal for meetings.

We agreed to begin the meetings on Tuesday, Aug. 22d, and close on Sunday, Aug. 27th. A full programme is now being made out, and will be published as soon as completed. Special reduced rates will be secured over the railroads.

Mt. Vernon Springs is one of the most beautiful and popular summer resorts in North Carolina, and in attending our Baptist Sunday-school chautauqua we can combine recreation and improvement of physical condition with delightful and helpful companionship in studying to better equip ourselves for the great Sunday school work.

In organizing this chautauqua or summer school there is no thought or purpose of antagonizing or assuming in any sense the Sunday-school work committed to the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools of our Baptist State Convention.

Indeed, the chautauqua will not undertake in any way legislative or mission work, its business being purely educational, as implied by its name. In other words, we aim to organize for our Sunday-school people a movement such as the Teachers' Assembly at Morehead has been for the secular schools.

Every pastor of a Baptist church, the officers, teachers and friends of the Sunday-school, are cordially invited to join in this undertaking.

Further notices and programme will appear hereafter. N. B. BROUGHTON.

An Inverted Pyramid Will Fall.

We are fond of saying "a local church is bigger than the Convention." Amen. But is this true? Our Associations and Conventions frequently plan to do certain things without a word to the churches. Hence, I believe the failure of the Centennial movement, the Baptist Female University (to date), and other things. I am persuaded, that if our Boards, before bringing new plans, &c., before the Conventions, would correspond with pastors, clerks and others, and through them lay these matters before the church, have them fully discussed and the delegates instructed as to the course of the churches, that we would get the sympathy and support of our churches all over the State in every plan for the development of the work. The breach between the Conventions and churches; the Boards and individual brethren seems to be widening. We need to be brought closer together. I believe if all matters were canvassed in the churches first, a great barrier would be broken down and that there would be more harmony of action in every department of work. CHAS. A. G. THOMAS.

A Question and Answer.

Dear Recorder:—I simply want to ask a question and to answer it, and leave it for others to answer:

A game of base ball is to be played. The citizens of one town for purposes of ambition hired a team of professionals. The citizens of the other town, not wishing to be wiped up, hired four professionals to help them. As the day advanced, betting commenced. A large crowd was in attendance. Admission to the enclosure was twenty-five cents, and amid much excitement, anxiety and enthusiasm, the betting ran up to over a thousand dollars. The professionals were badly beaten. The ambitious citizens lost their money, and were greatly grieved: one noble man cried, &c.

Question: Was it right for a minister of the gospel to be one of the "nine," a player in the game?

Answer by comparison: The man who made the table and the pack of cards did no harm. Table and cards are both inanimate. Any one with nothing to do—a party convalescent, for instance—can, with impunity, play. So with ball and bat, both inanimate, and for pleasure and exercise, anybody can play. There is a starting point to harm at the card-table when the betting begins, at the ball and bat when the betting begins, nay, sooner, at the inclosure when the admission is charged. What is the admission for? Some good man that has got inside, and has seen and analyzed, will please answer.

The gambling card-table is private (in rooms), and the youth of the land does not see it. The gambling ball and bat is public, and the youth and maiden all take part in the betting. There is only one danger of being hurt at the card-table: your opponent may stab you because you cheated him. At the ball and bat you are liable any moment to get your eyes knocked out, your limbs broken (it has happened), or killed in a general row. (Note the wind-up of the lost game at Rocky Mount). I say a Christian has no right to go to, let alone play, in a game of base-ball as above mentioned.

What say you? A. N. DANIEL.

An Earnest Call.

I do hope that the churches and the brethren, who made pledges to ministerial education, will pardon me for calling their attention again to the fact that our creditors here are in the greatest need of what the Board of Education owes them. They must suffer if we cannot pay them soon.

Brethren, we know how hard the times are; but if it be possible to redeem your pledges, please send us relief. Send to J. D. Boushall, Raleigh, N. C.

Pilot Mountain Association.

This body of Christian workers will meet with the church at Waughtown on Thursday, August 3d. Those coming by railroad will come to Winston; then change to street-cars and come to Sunny Side, one mile from the church. Those wishing conveyance from street car line will drop a postal to W. W. Phillips, Salem, N. C., stating what time they will arrive.

The church is expecting a large gathering. Representatives of every interest pertaining to the convention are invited and expected.

To Whom the Call is Best Known.

Dear Recorder:—There has been a great deal said through the columns of the RECORDER in regard to a call to the ministry, and yet it seems to me that some are still unsatisfied.

I think that Bro. Harman is about right in his explanation.

But I think the said call is best known to the man who has it, and yet he will never be able to tell it all.

School Notices.

The advertisement of the Chowan Baptist Female Institute appears in this issue. This institution is too well known to the Baptists of this State to require commendation from us. It closed one of the most successful sessions in its history recently, and we learn from Prof. Brewer that with the new improvements, the prospects for next session are unusually bright. It is worthy of our Baptist patronage.

The Staunton Daily News of June 1st, 1893, says: "Staunton Female Seminary has won an enviable reputation for its music and has well sustained it during this session. Seldom, if ever, has a more delightful school concert been given in this city than the closing one of this school, in the chapel, Monday evening. The elocution at this school is of an unusually high class." See the advertisement of this school in another column.

Attention is directed to the advertisement of the State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts. This College is making rapid progress and has become one of our worthiest State institutions. With increased faculty and working facilities, it is better prepared than ever to afford a splendid practical education to worthy students.

We acknowledge receipt of the very attractive Fiftieth Annual Register and Announcement of Hollins Institute. It shows the splendid record of 193 students last year, and in every way speaks well for the well known Institution, which it represents.

There is no better military, or college preparatory school in the State than the Horner school. Their catalogue and announcement for 1893-'94 are out, and we advise anyone who purposes preparing for college to correspond with the Horners.

The neatly arranged catalogues of the South West Virginia Institute, Roanoke Female College, and Oxford Female Seminary are on our table. We are pleased to see the marked progress in these excellent institutions in the past year, and bespeak for them an increased patronage in the future.

A Help to Duty.

At this period in the history of our denomination, when pastors and superintendents are striving to bring the people up to a realization of their duty to Christ, nothing is more timely than the issue of The Worker by the American Baptist Publication Society. It never has a dull line in it. From month to month it teems with just such suggestions as the adult classes of the Sunday-school and the families need. It is the cheapest paper published, only six cents per year.

Affiliation of Colleges with the University of Chicago.

Several brethren connected with Southern colleges have asked my opinion, as a life-long educator, about the proposition of the University of Chicago that colleges shall enter into organic affiliation with that institution. The conditions of organic connection now proposed (which show marked improvement upon those formerly suggested) may be found in the proceedings of the American Baptist Education Society for 1892. The University offers to furnish its examination questions to the affiliated colleges, to read and mark the papers of the students, and to give to those who pass the examinations its degrees, just as if they had studied in the Collegiate Department of the University itself. If any colleges are not prepared to give all the course of instruction requisite for standing an examination, the University will allow the student to enter its Collegiate Department and study the missing subjects, and then he may return to the college for graduation if preferred. The University will furnish to the affiliated college, at cost, special instructors and lecturers from the faculty for brief periods, and teachers from among the University Fellows for a considerable part of each year. It will grant free tuition in its graduate schools (the University proper) to all instructors in the affiliated college, and to three of the college graduates annually. It will also unite with the college in joint committee in the nomination of instructors for the college, and in the removal of unsatisfactory instructors. The actual appointment of remains still rest with the authorities of the college itself. There are also some minor propositions.

Now if I were connected with a Southern Baptist college I should encourage a good many of the college graduates who wish to pursue graduate (post-graduate) studies, to go for this purpose to the University of Chicago. They will certainly find great advantages there—many very able teachers in every direction—and an atmosphere of kindling zeal and elevated aspiration. Honest and earnest efforts are put forth by my friends President Harper, Dr. C. R. Henderson (who is a sort of chaplain without the title), and other devout men, to give a religious tone to the life of the institution. Some things are taught in the Bible courses of the University, in regard particularly to the Old Testament, which I very much regret; but the situation in that respect is quite as good as at Yale, and much better than at Harvard, though not so good as at some Baptist and other universities. So I should advise a good many of our well matured college graduates to take their graduate (post graduate) courses at the University of Chicago.

But it would seem to me a highly undesirable thing for a college to place itself, by any form of organic connection, under the control of the University. The trustees and faculty of the college ought to be fully at liberty to judge for themselves, concerning the range of studies it will offer and the examinations it will propose. There is necessarily a great difference between colleges as to the subjects on which the chief emphasis of the instruction will be laid, and as to the nature and extent of the demands made for entrance and for graduation, a difference conditioned not only by the qualifications of instructors and the preparation of pupils, but by the life which the institution represents. Moreover, the college work would not be pervaded by the animating spirit that now exists, the marked pride of alumni and students in their own institution, if it should become simply a part of a great continental machine. I am sure that the honored brethren who propose this organic affiliation have nothing but thoroughly good intentions, and will seek to carry out the arrangements in a worthy spirit. But of course if the college receives much valuable help from the University, it must in one way and another render a quid pro quo. Of this there can be no doubt. And in general, the college would be giving up no little of that local independence and that individual freedom which belong to the genius of American institutions, and with which the Baptists of the South have always felt and manifested a characteristic sympathy.

Remember, too, that in many States our Baptist college is a creature of the State Convention or General Association, and in some sense under its control. To bring the college into organic association with a university which is far away, and in a less definite sense a denominational institution, would impair the feeling of State distinction and State pride which is with us so marked a feature.

This whole question is a matter of opinion. I have no quarrel with colleges that have chosen, or may choose, to enter into the proposed organic connection. If I express an opinion unfavorable to such an arrangement, I am not at all speaking as an opponent of the new and noble University, in whose unquestionably great future I feel a profound interest.—Dr. John A. Broadus, in Western Recorder.

Unseen Harvest.

The editor of a religious paper is a seed-sower. He cannot expect to see immediate fruits of his labors. He touches minds that are widely separated. He speaks to thousands who are utter strangers to him, from whom he never hears, and to whom he is personally unknown. Ministers receive occasional words of encouragement from those who have been profited from their sermons. But the average reader thinks he does his full duty to the editor when he tells him what he deems his faults. For this reason an editor is sometimes tempted to think that his best work is unappreciated, or even fruitless. And yet he may be exercising an influence for good far beyond what he knows or even hopes.—Christian Guardian.

The divine is in you and the divine is part of you. The sun comes in March to the earth, and whispers to it and says, O Earth, give forth thy bud and thy blossom and thy waving fields of grain; and the earth says, I cannot, I cannot; I am bound with frost, and all my brooks are icy, and I am covered with snow. And the sun says, I will take away the snow, and I will open the brooks, and I will unbind the chains of frost. And the earth says, But I am a dead, cold earth; there is nothing in me. And the sun says, You are mistaken; all the harvests of the future are in you; all the glory of the spring is in you; all the possibilities of the orchard are in you; and I will bring them forth out of you. You are the sons of God, and all the harvesting and all the orchard fruit and all the spring glory of love and patience and forgiveness and enduring kindness—they are all in you, because you are the children of God, and all will be made manifest if God works in you and you work with God.—Lyman Abbott, D. D.

The following story, given by the St. Augustine correspondent of the Times-Union (Jacksonville), if true, is amusing, to say the least of it. Some may see a side that is not so amusing. It is headed, "How a Roman Catholic priest was done up by a brother Methodist in securing candidates for baptism":

While writing of Mt. Vernon barracks, it may not be out of place to give a little incident happening there a short time ago and communicated to the Times-Union correspondent by an army lady. It is generally known that the Apache Indians are confined to the limits of Mt. Vernon barracks as prisoners of war, and it may also be understood that the clergy of the several denominations is allowed full sway in trying to convert the Indians to as many religious beliefs. To secure this end, little inducements are offered, as "sealing" the compacts made in order that others may be influenced to undergo "baptizing." The story vouched for is that a good father of the Roman Catholic church took charge of a class and by his good offices converted some forty Indians, to each of whom he gave a certificate of baptism and an order for a watermelon which latter paper was honored by the trader. A few days after this a Methodist clergyman, hearing of the father's good luck, appeared on the scene and made known to the Indians the object of his visit. When he opened his services he was flattered by seeing nearly all the Indians in the camp at the meeting, and among them about all of the converts to Catholicism. He converted the whole crowd and afterward gave to each a certificate of baptism. These the Indians presented at the traders, and their disgust when being told that they did not call for watermelons was terrible, and they all agreed that the next time they get baptized, the watermelons must be distributed in advance.

Work While 'Tis Day.

There is no point in this life where we can safely cease our spiritual activity and retire. In secular business men frequently accumulate enough of wealth to cease operations and thereafter live on their capital. This cannot be done in the labor we carry on for God. No man can say, "I have now finished my course, have reached the point of perfection, and have nothing to do but lounge around awaiting for the final settlement." That is the spirit that led the servant with one talent to wrap it in a napkin and bury it. David seemed to have a correct idea of the desire that should animate us in our Christian life when he said: "I shall be satisfied when I awake in thy likeness."—Christian Gleaner.

The Leaksville Woolen Mills, Leaksville N. C., need no introduction to the public in North Carolina and adjoining States. This is simply to remind you that they are still "in touch" with the people, working up their wool into various forms of finished product at satisfactory prices. A handsome catalogue containing samples of their new and attractive styles of Fancy Cassimeres and All-Wool Flannels, together with all other goods made by them, is sent to any address on application. Besides an interesting article on "Wool on How to Handle It," the catalogue contains full particulars in regard to shipping wool. If these details are carefully followed, we guarantee prompt return of goods.

Write to Hiram Foard, Sec'y, Leaksville, N. C., for catalogue, before disposing of your wool.

The Doll's Dressmaker.

JACKSONVILLE HAS A MODERN DUPLICATE OF DICKENS' INIMITABLE CHARACTER.

Every one who has read the works of Charles Dickens is familiar with the "Doll's Dressmaker" in "Our Mutual Friend," and how the child was parent of the wayward father, scolding him when he reeled home at night maudlin and imbecile from the fumes of the bad liquor he had been imbibing. It was then that she would rebuke and call him her naughty child, threaten him with dire punishment should he offend again.

But when outraged nature refused longer to submit to the abuses which had been heaped upon it and the drunkard paid with his worthless life the indebtedness he had been so long contracting, her heart was well-nigh broken.

She knew that he was low and mean and contemptible, but he was her all, and she loved him. Since she could remember she had protected and watched over him and done all she could to keep him from his evil ways, and she never thought of the sacrifice of her afflicted young life, but only that he was her child, her charge, to keep in order and protect from his evil inclinations. How well she did this is chronicled in the style which can emanate from a Dickens only.

This story is old to readers, though its beauty never grows less. How many of the readers of the Times Union know that right here in the city of Jacksonville there is a sweet little soul who embodies in her faithful little person the very characteristics which have rendered famous the small lame heroine of "Our Mutual Friend?"

Her father is old, and there are only he and she left. He is an artisan, and plies his trade on one of the suburban streets of the city, and a better man or more skillful workman never lived, as long as is kept from his lips the insidious glass; but, unfortunately, he is weak, very weak, and cannot resist the temptation to fill up when it offers itself.

There is a devoted love between the pair, and every morning after her father has had his breakfast and has gone to his daily work she hurries through with her little house hold duties, and, taking her sewing, crosses the street and seats herself in front of the shop where he toils. She knows that his tender old heart will not let him pass her at the entrance on his evil errand, and while she is there he stifles the craving and works manfully on.

But, alas, there are times when she cannot be there to guard him against himself, and the devil gets the upper hand. For days, perhaps, there is misery in the little home, until the craving wears itself out, and the father comes home penitent and ashamed to the patient little martyr always ready to forgive.

The characters and the surroundings are humble and homely, but there is latent in that small woman the stuff of which are made the heroines of our civilization. Patient, loving and forgiving, she will wear in a brighter world than this a crown befitting the glory of her nature here.—Jacksonville Times Union.

CHRISTIANS AWAY FROM HOME.

I recollect that when I was in London and Paris, I observed a very great difference between the thermal line of duty there and what I had seen in New York and Brooklyn. I was asked to do a great many things which I had never seen it best to do at home; and I remember saying within myself: "If I am going to take any liberties, I am going to take them at home. I am not going to slink off here to London and Paris, and do things that I would not do there." It is a matter of sentiment and pride with me, largely, that if I propose to take any liberties in regard to places that I have never been accustomed to visit, I will not do it away from home.

I dined with some English gentlemen—some Lords—and after dinner they were going to the theatre, and they proposed that I should go with them. I said: "No, I think not; I have never attended a theatre in my life. I never saw a play, and I think I won't begin theatre-going just now." They all said: "We do not expect you to go where theatre goers generally go; we will go right to our box, and no one will know that you are there." "But," I said, "I think I should feel mean to go in that way. If I made up my mind to go to the theatre, I should go as I would go to church, or anywhere else."

So I think in going away from home, one should take less liberty than he would at home, rather than more. One should have a sense of honor about such things. Children well brought up are guided by principle in matters of this kind. Even though they may act with some freedom at home, the moment they are away from home they feel that the influence of their fathers' and mothers' name surrounds them, and that they must be more particular about their behavior than they are at home.

WOMAN—THE GOOD AND THE BAD ONE.

A bad woman is the worst thing in this world, and a good woman is the best thing in this world.—Ladies' Home Journal.

She is a very little woman—in fact, only five years old. The other day when her pet dolly sprang a leak in its arm and its sawdust came trickling out, she exclaimed: "O, Dolly, I told you to chew your food up fine, but I didn't mean you to chew it as fine as that!"—Washington Post.

With Christ in the heart, all things are possible, but without him nothing is sure.

Self-Forgetfulness.

The self-forgetful man alone has the full benefit of his best powers. These lie in a certain capacity for "the best licks," which is developed only when the fire of a generous enthusiasm has its way with a man. Devotion to an end, to a cause, makes men large, stalwart, resourceful, and mighty, if there be in them the possibility. This does not come out until the man has forgotten his wages, his comforts, his hopes, his fears. Imaginary lions in the way make men slothful. Small cares shut out high thought. Mean desires exclude honorable ambitions. Little pre-occupations hide from sight "the heavenly vision." To be one's best, one must forget his little needs, and think only of his large needs. Now and again such a soul may in lack of wisdom waste life in impossible undertakings; but the steadfast rule is still our Lord's rule—making life to save life, casting away to get, losing all and finding a greater all in the consummation of a consecrated life.—Pittsburg Advocate.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that we can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

STUDY TOPICS.—Knowledge of the missionaries. Encountered difficulties. Past results. Future prospects. The Centennial, a pivotal era in missions. Chapel building.

The Southern Baptist Convention at its late session in Nashville, Tenn., extended the time of the Centennial of Missions until the close of this year. The Centennial Record Book will also be kept open until that time. It is hoped that renewed efforts will be made for this work, and the Woman's Central Committee of Missions will gladly supply Centennial Missionary Literature, Centennial Chapel Cards, Centennial Day Programs, and Centennial Certificates, free. All who are already entitled to Centennial Certificates can obtain them at once on application. If after application the Certificates are not received within a reasonable time, please renew your application, as some loss may have occurred in the mails. Address Miss Fannie E. Heck, Pres. Woman's Central Committee of Missions, Raleigh, N. C.

Such Gifts and Givers as God Loves.

The following story will encourage the hearts of many who have contributed to the support of orphans in our various mission fields:—

In the beautiful island of Ceylon, many years ago, the native Christians, who had long worshipped in Bungalows and old Dutch chapels, decided that they must have a church built for themselves. Enthusiastic givers were each eager to forward the new enterprise. But, to the amazement of all, Maria Peabody, a lone orphan girl, who had been a beneficiary in the girl's schools at Oodooville, came forward and offered to give the land upon which to build, which was the best site in her native village.

Not only was it all she owned in this world, but far more, it was her marriage portion, and in making this gift, in the eyes of every native, she renounced all hopes of being married. As this alternative in the East was regarded as an awful step, many thought her beside herself, and tried to dissuade her from such an act of renunciation. "No," said Maria;" "I have given it to Jesus, and as he has accepted it, you must." And so to-day the first Christian church in Ceylon stands upon land given by a poor orphan girl.

The deed was noised abroad, and came to the knowledge of a young theological student, who was also a beneficiary of the mission, and it touched his heart. Neither could he rest until he had sought and won the rare and noble maiden who was willing to give up so much in her Master's cause.

Some one in the United States had been for many years contributing twenty dollars annually for the support of this young Hindu girl, but the donor was unknown. Rev. Dr. Poor, a missionary in Ceylon visiting America about that time, longed to ascertain who was the faithful sower, and report the wonderful harvest.

Finding himself in Hanover, N. H., preaching to the students of Dartmouth College, he happened in conversation to hear some one speak of Mrs. Peabody, and repeated, "Peabody; what Peabody?" "Mrs. Maria Peabody who resides here—the widow of a former professor," was the answer. "Oh! I must see her before I leave," said the earnest man about to continue his journey.

The first words after an introduction at her house were: "I have come to bring you a glad report; for I cannot but think it is to you we in Ceylon owe the opportunity of educating one who has proved as lovely and consistent a native convert as we have ever had. She is exceptionally interesting, devotedly pious, and bears your name."

"Alas!" said the lady, "although the girl bears my name, I wish I could claim the honor of educating her; it belongs not to me, but to Louisa Osborne, my poor colored cook. Some years ago in Salem, Mass., she came to me, after an evening meeting, saying: 'I have just heard that if anybody would give twenty dollars a year they could support and educate a child in Ceylon, and I have decided to do it. They say that along with the money I can send a name; and I have come, mistress, to ask you if you would object to my sending yours.' At that time," continued the lady, "a servant's wages ranged from a dollar to a dollar and a half a week, yet my cook had for a long time been contributing half a dollar each month at the monthly concert for foreign missions. There were those who expostulated with her for giving away so much for one in her circumstances, as a time might come when she could not earn. 'I have thought it all over,' she would reply, 'and concluded that I would rather give what I can while I am earning, and then if I lose my health and cannot work, why, there is the poor house, and I can go there. You see they have no poor house in heathen lands, for it is only Christians who care for the poor.'"

In telling this story, Dr. Poor used to pause at this point and exclaim: "To the poor house! Do you believe God would ever let that good woman die in the poor house? Never!" We shall see.

The missionary learned that the last known of Louisa Osborne she was residing in Lowell, Mass. In due time his duties called him to that city. At the close of an evening service, before a crowded house, he related among missionary incidents, and as a crowning triumph, the story of Louisa Osborne and Maria Peabody. The disinterested devotion, self-sacrifice, and implicit faith and zeal of the Christian giver in favored America has been developed, matured, and well nigh eclipsed by her faithful protege in far-off benighted India. His heart glowed with zeal, and deeply stirred by the fresh retrospect of the triumphs of the gospel over heathenism, he exclaimed, "If there is any one present who knows anything of that good woman, Louisa Osborne, and will lead me to her, I shall be greatly obliged." The benediction pronounced and the crowd dispersing, Dr. Poor passed down one of the aisles, chatting with the pastor, when he espied a quiet little figure apparently waiting for him. Could it be? Yes, it was a colored woman, and it must be Louisa Osborne. With quickened steps he reached her, exclaiming in tones of suppressed emotion, "I believe this is my sister in Christ, Louisa Osborne?" "That is my name," was the calm reply. "Well, God bless you, Louisa; you have heard my report, and know all; but before we part, probably never to meet again in this world, I want you to answer me one question. What made you do it?" With downcast eyes, and in a low trembling voice she replied, "Well, I do not know, but I guess it was my Lord Jesus."

They parted only to meet in the streets of the New Jerusalem; for the missionary returned to his adopted home, where, ere long, the loving hands of the faithful native brethren bore him to his honored grave. The humble handmaiden of the Lord labored meekly on awhile, and ended her failing days, not in a poor house, verily, but, through the efforts of those who knew her best, in a pleasant, comfortable Old Ladies' Home. "Him that honoreth Me I will honor."—From Life and Light.

The St. Louis Trade Review and Export Journal in its issue of February 7th, 1893, has this to say:
EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.
One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Carolina, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1858. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches, and carry in stock a fine line of stationery, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, posters, circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

Revelation by Character Illustrated from Old Testament Lives, by the Rev. Robt. Tuck, B. A.

The plan of this work is novel and interesting. The leading idea in the studies is that every man has his own marked individuality, and his precise mission to his generation in that individuality. The author believes that a man's character is his distinguished endowment, and that it is of more importance than anything that he did, or in any circumstances in which he may have been placed. The object of the author is to illustrate that God has been pleased to give many invaluable moral lessons to the human race, through the characters of the men whom he has sent forth. He writes clearly and exhibits the candid temper of the true scholar, but does not lack positiveness of conviction, taking up and discussing in a fair candid and intelligent way, which leaves little to be denied. The twenty-four chapters of the volume treat of many Bible characters, the author having selected most suggestive titles; among them we note the following: "Righteous Abel," "Meek Moses," "Self-Satisfied Solomon," "Fretful Jonah," and "Hopeful Isaiah." The various remaining titles are as suggestive as those mentioned. Mr. Tuck's works have always been received with great favor, and we have no doubt that this most excellent volume will command attention and have a ready sale which it certainly deserves. It is printed on good paper, tastefully bound in cloth, contains over 308 pages, and the retail price is $2.00. Wilbur B. Ketcham, 2 Cooper Union, New York, is the publisher.

From Hendersonville.

Dear Recorder.—Our meeting continued twelve days, and was a great blessing to the church and community.

Dr. Hall of Raleigh did the preaching, and did it so well that he captured everybody. Dr. Hall is a faithful, earnest gospel preacher, with many attractions of voice and manner.

The services were well attended and much enjoyed.

We have recently received into the church twenty-six—ten by letter, fifteen by experience and baptism, and one by restoration.

The work is gradually improving and the church growing stronger.

Yours truly, D. A. GLENN.

Hendersonville, N. C.

Death of Rev. R. D. Harper.

Dear Recorder:—It is with a sad heart that I report the death of our dear Brother R. D. Harper, which occurred on Monday, June 26th, 1893, about 2 p. m. He was born near Castalia in Nash county, May 5th, 1855, and was, therefore, thirty-eight years old at his death. His parents were Brother Samuel and Sister Temperance Harper—the father now living, and the mother, dead. Brother Harper professed religion at Red Bud church, and was baptized into the fellowship of that church by the writer when he was sixteen years old. He was licensed to preach in 1877 and was ordained in 1878. He married Miss Lillian Wells in 1880. To them were born eight children, seven of whom are now living.

Brother Harper was never a strong man physically, and when he was attacked about two weeks ago with typhoid dysentery—although all was done that could be done—he went down rapidly. He died peacefully without a struggle or a shadow, and with his mind clear to the last. He talked calmly of his death, with full hope in Christ as his Redeemer—as the sinner's Saviour.

I have been intimately acquainted with Bro. Harper all his life, and am glad it was my privilege to know him and to have been blessed with his friendship. He was a conscientious Christian gentleman, an obedient child, a kind husband and father, a good citizen and faithful friend. He was a good farmer and fine business man, of incorruptible morals and staunch integrity. His education was fair. His father gave him all the advantage of home training and neighborhood schools. He also went to school in Rome, Ga., to Wake Forest College and the Seminary at Louisville.

As a minister of the gospel, he knew how to construct his sermons. His knowledge of the plan of salvation was good, his preaching was plain and to the heart, and he was very much in earnest. He was a good preacher. He never was appreciated as his merits demanded because of a weak voice. He wanted to preach and do good as much as any one I have ever seen, but was prevented from doing more because he was not supported by his churches, and he was bound to work to support his family. A good and useful man has passed away in the midst of his days.

Bro. Harper organized the churches at Sharpsburg and Free Chapel in a very hard field, and these will remain lasting monuments to his untiring zeal and love for souls. He has served as pastor of Elm Grove, Pleasant Grove, Antioch, Turkey Branch, and Social Plains. He was also associate pastor with the writer for several years. At his death he was pastor at Antioch and Social Plains.

His last sermons were his best. His last public prayer that I heard indicated a nearness to Christ that we were bound to feel.

His wife is one of the best women I have ever known, and was a help to him all through their married life. May God bless her and the children in this their sad bereavement.

His family are left, in comparison with many others, in easy circumstances financially. His remains were buried at his father's home, by the grave of his mother, in the presence of a large crowd of sorrowing relations and friends. The funeral will be preached at Red Bud church by his request.

J. O. ALDERMAN, for Com.

The Late Mrs. Sarah A. Moore.

Dear Recorder:—I wish to add my testimony to the noble Christian character of Mrs. Sarah Ann, wife of Elder R. R. Moore, who died recently in Greensboro, N. C. For over thirty years I have known her. Unpretending, she bore the spirit and mind of Jesus. The Bible was her guide. Especially was she helpful to the poor both white and colored. Never having any children of her own, for many years she ran a small orphan's home in her own house at her own expense. And like the "well beloved Gaius," she was ever ready to help the brethren, "who for his name's sake went forth." Many weary servants of Jesus has she welcomed and rested in her home, and then sent them on with a "Blessed Jesus be with you." She was a Phœbe as seen in Rom. 16: 1, 2.

Strong Testimonial.

The following unsolicited letter has been received by Mr. John Y. MacRae showing the efficiency of the Japanese Pile Cure and the favor it is received with by those who try the medicine. This is only one of the many that he receives:

MERRY OAKS, N C., July 4, '93.

MR. JNO. Y. MACRAE.

Dear Sir:—Enclosed find check for five dollars for Japanese Pile Cure bought of you. I am well pleased with the result. I feel like I am entirely cured after having been a sufferer all my life, and especially bad off during the past ten months. I used five boxes of the medicine and would not take double the cost of it for the good it has already done me. I wish every sufferer had the confidence in it that I have, if so, I am certain they would not hesitate to trying it and being cured.

Respectfully,

ROBERT J. YATES,

Of the firm of Yates & Thomas.

P. S. I was not able to attend to my business this spring, but now feel like a new man after having used five boxes of Japanese Pile Cure.

PIEDMONT.

This is a wide awake manufacturing town, eleven miles southwest of Greenville on the C. & G. railroad with a population of 3,500. Here are located the mills of the Piedmont Manufacturing Co., with a capital stock of $800,000. The two mills, on opposite sides of the Saluda river, cover a floor space of six acres, and run forty-seven thousand spindles and thirteen hundred looms, giving employment to twelve hundred hands, and consuming twenty-five thousand bales of cotton per year.

SCHOOLS.

The directors of the Company have manifested a deep interest from the first in the moral and intellectual interests of the people under their employ. They have two fine graded schools where tuition is free. These schools have facilities for six hundred pupils. The President of the Company, Col. Jas. L. Orr, is President of the schools as well as the mills, and feels a special interest in the little ones who make a large majority of the pupils. He is one of nature's noblemen, a man of commanding appearance, of stalwart frame, a prominent lawyer, descended from one of the first families of the State yet in manners frank and open hearted, drawing all to him. It was my privilege to participate in the closing exercises of the schools, and join them in the festivities of their "annual picnic," and much as I had learned to admire Col. Orr, never did he seem so great to me as when I entered the picnic grounds and met him sweating as he came up the hill bearing a bucket of water to make lemonade for the children; and then afterwards stood up and plead with the parents to avail themselves of the opportunities offered them of educating their children; and never did he plead for a client more eloquently than for the bright eyed boys and girls of Piedmont.

CHURCHES.

There are three churches; a Presbyterian church with about a hundred members, a Methodist church with a membership of four hundred and fifty and a Baptist church of six hundred and fifty members.

The Baptists and Methodists have recently completed large and beautiful houses of worship. I took the full pastoral care of the Baptist church at the beginning of the year, since which nearly one hundred have been added to its membership.

Bro. S. F. Conrad came to us from Winston the third Sunday in June, and for two weeks, day and night, with his characteristic earnestness, preached the Word, "and many hearing believed and were baptized, both men and women."

It was my happy privilege yesterday evening to baptize forty seven in the baptistery of the church, after which the hand of fellowship was extended by the entire church, and then a happy company of five or six hundred, sat down to the Lord's Supper. When we reached home at ten o'clock the pastor was not the only one that felt "this is the great day of my life."

Fourteen more await baptism who have been received by the church, while scores are asking "What must we do to be saved?"

Bro. Conrad left us this morning, bearing with him the love of this people. Many prayers will be offered for him.

DIED.

MOONEY—Mrs. Nannie Mooney departed this life June 26th, in the thirty-seventh year of her age. She had been a member of Clement Baptist church for a number of years, and died happy in a Saviour's love. The writer conducted the burial services from Clement church June 27th. W. F. WATSON.

Roxboro, N. C., July 3, 1893.

YEARGIN—Died, very suddenly, in Wake county, near Rand's Mills, on the morning of June 26th, Miss Martha M. Yeargin. She was in her usual health up to the time of her death. She leaves many relatives and numerous friends to mourn her departure, being connected with a large and interesting Sunday-school, which she punctually attended, and where she will be sadly missed. She had embraced religion many years previous to her death, but from some cause had never connected herself with any branch of the Christian church, but had always been partial to the Missionary Baptist church, having lived for many years near New Bethel, in sight of which she breathed her last. A FRIEND.

PRITCHARD—On June 28th, 1893, in the fifty-second year of her age, Emily, beloved wife of Even F. Pritchard departed this life at Elizabeth City. She and her husband were baptized and married by Dr. R. R. Overby some thirty-three years ago. Their Christian and married lives have been ideally happy and devoted. One daughter has preceded the mother and wife to the heavenly home. The husband, one daughter and two grown sons are left to mourn the departure of "dear mother." Seldom has the writer known a family so tenderly affectionate. Mrs. Pritchard's religion was of the practical kind, seen in all of her kind words and unselfish deeds. Instinctively the distressed and lonely sought her home and her sympathy. She spent her beautiful life tenderly nourishing others. Her name and memory will linger as a sweet fragrance, not only in the hearts of her own family, but in a larger circle of friends. She lived, labored, and suffered in patience, and died in the eternal hope. C. S. B.

ROGERS—Mrs. Willie Tomlinson Rogers, wife of J. J. Rogers, died at her home in Apex, N. C., on July 3, 1893, after a brief illness of five days. Nervous prostration with cerebral congestion speedily gave death the victory over her body, baffling the earnest efforts of faithful physicians. She had just passed her thirty-second birth-day, full of hope and bright prospects for a happy life. A devoted husband, little children, two brothers and many loved ones are bereaved. She was buried in the church-yard here, the service being conducted by Rev. W. S. Olive. On no similar occasion have I heard more timely, earnest and impressive words of comfort to the bereaved and admonition to the living. She believed and was baptized in her tenth year. Since then she has served the Lord. As a mother, fond, perhaps too fond, of her children; as a sister, she wielded a blessed influence in moulding the characters of her brothers, J. E. and R. B. White; and to me, her step-father, she was always affectionate and obedient. Her life was a happy one. She loved and was loved in return, making those about her happy. She died in the faith and hope of the gospel, and we feel that to-day she is rejoicing with a sainted mother and brother in heaven. Death is but the prelude to life—the grave the vestibule to heaven. May we meet her there.

J. M. WHITE.

Tributes of Respect.

WHEREAS, Under the ordering of our infinite Heavenly Father, death has entered the pleasant and peaceful fold of our class and school, and our beloved friend and class-mate, Lela, the daughter of Mr. T. L. and Mrs. Lessie Hubbard, has been taken suddenly in the strength of her young life, from our midst.

Resolved 1. That a bright and lovely young friend and companion whom we deeply loved for her kindness, her fidelity and her Christianity, has passed beyond the great river, and, as we confidently believe, into that eternal home in the city of our God, leaving with us who remain an example worthy of our love and our imitation.

2. That together with all the members of the Clinton Baptist Sunday-school we extend our warmest sympathy to the stricken family, looking to the Great Author of life and death.

3. That this tribute of love and respect be transmitted by copy to the Sampson Democrat, the Clinton Caucasian, and the BIBLICAL RECORDER, with request to publish.

HER TEACHER AND CLASSMATES,
Committee for School.

WHEREAS, God in his allwise providence has seen fit to remove from our earthly ranks our esteemed and aged brother Luke A. Powell, who was born June 27th, 1821, and died Oct. 8th, 1892. He joined the Missionary Baptists at Red Hill, Sampson county, in 1844, and was baptized by Bro. Robert McKnab. A few years after his baptism the Red Hill Missionary Baptist church moved to and organized the Mt. Gilead Baptist church. The deceased was twice married. There were four children by his first marriage—three sons and one daughter—all of whom are living. There were no children born to him by his last marriage, but his faithful wife is left with his children, church, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn his loss. We as members of Mt. Gilead Baptist church do Resolve 1. That in this dispensation we bow with due reverence and submission to his great will, we mourn the loss of so faithful and consecrated a member, whose heart ever beat in loving loyalty to all Christian endeavors, whose hands were ever ready to bear aloft in exulting triumph its glorious banners, and now, life's labor ended, this good servant has entered into the joys of his Lord.

2. That his mission on earth is finished, yet his influence lives, and while these facts and truths speak tenderly and touchingly to our hearts, they bid us emulate with more fervency and zeal his example in the Master's work.

3. That in recognition of his special interest in his church, and in commemoration and as a tribute to him, a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER and to the North Carolina Baptist for publication.

JOHN J. VANN,
REV. C. F. HOPPER,
Committee.

WHEREAS, God in an allwise providence has seen fit to remove from our midst our esteemed and loved sister, Julia A. Faircloth. She joined Mt. Gilead Missionary Baptist church September, 1883, and was baptized by Elder J. L. Stewart. She lived a consistent Christian life, and was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She died after a very brief illness on February 16th, 1893, aged twenty-five years. She leaves a loving husband and an infant four months old, two brothers and five sisters, a host of relatives and friends, to mourn their loss; therefore Resolve 1. That in the death of Sister Faircloth the church has lost one who was ever ready to do all in her power to advance the cause of him she loved so well.

2. That we commend her example to her bereaved husband, and ask him to rear the dear little one left to his charge to love and serve his mother's God.

3. That we extend our sympathy to the brothers and sisters in their sad bereavement, and point them to the same God she loved for solace and comfort.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, and that they be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER and to the North Carolina Baptist for publication.

The Forty-third Annual Session opens August 30th, 1893.
Two courses of study are provided—one including Latin and French, leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts; the other omitting Latin leading to the degree of Bachelor of Literature. There are also Graduate Courses in Music and in Art.
The instruction is of the most thorough kind, and the standard of graduation high.
The corps of teachers, representing six or seven of the best colleges of America, and one of Germany, is very able.
The location is unsurpassed for healthfulness and the culture of its social life.
The buildings are large and commodious, and the grounds among the most beautiful in the State.
New Desks, new Maps, new Art outfit, new Physiological Charts, with new furniture and new carpets in the dormitories, were added during the past year. Apply for catalogue.

The Home Circle.

A Gentleman.

I knew him for a gentleman
By signs that never fail;
His coat was rough and rather worn,
His cheeks were thin and pale—
A lad who had his way to make,
With little time for play—
I knew him for a gentleman
By certain signs to-day.

He met his mother on the street,
Off came his little cap;
My door was shut, he waited there
Until I heard his rap.
He took the bundle from my hand,
And when I dropped my pen
He sprang to pick it up for me,
This gentleman of ten.

He does not push the crowd along:
His voice is gently pitched;
He does not fling his books about
As if he were bewitched.
He stands aside to let you pass;
He always shuts the door;
He runs on errands willingly
To forge and mill and store.

He thinks of you before himself;
He serves you if he can;
For in whatever company
The manners make the man.
At ten or forty 'tis the same,
The manner tells the tale:
And I discern the gentleman
By signs that never fail.

—Margaret E. Sangster, in Harper's Young People.

Partakers of Other Men's Sins.

"Mother dear, I am in luck at last," said Maurice Bradley, coming into the room where his mother sat binding a coarse, heavy slipper. "I have found employment, and can go at it this afternoon. I would not have come home till evening, only to let you hear the good news and tell you not to engage to bind any more shoes after these are done."

"You have not told me what is the work you have found, my boy," said his mother.

"Oh, I forgot! Mr. Roberts has hired me, and all I have to do is to address envelopes. Just think of writing people's names day after day, for weeks and months together. I am glad now that you insisted upon my taking such pains with my penmanship, for it was my fair handwriting, and nothing else, that gave me the preference over a score or more of boys who were there in answer to the advertisement. I am to get seventy five cents a day to begin, with, and more after this week, if I am proficient, which I will be."

"What business does Mr. Roberts carry on, to demand such an extensive correspondence?" inquired Mrs Bradley, much pleased.

"I can not tell exactly, mother, but I guess he is in some sort of job work that requires a great deal of advertising. At any rate, it is a good position for me, and I intend to do my best to make myself useful."

"I am sure you will succeed, my boy, and I hope brighter days for us both are at hand," answered the mother, kissing the earnest face.

Maurice was faithful, and at the beginning of the new week was rewarded with the promised increase of wages, which gave him greater pleasure on his mother's account than on his own. Her cough was worse than usual that spring, and at his repeated request she finally consented to give up the shoe binding and take the rest her long strain of bread winning had made necessary.

One, two, three, four weeks passed, and then by mere chance Maurice learned that the envelopes he had been addressing contained circulars grossly misrepresenting goods to be sent broadcast over the land. Heretofore he had supposed the business to be upright and honorable, but as the letters were all sealed before they came into his hands, he had not thought it his business to inquire into their contents. But after reading the circular over carefully, he was thoroughly convinced that it was prepared with the intent to defraud purchasers, and at once made up his mind that he could not be a partaker of other men's sins, and accordingly informed Mr. Roberts of his determination. Mr. Roberts laughed over his decision at first, but when convinced that the boy was in earnest, he undertook to argue his case.

"I cannot see what responsibility you carry in the case, when for a whole month you filled your part of the contract without being aware of the character of the letters addressed. Even if the scheme were unlawful, you would run no hazard in doing your part."

"Perhaps not, so far as the civil law goes, but if, through my labor, misleading documents find their way to the public, will not the Judge of all the earth hold me accountable?"

"It is a pity of a fellow whose touchy conscience compels him to quarrel with his bread and butter," said Mr. Roberts. "But if you are determined to give up the position, there are scores of bright young fellows ready to step into it, and no questions asked."

But he made it his business so far as to retain the boy in his service—putting him in a responsible position where it was to his own interest to engage reliable assistance—thus proving that even a dishonest man puts a premium on honesty when demanded for his own protection.—Belle V. Chisholm, in Christian at Work.

Suggestions for Driving

Whether you drive a single horse or a team the principles are the same; but in driving a pair see to it that each horse does his share of the work, and no more. A pair of horses, moreover, unless well driven, are sure to get into the habit of wandering over the road.

To drive well you must keep your eye and your mind on the horse. Watch his ears. They will be pricked forward when he is about to shy, droop when he is tired, fly back just before he "breaks" (into a gallop), and before he kicks. Before kicking, too, a horse usually tucks in his tail and hunches his back a little. When you observe any of these indications, speak to him sharply and pull up his head.

You must watch the road also. Turn out for stones, so that the horse shall not stumble nor the wheels jolt over them; avoid the mud holes and places where the going is bad; let the horse slacken speed when the road becomes heavy, and if you want to make up time, do it where the ground slightly descends.

It is a common mistake to think that a horse can haul a carriage easily on the level. On such a road he has to be pulling every moment; there is no rest. Whereas, when the road now rises and now falls, the weight is taken off him at times, and he has a chance to recover his wind and to rest his muscles. As between a level road in a valley and an up-and-down road over the hills, the latter is by far the easier for a horse to travel. When you come to a long level stretch let your horse walk a bit in the middle of it.

Almost everybody knows that for the first few miles, after coming out of the stable, a horse should be driven slowly, and especially if he has just been fed. On a journey it is of the utmost importance to observe this rule. Be careful, however, not to check a young nag too quickly when he comes fresh out of the stable; give him his head, talk to him soothingly and presently he will come down to a moderate pace. If you pull him up at once, you vex him extremely, so much so that he is not unlikely to kick.—Harper's Young People.

Fascinating.

Doubtless thousands of young people and not a small number of old ones, wish every day of their lives that they could learn the secret of fascinating others by means of their graceful, exquisite manners. The secret is an open one. It is so easy to learn that it lies all neglected by the wayside, while they who would give their dearest treasure to find it pass unknowing.

It is only this: Fill your heart with good will to everybody, and then practice at all times the best manners you know, particularly at home. If you begin at home, this charming manner will, so to speak, get settled on you and never leave you. Be just as polite to your sister as you would to your best girl. Strive to gain the good will of mother, father and brothers and sisters and children exactly as you strive to gain good will abroad.

There is no place for practicing manners like the home circle; no place, permit me to say, where it will be so appreciated. It will be a cultivation of heart, mind and body, this endeavor to feel nothing but affection for the people at home and treat them as though they were worthy as much consideration at your hands as if they were the President and his family. So they are worthy. Then from the home will float out around you those sweet magnetic influences which will draw the hearts of mankind toward you.—Selected.

A tired woman, just as much as a sick and ailing one, needs Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. That builds up, strengthens, and invigorates the entire female system. It regulates and promotes all the proper functions of womanhood, improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, melancholy and nervousness, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and strength.

It's a powerful restoritive tonic and soothing nervine, made especially for woman's needs, and the only guaranteed remedy for woman's weaknesses and ailments. In all "female complaints" and irregularities, if it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

A great many medicines "relieve" Catarrh in the head. That means that it's driven from the head into the throat and lungs. But, by its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy perfectly and permanently cures.

The World's Population.

M Emile Levasseur estimates the population of the five continents of the earth as follows:

Asia	824,000,000
Europe	360,000,000
Africa	152,000,000
North America	88,000,000
Oceanica	38,000,000
South America	34,000,000
Total	1,497,000,000

I don't believe that there exists, anywhere on the American continent, a man who went to college and made a good use of the privilege, who now regrets that he spent the time that way; while I can find for you regiments of men, all over the land, who once had the chance to go to college and threw away the chance, who now bitterly regret it, and will continue to do so till their dying day.—M. C. Tyler.

Water as a Medicine.

The human body is constantly undergoing tissue change. Worn out particles are cast aside and eliminated from the system, while the new are ever being formed, from the inception of life to its close. Water has the power of increasing these tissue changes, which multiply the waste products, but at the same time they are renewed by its agency, giving rise to increased appetite, which in turn provides fresh nutriment.

Persons but little accustomed to drink water are liable to have the waste products formed faster than they are removed. Any obstruction to the free working of natural laws at once produces disease, which, if once firmly seated, requires both time and money to cure.

People accustomed to rise in the morning weak and languid will find the cause in the imperfect secretion of wastes, which many times may be remedied by drinking a full tumbler of water before retiring. This very materially assists in the process during the night, and leaves the tissue fresh and strong, and ready for the active work of the day.

Hot water is one of the best remedial agents. A hot bath on going to bed, even in the hot nights of summer, is a better reliever of insomnia than many drugs. Inflated parts will subside under the continued poulticing of real hot water. Very hot water, as we all know, is a prompt checker of bleeding, and besides, if it is clean, as it should be, it aids in sterilizing our wounds. A riotous stomach will nearly always gratefully receive a glass or more of hot water.—Jenness-Miller Illustrated Monthly.

PECULIARLY MADE.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are made of refined and concentrated botanical extracts. They're different from the large old-fashioned pills for these Pellets are as tiny as mustard seeds, and are sugar-coated. They're made in an improved chemical laboratory under the direct supervision of scientific men. Everything else being equal, the smaller the size of a liver pill, the more comfort.

They do not shock the system, but regulate, cleanse and tone up, the liver, stomach, and bowels, in nature's own way.

In Bilious Disorders, Sick Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Dizziness, or for breaking up sudden attacks of Colds, Fevers, and Inflammation, "Pleasant Pellets" are prompt and effective in action.

Peculiar in the way they're sold, too, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

VACATION FOR THE PASTOR.

We have noticed with pleasure that with the approach of the warmer and more dangerous summer months our churches in many localities have seen fit to give their pastors short vacations.

About this time each year we hear some one advance the proposition that inasmuch as the devil has never been known to take a holiday the pastor should not be allowed to rest when the severe heat of summer makes it dangerous for him to preach and weakens him in his work. In our opinion, when the pastor has spent the year in faithful and zealous service, his people should be glad to allow him a brief period of rest and recreation in the sultry summer days. When the more agreeable months come he will be stronger in the battle for having rested, and if he has spent his time well he cannot but be better prepared to serve his flock more zealously and acceptably than ever.

Health is an essential to the success of almost every undertaking and occupation, and to a minister's success it is most essential. Yet to-day there are more weakly and dyspeptic pastors than in any other occupation. This should be remedied. Your pastor's work depends in a great degree on his health, and if he looks pale and worn, if he seems unusually tired and exhausted after a day's service, it is your duty to release him from his work and allow him to recover his strength.

But you should not be without a pastor in the meantime. To-day there is plenty of willing material in our college boys, who must return to Wake Forest in September, that will most acceptably fill many vacancies. Thus will all be benefited—the pastor, the church, and by no means least, the deserving young student, whom you have helped and encouraged. Our ministerial students should never be forced to resort to other occupations for want of a good field, and by this means he can find good, practical, congenial, spiritual employment during vacation.

THE GEARY LAW—AN EXPLANATION.

It has come to be the popular fault of our times that judgment is reached and passed on everything without mature consideration. A law is passed, and is condemned before it is known what the law is. This can be accounted for in many ways. People are naturally prone to prejudice, and the press of our country, through questionable motives, is given to leading the people by prejudice through misrepresentation of facts. And this was never more truly the case than with the Act of May, 1892, commonly known as the Geary Law.

WHAT THE LAW IS.

The Geary Law was passed as much for the protection of our resident Chinese as for the protection of American citizens. By the Exclusion Bill of 1880 it was provided "that Chinese laborers who were then in the United States should be allowed to go and come of their own free will, and should be accorded all the rights, privileges, immunities and exemptions which were accorded to the citizens and subjects of the most favored nations." That the great object of the Geary Law was to enforce the above has never been known by the great number of opponents of the bill. But let us see.

The law of 1880 to exclude Chinese laborers from our shores promised protection as above stipulated to all Chinese who were in this country at the time of the enactment of the law, but guaranteed nothing to those who should be smuggled into our confines contrary to the law. Yet statistics showed that the Chinese continued to come in, and it can be easily seen that to distinguish those who rightfully deserved protection from those who were unlawfully among us, some means must be devised. And the Geary Law is the result. If the Chinamen who were lawfully residents of the United States would comply with this law we are sure the government could easily afford them those rights and that protection which they deserve, and which was promised them in 1880. But with Chinese coming in each year unlawfully our government could not distinguish the deserving from the undeserving. Therefore, among other things of lesser import, it was stipulated, first, that all Chinese who were here, and who desired the protection of our government, should register; certainly no more than is required of our citizens by a majority of our States; second, that he should have his picture taken; and third, that he should carry this picture along with a certificate of registration on his person. This was by no means degrading, onerous or unnecessary. From the resemblance which all Chinamen bear to one another, no other means of identifying them than by photographs could be devised. We had tried the description plan under the law of 1880, and found it grossly defective.

Now if the law had placed a tax on the Chinese, if we had made compliance with it difficult or burdensome, some of the outcries might be justifiable. But we asked them only to do no more than could be expected both for their protection and the welfare of the country. The law provided that the officers should go to the Chinaman wherever he was and afford him every facility for compliance with the law without expense or burden to him.

Under the old law the Chinese were subject to arrest at any time on the charge of having come illegally into the country. This law assures him, under the seal of the government, a right to live among us in peace and immunity. He has only to show his picture and certificate to obtain the rights and privileges of the citizens of the most favored nations.

The question of Chinese trade, of the constitutionality of the bill, of cheap labor, and slave labor, and many other questions, cannot be brought into an intelligent discussion of this law; they were settled in the treaty of 1880. This law had for its primary and only object the identity of those Chinese who were here according to law, that we might distinguish them from those who were here contrary to law and who did not deserve our protection. Its object was to distinguish the innocent from the guilty, that the privileges guaranteed to the innocent in 1880 might be given them. Had the law of 1880 been observed, no "Geary law" would have been formulated.

We believe in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, but we also believe that a nation's first duty is to enforce its laws for the protection of its citizens, that they may enjoy the blessings of life, liberty and free institutions in their own country before all others.

Talks About Law—No. 13.

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

LAWYERS.

A quaint old friend used to say to me that lawyers often got the reputation of being liars because the clients saw their own image reflected in the lawyer's utterance.

At this time, there being no controversy as to whether a lawyer can be an honest man, we will consider the duty and the importance of the office of an attorney-at-law. We say "office," because a lawyer is an officer of the court. He takes an oath as such and he obtains license to practice.

One of the prime duties of a lawyer is to discourage strife and to encourage peace and good feeling. One client enfuriated and mulcted in costs because of wilfully bad advice will permanently injure the reputation and the earning capacity of the most successful lawyer. Mr. Counsellor Pleydell, indulging in the pastimes of High Jinks and receiving Col. Mannering and Dandie Dinmont, the doughty Scotchman, was an honor to the profession, albeit a trifle convivial.

"Now, you looby," said the lawyer, "say in two words what you've got to say."

"Aweel, sir," said Dandie, not a whit disconcerted by the roughness of the reception, "We're at the auld wark o' the marches again, Jock o' Dawston Cleugh and me. Ye see we march on the tap o' Touthop rigg after we pass the Pomoragrains; for the Pomoragrains and Slackenspool and Bloodylaws, they come in there and they belong to the Peel; but after ye pass Pomoragrains at a muckle great saucer-headed, cutlugged stane, that they call Charlies Chuckie, there Dawston Cleugh and Charlies-hope they march. Now, I say, the march rins on the tap o' the hill where the wind and water shears; but Jock o' Dawston Cleugh again, he contravenes that, and says that it hauds down by the auld drove-road that gaes awa by the Knot o' the Gate ower to Keeldarward—and that makes an unco difference."

"And what difference does it make, friend?" said Pleydell. "How many sheep will it feed?"

"Ou, no mony," said Dandie, scratching his head; "it's lying high and exposed—it may feed a hog, or aiblins twa in a good year."

"And for this grazing, which may be worth about five shillings a-year, you are willing to throw away a hundred pound, or two?"

"Na, sir, it's no for the value of the grass," replied Dinmont, "it's for justice."

"My good friend," said Pleydell, "justice, like charity, should begin at home. Do you justice to your wife and family, and think no more about the matter."

Dinmont still lingered, twisting his hat in his hand—"It's no for that, sir—but I would like ill to be bragged wi' him;—he threeps he'll bring a score o' witnesses and mair—and I'm sure there's as mony will swear for me as for him, folk that lived a' their days upon the Charlies-hope, and wadna like to see the land lose its right."

"Zounds, man, if it be a point of honor," said the lawyer, "why don't your landlords take it up?"

"I dinna ken, sir" (scratching his head), "the lairds are unco neighborly, and Jock and me cannot get them to yoke thegither."

"Confound you, why don't you take good cudgels and settle it?"

"Od, sir," answered the farmer, "we tried that three times already * * * we're baith gey good at singlestick, and it couldna weel be judged."

"Then take broad swords, * * * as your fathers did before you," said the counsel learned in the law.

"Aweel, sir, if ye think it wadna be again the law, it's a' ane to Dandie."

"Hold! hold!" exclaimed Pleydell, "we shall have another Lord Soulis' mistake—Pr'ythee, man, comprehend me; I wish you to consider how very trifling and foolish a lawsuit you wish to engage in."

"Ay, sir," said Dandie, in a disappointed tone. "So ye winna take on wi' me, I'm doubting?"

"Me! not I—Go home, go home, take a pint and agree."

Pleydell's success as a lawyer is not to be wondered at; nor are his descendants all dead yet; and many a Dandie Dinmont survives as our court calendar abundantly attests.

Says a great Judge: "There is no profession, after that of the sacred ministry, in which a high-toned morality is more imperatively necessary than that of the law." Nor is there any profession in which success and real worth are more often synonymous. No man can rise without the confidence and good opinion of the members of his own profession, "like the king's name on the field of battle, it is a tower of strength; it is the title of legitimacy."

Perhaps people generally are disposed to look upon the profession of the law as one that does not tend to ennoble, because lawyers espouse either side of any cause, depending upon the mere question of which side first secures his services. To simply call the roll of those men who have been foremost in human endeavor and whose names are written highest in liberty's story will refute the insinuation.

Of Presidents of the United States all but four were lawyers, and up to 1843 eighty-two of the peerages of England, we are told, sprung from the law. A Henry exclaiming, "If that be treason, make the most of it"; a Mansfield almost divinely adjudicating that the air of England is too pure for a slave to breathe; a Marshall welding the Union together by declaring them to be an indestructible Union of indestructible States; the great Commoner, defying the Throne, cheering the fainting cause of liberty, "If I were an American as I am an Englishman while a foreign foe were on my soil, I would never lay down my arms—no, never, never!"; and Curran and Grattan and Plunket and a host of Irish patriots, sounding the depths of poverty and danger in behalf of oppressed innocency—these are a few of the lawyers' title deeds to greatness. But if our inheritance is great, our responsibility is greater.

But there are weighty reasons why a lawyer shall appear on either side of any civil cause and for the defendant in any criminal cause. The State has able counsel to prosecute in criminal cases, and no man ought to undertake the prosecution except where the case is plain.

Suppose that Lawyer Jones were to refuse to appear for a prisoner in a case if he thought him guilty. Then suppose that all the other lawyers were also to refuse, what would be the result? Why, practically, the lawyers would be the jury. Every man is entitled to a fair trial according to the law of the land.

We once heard a slander of the good wife of a lawyer. A man was charged with brutally murdering his wife. The lawyer was employed to defend. Going home that night, the lawyer's wife was quite surprised that her husband would represent such a brute. After much talk the lawyer said, "Well, my dear, he has just paid me a thousand dollars and with part of the money I bought you a seal skin cloak, but as you object, I will return the fee and countermand the order for the cloak." She was touched and replied, "I believe I would say a word for the poor fellow!"

Considering the money expended in educating one for the practice of law, the cost of books, and a certain style which is required of all lawyers, they are the poorest paid class of our citizens. Poverty is one of their badges of distinction. "He lived easy, he worked hard, he died poor," is the epitaph over most of their graves. To some, attaining judicial office, may Wolsey's prayer be not inapplicable:

"May he . . . do justice,
For truth's sake and his conscience; that his bones,
When he has run his course, and sleeps in blessings,
May have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on him."

A Fling at the Flingers.

This is not a very pious looking caption I will admit. But I want to second Brother Broughton's call for peace and at the same time give vent to a long pent-up desire to throw a few stones at those who are in that business. Allow me for this once to indulge in the very thing I condemn: let me grumble at the grumblers.

We are certainly far into the winter of our discontent; it is the day of the disgruntled, their heels are in the air. The social, political and religious atmospheres are all alike charged with the poison. Finding fault and suspecting something wrong have become the fashion. A brave majority of our citizens never feel so well as when finding fault with the men they have elected to make their laws. Recently there have been a number of fires in my town, and the style now is to suspect very wisely and very darkly that every man whose house is burned set it on fire himself for the insurance. This form of infidelity, this lack of faith in men is working untold harm.

Pandora must have opened her box again, and turned loose on the world another evil in the form of the modern cheap critic. He is the autocrat at all tables, who, with consequential air and one wave of the hand, settles all questions from the Vatican by way of London to ——— the place where his throne is. In fact, he is pretty well recognized as the puissant brave who rushes in where angels walk with careful tread. It does not require a teaspoonful of brains and much less religion to find fault and interject a suspicion that there is something wrong. At bottom the man who is ever showing people their sorry condition without doing something to relieve them is mean. He has filled them with doubt and discontent and left nothing in place of faith and a mind at rest.

I would give anything if I could go back to my childhood when I had a simple faith in the editors, preachers and the men who control affairs in general. Why in certain quarters I am afraid to express my appreciation of a brother preacher lest I hear the "Yes, but ——," with the Iago like insinuation that will poison my feelings of appreciation. The disparaging remarks made by preachers about each other would lead one to say, "Turn the rascals out of the penitentiary and put the preachers and 'members of the Board' in their place."

Every department of our work has suffered from this small criticism with a fling in it. Every now and then you see a designing reference to the self-important college student. True, many conceited men come from the colleges. But why don't the critics, flinging small shot, say something of the fools who never went to college and yet parade themselves with disgusting conceit? Why don't they "tote fair?" Another gun of diminutive caliber will fire a shot of facetious smartness at the "Smart Alex from the Seminary." Why no shot for the "Smart Alex" who never went to the Seminary? Some of the brethren have grave fears that the young man who goes to the Seminary will fall into the awful snare of imitating Dr. Broadus or some other member of the faculty; or that they will get into grooves and lose their originality. Imitation is always damaging, but why not be a little agitated over the young men who stay at home, lest they imitate Elder Fogg, Moderator of Muddy Creek Association? Why can't anybody see that if the man is of the sort that imitates and runs in grooves that it is only a question of who shall be his model for imitation, and what grooves he shall run in? Why does the man who didn't go to college feel it his duty to fling at the one who did go; and why does the man who didn't go to the Seminary look so darkly wise and suggest that he better take a little "swamp theology" as he did? And on the other hand, why does the man who has been to these institutions, indulge the same spirit toward those who have not? It is so wholly wrong and mean that one feels that he has lowered himself to notice it.

The campaign of Foreign Missions is only well begun, and a large part of our surplus energy is employed quarreling—not discussing—but quarreling over "methods of missions." Men stickle for a plan while the heathen perish. Like surgeons standing over a wounded man disputing about what color of bandage to use while his life-blood runs away. The missionaries with novel plans fling stones at the brethren, and the brethren fling them back, and away they go. If some of the men who have written and canvassed so much, had spent the time preaching the gospel to the heathen, had sown more seed and less dragon's teeth, we believe there would be more sheaves to garner in on the great gathering day.

At pretty regular intervals, you see a missile intended for the Board of Missions and Sunday schools. There are constant insinuations that there is something dark. They say they are "turning on the light," but it is more like turning on the spite.

Who can wonder that secretaries are resigning? The wonder is, that more do not resign. I have no doubt that there is some foundation for the complaints made. You can't account for so much noise without some such supposition.

The charge is that there is too much boss-ism. But each self-appointed boss presumes to order the Board to give him an itemised statement above what the State Convention requires. Can't the brethren be quiet and keep on their clothes till the Convention meets and have it settled there? What we need is freer discussion on the Convention floor. That is the place where the old and experienced should be heeded, and also where it is not a crime to be a young man. Let the majority decide these questions, and then let us forever after hold our peace. We need less of the "visiting brother's" oratory and a better understanding of each other as brethren at work in North Carolina.

Who objects to light? But let it, like the light of the sun, bring with its ray the warm and healing balm. "The Sun of Righteousness" has "healing in his wings."

H. L. [illegible]

Laurinburg, June 30, 1893.

The Love of Christ.

"There was kneeling one day in the church a poor collier lad, some ten or twelve years of age. His hair was rough, his clothes were torn and ragged; his feet were bare. His hands were clasped as in prayer; a sad, wistful look was on his face. I knelt by his side. 'I want to be good,' he said. 'I want to belong to the Saviour, but I could trust him if only I could be sure that he loves me.'

"His had been a hard life in the world, poor heart; how shall I convince him of the fact of the love of God? I spoke to him of friends and playmates. 'Is there any one you have ever known who, if you had to die, would be willing to die in your stead to save you?' A moment's silence, and then with a sweet smile he looked up and said: 'I believe my mother would.'

"In that brief pause he had looked back on life and measured a mother's love. Perhaps there passed before his mind the [illegible] of her toil late at night to mend his clothes or earn to-morrow's bread, and, [illegible] the reality of a mother's love, [illegible] him it would be strong [illegible]

"'Then see what Jesus has done for you,' I spoke to him of the bleeding [illegible] of the crucified. He bowed [illegible] hands, as he said: 'I see [illegible] again, and trust him.'

"This was the victory [illegible] won in that young heart. [illegible] us all."—Christian Observer.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 19, 1893.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

"What Baptists Believe," by the late J. L. Burrows, will be given to every new subscriber to the BIBLICAL RECORDER who will pay $2.00 in advance for a years' subscription. We will also give the book to every old subscriber who will pay his subscription to date and a year in advance.

Think of it! Your denominational paper, the subscription price of which is $2.00, one year, and a neatly bound book of over a hundred pages, containing a clear and fair expression of what Baptists believe and practice, all for the price of the paper.

Remember, this offer is to new and old subscribers alike.

CHRIST'S PREACHING.

There was something peculiarly attractive about Christ and his preaching. Even his enemies, sent to apprehend him, were confounded, and had to confess to those that sent them, "Never man spake as this man speaketh." We are told in another place, "And the common people heard him gladly." It would be well, then, to mention briefly what we conceive to have been some of the peculiarities of Christ's preaching, that we may know better the secret of his power. Among others we may mention the following:—

1. His intense earnestness, accompanied always by an abiding sense of the importance of his message and his mission. It is almost useless to say that he believed what he preached. His mission was so important that he was always "about his Father's business." The great object of that mission was to lift a lost and ruined world back to God. During his brief earthly ministry he laid broad and deep the splendid foundations on which those who preach his gospel have ever built; and how grand the words spoken just before his death, "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do!"

2. His power to adorn the truths of the gospel in simple words, accompanied by striking figures and illustrations. One great secret why the common people heard him gladly is to be found in the fact that he spoke plainly. He did not dabble in science, philosophy or politics. He did not crack jokes; did not announce his subjects beforehand, deal in sensationalism, or use any of the plans now so common to draw crowds and entertain them. In plain and simple sentences that street boys, camel-drivers, or poor laborers could understand, he opened up the grand truths that are redeeming the world, sending joy to numberless firesides, and scattering, even now, the darkness of heathenism. His style, we think, was quiet and undemonstrative, and mostly on the conversational order. He has taught his preachers in all ages the value and importance of face to face contact with men. There are some preachers who are mighty in the pulpit, but weak out of it. House-to-house, face-to-face work, we admit, is often harder than pulpit ministrations; but if we would be like Christ, we must do much of this kind of work.

3. He was fearless. Knowing that his popularity as a man depended largely on the good opinion of the Jewish leaders, the scribes and the Pharisees, he did not hesitate to denounce their sin and their hypocrisy. He did not inveigh blindly against the powers that were; nor did he attack men on account of their politics; but on account of their sins. He seldom condescended to deal in personalities. He did not rail against the Romans for conquering Palestine, nor did he make the least effort to persuade the Jews to rid themselves of the Roman yoke. Some modern preachers could certainly study Christ's example along these lines with immense profit to themselves and immense relief to those whose lot it is to hear them.

4. He was in thorough sympathy with those to whom he preached. His great heart went out toward the lost souls all about him. When he rested at the well of Jacob he was not too tired to preach a gem of a sermon to one hearer, and she a great sinner. "Unto the poor the gospel is preached" was a fixed part of his plan of work. Let it be told over and over again that those who would win men must love them, must show that they are in sympathy with them. While it occurs to us, we would like here another word of warning to our [illegible] young brethren who are just entering [illegible] life-work, that of preaching the gospel. [illegible] of them have enjoyed superior educa[illegible] and social advantages at home, at the [illegible] the seminary. Let not your [illegible] with cultured men and women place [illegible] sympathy with the poor, the rude and the uncultured men and women, among whom your lot in after years may be to some extent cast. If you fail here, your ministry may be comparatively a failure also. Christ loved sinful, degraded, fallen men; so should you, if you would win them.

DONT'S AGAIN.

Don't be afraid to call a spade by its name, and don't be afraid to tell a sinner that he is one, if that is your opinion of him. Is there not actual danger that our preachers carry their ideas of politeness and refinement so far as to preach to men for years who are notoriously wicked without ever condemning clearly the sins of which they know they are guilty? Did it never occur to the soft brethren that even wicked men will respect them the more in the end for dealing honestly and fearlessly with their sins. In doing so, however, it is well to avoid personalities.

Don't be so anxious to know what people think of your sermons as to fish for opinions soon after they are delivered. If you need the comfort and encouragement that come from appreciative remarks on the part of your members, God will move some of them to make them, and if they come in this way they will indeed strengthen and comfort you, if you have the Master's glory at heart.

Don't place your pastor in a parsonage or permit him to rent a home where there is no fruit nor flowers, and then regale your appetite and taste for twelve months at the time without it ever dawning on your pate that he and his good wife and little ones might enjoy some of these good things with you. There are church members (tell it not in Gath!) that will consume or sell wagon loads of nice palatable fruit and never gladden the pastors home by nice presents that would comfort the outer man. Now don't flare up and say, "Our pastor is not an object of charity." That may be true, but he ought to be an object of love; and if you loved your pastor you could not feast month after month on the good things God has given you without gladly offering him some things needful for the body. How would it look for a husband to go down town daily and feast on choice fruit and send nothing to his wife and children? The husband that loved his family would never do so. But is not this the way you treat your pastor? We have read an old Book which says, "See that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently."

Don't join the church and then cause an everlasting worry to pastor and members in the way of getting you to attend church meetings, pay your dues, &c. What did you join the church for if you expect to act in this way? The Saviour himself would have you hot or cold. Why should you wait for the pastor and deacons and committees to be perpetually running after you, coddling you, bolstering you up, scolding you, citing you to "appear at the next meeting," &c., &c. What a miserable farce it all is! How long will it go on? Ah, brother, be one thing or another; be hot or cold. Do your duty as a church member, or else get out of the church, and make no pretensions in the line of religion. It will be better for you and for all concerned for you to pursue this course. From cold, do-nothing, stay-at-home church members, may the good Lord deliver us!

A BRIGHTER MORROW.

What an appalling state of affairs is represented to the reader of the telegraphic columns of our daily papers! All the nations of the earth seem involved in ceaseless turmoil and strife. England grappling with the Irish, the social and the financial questions; France threatened by Parisian rioters and anarchists; Germany ruled by an emperor whom she cannot trust, and oppressed to desperation by grinding laws; Russia, as ever, filled by nihilists; Italy in the midst of financial embarrassments and bank scandals; Australia and America in the throes of dangerous money crises and labor agitation, not to speak of the petty revolutions of our various Southern republics, and the thousand and one minor evils that infest our civilization everywhere! Verily, this is a day of wars and rumors of wars, and no man knows what a day will bring forth.

What a difference would there be could the world's leaders learn the sage counsel of Wolsey:—

"Cromwell, I charge thee fling away ambition,—
* * * * * * * * *
Be thy country's, thy God's, and truth's."

What a change would be wrought could the people the world over emulate the simple life and simple faith of the Nazarene! What a day that would be! And, my friend, that day is coming. To-day is God's crucible, a brighter 'morrow shall dawn, and it is not far off. Be faithful and trust and hope, the brighter 'morrow shall come, for God hath promised it.

DEATH OF REV. R. R. DAY.

His many acquaintances throughout the State, all of whom had come to regard him as a most promising man of God, will hear of the death of R. R. Day with deep regret. He died at Scotland Neck Wednesday, July 13th, of fever, after a very short illness, and his remains were shipped to Surry county, his home, for burial.

In his career Bro. Day had shown great promise as a Christian minister. Entering Wake Forest College in 1890, he had led a most exemplary life as a student, preaching to the churches whenever he could, and making the most of his opportunities in all circumstances. He was supplying for Bro. Vann at the time of his death.

Surely God works in a mysterious way. Denny, Gaddy and Day, three of Wake Forest's most promising young ministers, called from the vineyard during the past year, before their work was fairly begun.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. E. L. Pell of the Bible Reader was in our office recently.

....Rev. J. R. Jones was engaged in a revival at Milton last week.

....Dr. T. E. Skinner is in the city, after having spent two weeks at Morehead.

....Dr. Taylor of Wake Forest College was in the city last week in the interest of the College.

....Rev. Jasper Howell, Jr., has been engaged in evangelistic work in and around Greeneville, Tenn.

....Rev. L. Johnson of Rockingham is engaged in a series of meetings with Rev. James A. Smith, Fair Bluff.

....The managing editor goes to Baltimore to day to have a surgical operation performed.—N. C. Baptist, July 12.

....We take pleasure in giving our readers a very interesting letter from Sister Emma Willoughby, written at Chautauqua, N. Y.

....Prof. John Duckett has charge of Robeson Institute for the coming year. This is the school which was endowed by Bro. Melke.

....Rev. J. B. Harrell, after two and a half years of faithful and successful labor around Elizabeth City, has resigned his churches there.

....Rev. J. A. Mundy, D. D., has been granted a vacation by the first church, Greenville, S. C., which he is spending at Cæsar's Head, N. C.

....Mr. Stephen McIntyre, recent graduate of Wake Forest College, has been chosen principal of the Louisburg Male Academy for the ensuing year.

....All who expect to attend the meetings of the Tar River Union are requested to write Bro. L. W. Bagley, Littleton, N. C., that homes may be secured for them.

....Rev. A. T. Creath, a graduate of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, was ordained to the ministry at High Hills Baptist church, Sussex county, Va., recently.

....We call attention to our list of the Associations of the Western N. C. Baptist Convention that are to meet during the next three months. Any needed corrections will be gladly made.

....Rev. J. L. White, aided by the well-known evangelist, H. M. Wharton, D. D., of Baltimore, began a series of meetings in his church at Asheville on Sunday, 16th. The brethren look forward to glorious results.

....Rev. A. M. Sims of Texas has accepted the call to the Baptist Tabernacle, this city, and will take charge Sept. 1st. We congratulate the church, and extend Bro. Sims a most cordial welcome to this State and this city.

....The following brethren have changed their postoffice addresses during the past few days: Rev. J. H. Hildreth from Bayboro to Wilmington, N. C., and Rev. W. E. Warren from Stuart, Va., to Sutherlin, Va.

....We regret that we have not space in this issue for two interesting letters from Rev. A. T. Robertson, D. D., concerning the Seminary, and Rev. L. Johnson on the Pee Dee Association. Our readers may look for them in our next issue.

....We return thanks to the American Baptist Publication Society for a copy of their Anniversary Points and Addresses. The pamphlet contains the substance of the proceedings at the Denver Anniversary, and is of value and interest.

....The announcement of Richmond Female College appears in another column. This excellent institution has just closed a successful year, and we are glad to hear that the President looks forward to a most prosperous session next fall.

....Rev. C. C. Haymore has enlarged his mission work. He preaches twice every Sunday and sometimes three times. He has two mission points besides Germanton. The congregations are good, and good Sunday-schools have been organized.

....The seventy seventh annual report of the American Bible Society tells of very successful work accomplished last year. Receipts were $578,980.75, and the expenditures $56,587.01; $155,238.32 were appropriated for the foreign department.

....Our beloved Sister Yates is resting for awhile at Minnewaska, Ulster county, New York, and is, we are pained to report, quite feeble. We trust it is the Lord's will to spare her useful life for many years, and that her strength will be speedily restored.

....Rev. R. L. Patton has been called to the pastorate of the church at Morganton, and has accepted. This pastorate will occupy his entire time, so he gives up his school work. His church will give $200 for Orphanage and missions this year against $30 last year.

....In a pastorate of three years at Clinton, Elder O. P. Meeks has received about 145 members into the church there, and 118 of them by baptism. The church was organized Jan. 7th, 1855, and has never had but three pastors, Elders Hugh McAlpine, J. L. Stewart and O. P. Meeks.

....Deacon William G. Brown of New Hampshire was, perhaps, the most famous Bible distributer in the world. He died at the age of seventy-six years, and had been engaged in colportage work since 1849. During that period he had distributed more than 120,000 copies of the Scriptures.

....The memorial address on the life and character of Lieut.-General D. H. Hill, delivered under the auspices of the ladies of the North Carolina Memorial Association, May 10th, 1893, by Hon. A. C. Avery, is on our table in pamphlet form. The address is in every way worthy of the old hero.

....We were glad to see Rev. R. T. Bryan of China in Raleigh last week. He is already much improved in health, and in excellent spirits. The family of Bro. Bryan will spend the summer at Waynesville, N. C., but Bro. Bryan will visit all the Associations held in the State in August and September.

....We are in receipt of a "Bible Text Book of Christian Doctrine," for use in Sunday schools, by Dr. P. S. Henson of Chicago. The author has compiled considerable valuable biblical information in a small book, and has so arranged it that it can be appreciated by all. Price, 25 cts; per hundred, $20.00.

....Rev. John Jasper, colored, world famous as the exponent of the "sun do move" theory, is very dangerously ill at his home in Richmond, Va. Whatever may be said about his theories, through all his ignorance gleams a light of faith and trust in God, which would well become many of our most learned "progressive thinkers."

....Rev. A. D. Hunter of Carrsville, Va., will be in Wake county from July 17th to Aug. 2d, among his people and friends. He can be addressed at Cary, N. C. Bro. Hunter has met with no small success in Virginia, and has a good church and Sunday-school. He writes: "I am glad each week to get the RECORDER. I watch every interest of the Baptists in North Carolina."

....Revs. D. W. Herring, T. L. Blalock and Frank Royall, who intend to depart for China as missionaries in November next, independent of the Board, held a grand meeting in Bell's Chapel, Sampson county, recently. Large audiences attended the exercises, and the brethren were greatly encouraged. Revs. R. E. Peele, W. E. Crocker, and others, were in attendance.

....Dr. George B. Taylor, superintendent of the Italian mission, writes a beautiful and a charming letter to the Examiner. He says: "This is seed time rather than harvest time, still souls are converted, new churches are formed, and existing churches are growing in graces and in numbers." The work of the Southern Baptist Convention in Italy is gaining ground year by year. Bro. Taylor is a wise builder.—American Baptist.

....The Presbyterians of the northern United States have set as the mark for the year 1893-'94 $1,200,000 for foreign missions alone. The home mission receipts last year, including the work among the freedmen, went far beyond the million line. The Indian missions have just been transferred from the foreign to the home mission board, just as it is with us Baptists. The zeal of the Presbyterian brethren should provoke many.—Examiner.

....Rev. F. C. McConnell of Georgia has been elected assistant corresponding secretary of the Home Mission Board. Bro. McConnell is about thirty seven years old, and has been the successful pastor of the Gainesville (Ga.) church for four or five years. A brother in Georgia, who knows him well, writes that he "is full of zeal and is always busy in his Master's work." The appointment is generally regarded as most excellent.—Religious Herald.

....We learn with deep regret that Prof. J. B. Carlyle, of the chair of Latin at Wake Forest College, is seriously ill with malarial fever at Leadvale, Tenn., where he and his wife are spending the vacation. Shortly after reaching Leadvale he spent a day in the county, and while examining a farm was overcome with the heat, and has been ill ever since. We join his friends throughout the State in hope and prayer that he may speedily recover. Wake Forest can ill afford to lose his services even in vacation time.

....According to the recent census there are 2,077,616 white Baptists in the United States, of which only 800,000 are Northern Baptists. The value of the Northern church property is $49,524,504; of the Southern, only $18,152,509. There are 1,362,140 colored Baptists in the country. Combining all North and South, white and colored, we have the following totals: Membership, 3,466,278; organizations, 36,757; edifices, 31,638; seating capacity, 9,487,278; value of property, $76,852,600. These figures are suggestive of many things to the careful thinker.

The S. S. Chautauqua.

As an evangelizing power the Sunday-school cannot be estimated. In the class the teacher talks face to face with the individual; and he knows each individual in the class. Hence he can suit the message to the individual. The whole business of a church is to make disciples—to teach the nations. So our highest duty as Christians is to make known the Word of God. The church, or the individual Christian, that is not spreading the knowledge of salvation is an anomaly whose future is anything but enviable. Many Christians engage in Sunday-school work because it is fashionable without realizing its real worth. Many real good Christians are nominal teachers in our Sunday-schools who do not, for a moment, realize that they are the custodians of immortal interests. They go to their classes without preparation in study or prayer. They know nothing about the lesson, and hence teach worse than nothing. I candidly believe that we have Sunday school teachers, and even whole schools, that are a curse to the cause they represent. Many persons who are wasting time and opportunity thus are Christians and would do better if they were shown how and the necessity for careful preparation. The great object of the Sunday-school is

TO TEACH THE WORD.

The lesson is the great thing in the Sunday-school. Singing and praying are good in their place, but the lesson is the thing after all. Teachers need help. Superintendents need to compare notes with others. We all need just the help that the rest can give. It is to meet this want that the Sunday-school Chautauqua is called; and we believe that if it is attended by those engaged in the work of teaching and managing Sunday-schools, it will, in the course of a few years, more than double our power in the State, and most of all greatly glorify God.

A Sunday-school Association or mass-meeting, at its best, begets only an ephemeral enthusiasm and leaves the enquiring teacher to plod on in the same old beaten track. But in the Chautauqua, methods of teaching will be illustrated by actually teaching the lessons. I can learn more about filling a tooth in one hour by seeing some one do it, than I can by a week of lectures on the same subject. So I believe that we will all learn more about teaching a Scripture lesson to a class by seeing some one do it than by weeks of mass-meeting speeches. Only an earnest desire to spread the Master's kingdom has prompted the originators of this movement to call for their fellow-workers to come together that we may help each other. Now, it is to be hoped that every lover of the work will lay hold with a helping hand.

Attend the Chautauqua yourself and try to get others to attend; for our opportunities will not be long—our work is most important—and we want to do our best that the Lord may say to us at the beautiful gate, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

HOPED-FOR RESULTS.

1. We shall know and love each other better.
2. We shall know more of God's precious book.
3. We shall teach better.
4. We shall kick less.
5. We shall help our pastors more.
6. Our pastors will preach better.
7. We shall be happier, brighter Christians.
8. We shall win more souls to Christ.

Letter From Wake Forest College.

Vacation, this year, owing to our early Commencement, is longer than usual. Yet just half of it will have elapsed the day this paper is printed. How swiftly the days speed by, especially when they are busy days. Such mine have been. From many quarters come requests for information about the College. The indications are that we shall have a goodly number of new students in September. It is true that the competition for the patronage of our Baptist young men is fiercer than I have ever known it. And I have never known money to be so hard to get since I can remember. But on the other hand I doubt whether the loyalty of our friends has ever been more manifest and active. And the very hard times, in an agricultural State like ours, are an argument for education, with reflecting people. And there is something imperative about the education of our young men and women. Some other things on which we would like to spend money, if we had it, can be made to wait. But we cannot recall the passing years of the young. It is now or never with them.

Within a few days every old student of the College whose address is known to us, and many others besides, will receive a copy of the July number of the Wake Forest Student. When you have read your copy hand it to some one else,—some young man, perhaps, whom you would like to see at Wake Forest.

The Faculty are scattered far and wide. Prof. Poteat, with the thirst for knowledge of a true Naturalist, is hard at work at the Marine Laboratory in Mass. I can envy the young men who are to reap some of the results of his work. This, he says in a letter which I received yesterday, "is interesting and profitable." Prof. Royall is visiting friends in Columbus county. His friends are hoping that he will be greatly strengthened and invigorated by the rest. Prof. Carlyle has been quite sick in Tennessee. I am glad to say that the last accounts of his condition are favorable. His illness is doubtless due to exposure to malaria in the south-eastern part of the State after Commencement. He is a most efficient worker for the College in the field as well as in his lecture room, and I miss his efficient aid. Prof. Lanneau is spending the summer among the mountains of Western North Carolina. Professors Maske and Sikes are at their homes in Richmond and Union counties, having returned from the World's Fair. Their work along the C. C. Railroad will be heard from. Professors Mills, Sledd and Brewer are on College Hill.

The tidings of the death of Bro. R. R. Day of Surry county, greatly shocked and distressed us. He was supplying for Bro. Vann at Scotland Neck. His body was carried home by Bro. Biggs of Scotland Neck and Bro. McKaughan. Bro. Day was a good man. He was consecrated to his work. We had anticipated for him a long life of exceptional usefulness. How little I thought when I told him good bye before he left that it was for the last time. May the Lord raise up among the churches more than one like him to take his place.

I continue to receive many letters of congratulation concerning our Law School. Some extracts from these may be given in the next RECORDER. We hear of students who are going to attend it, too. As soon as it is generally known, we shall hear of others.

Friends have been so kind in helping me complete the file of the Wake Forest Student for binding, that I only lack three numbers. These are for September and October, 1882, and November, 1883. Please look, if you have old copies of the Magazine, and, if you can find them, send them to me.

"Our Board and Its Work."

WHAT THE BRETHREN SAY OF IT.

The tract on the work of the State Mission Board is a thesaurus of information.

J. K. FANT.

I have read the tract, "Our Board and Its Work," with interest. I think it a clear statement of the Board and its work. It contains just the information a pastor needs if he had not gotten it before from the minutes of the Convention. The fact is so many people don't know about the work because they will not inform themselves, and they will not now. It will be in the millennium when brethren will not have to be taught, but when all shall know. I am very thankful for the tract. I intend to use it for all it is worth.

R. VAN DEVENTER.

Send me one hundred copies of "Our Board and Its Work." I believe if our people only knew the facts, that our contributions would be greatly increased.

BRAXTON CRAIG.

"Our Board and Its Work" is what my people need, and if it will not be too much to ask, I want to put two hundred of them in the families of my six hundred members.

C. W. SCARBOROUGH.

The little tract, "Our Board and Its Work" has been received. Shall be glad to have forty or fifty copies to distribute among my people. I believe the information in the tract will help to make our people more liberal and more hearty in their liberality. What we need is information for the masses.

THOS. CARRICK.

Send me a few copies of "Our Board and Its Work." I desire information on the mission work, and think I can distribute some in our church and Sunday-school, that may be the means of arousing some sleeper on the subject of missions.

D. F. PUTNAM.

We have received a very interesting tract from Rev. Dr. Durham, the Cor. Sec. of the Baptist State Convention relative to State Missions. The items are clustered together in a very readable manner and the tract is worth studying. It contains the names of the missionaries and their preaching stations and the sum raised for this work. The items of interest are valuable, and the work should be greatly helped by its general distribution.—Asheville Baptist.

I want to congratulate you on the altogether admirable pamphlet entitled "Our Board and Its Work." It is clear and succinct, and at the same time filled with inspiring facts as to the success of the Board and the progress of the denomination in practical work along all lines. May God's blessing continually rest upon you and the other members of the Board in the prosecution of this work. You may rely upon my hearty co operation and support as heretofore.

J. HARTWELL EDWARDS.

We have just received several copies of "Our Board and Its Work" from our beloved brother, Dr. Durham. It is an exponent of the wisdom and power of our brother in bringing all of our people in full sympathy with our State Board of Missions. We hope our good Bro. Durham will be seen for many years to come in the midst of our churches and associations. We want to see the old "Boss" at Maxton from Oct 31-Nov. 2, and Whiteville from Nov. 9-11.

J. A. SMITH.

Your tract is the very thing my people want. It gives in short the information they need. I can use it profitably. Send me fifty copies.

W. H. H. LAWHON.

I believe your tract, "Our Board and Its Work" distributed in our church will do good. They need to know more of the Board, and then they will certainly do more. Send me fifty copies.

W. J. DAVIS.

I am glad Brother Durham's little tract on the Mission Board and Its Work is so widely called for. I think it will do much good.

A Correction.

Bro. Bailey:—In a tract, entitled "Our Board and Its Work," published by Dr. Durham, an erroneous statement is made in reference to the mission work of the Newbern Baptist church, which, in justice to the church, should be corrected.

The Newbern Baptist church makes, as usual, its regular contributions to State Missions; but, in addition, it employs J. W. Rose, at a salary of $400 per annum, to do mission work in contiguous territory, not beyond a radius of thirty miles. This special work is under the management and control of a board appointed by the church, and is, in no sense, and never was intended to be, subject to the Atlantic Association, or its Executive Committee, or to the State Board.

When, therefore, Bro. Durham states, in his tract, that J. W. Rose sustains the same relation to "Our Board and Its Work," as the other missionaries in the Atlantic Association, except that he is paid by the church, he has been misled, and will, doubtless, welcome the correction.

J. W. Rose is the evangelist of the Newbern Baptist church, is exclusively sustained by the church, and, hence, under its exclusive control.

C. C. C.

Newbern, July 12, 1893.

REMARKS ON THE ABOVE.

I am glad Bro. Clark brings out the above facts. I know them all just as he represents them, and think the statement in the tract (see page 14) could not reasonably mislead any one. In said statement all that is said is: "J. W. Rose (per Newbern church), Croatan, Riverdale, Vanceboro, Cove Creek, Stony Branch, and Arnold's school-house."

But I am glad because it gives me an opportunity to state some facts about the mission work of local churches, and to give the two methods of work, one or the other of which has been, in the main, followed by the local churches doing special and extra mission work in this State.

FIRST METHOD.

For a Baptist church to do all or much of the needed mission work in reasonable reach of its own location through its own pastor and members without cost to the church, Association, or Mission Board of the Convention. Many of the churches have succeeded remarkably well in this method of work. The Scotland Neck church in this way has established several churches; the Goldsboro church has done the same; the Henderson church is now doing successfully a work of this kind; members of First church in Raleigh established the Second church, afterwards changed to the Baptist Tabernacle; members of the First and Tabernacle churches established the Fayetteville Street church; and now both are doing this kind of work. The First church has built a house in west Raleigh, and the Tabernacle has done the same in east Raleigh, where they have successful missions in progress. The First church, Wilmington, started the Brooklyn church in this way. The First church, Durham, established the Yates church, three miles west, the Rose of Sharon church, six miles north, Second church, West Durham, and Third church, East Durham. The Greensboro church has built a house in southeast Greensboro and is conducting a good mission there. The First church, Winston, started Broad Street church, and now both churches are doing the same kind of work in other parts of the town. Hundreds of country churches and their pastors have done the same kind of work, and have successfully occupied all or most of the territory in reasonable reach of their own churches. I am of the opinion, both from my experience as pastor and my observation as Secretary, that ten churches might do this kind of mission work where only one does do it. I wish, therefore, to commend most earnestly this method of work to the pastors and churches wherever it can be done.

SECOND METHOD.

For a Baptist church, in addition to paying its own pastor and giving liberally to the general work of State Missions, to employ, at their own expense, a preacher to do special mission work around them. Sometimes he is called "assistant" to the pastor, sometimes "colporter," sometimes "city missionary," and at other times, as in the case of Bro. Rose, where his work is largely in the adjacent country, he is called "a missionary," or as Bro. Clark calls Bro. Rose, an "evangelist." The Newbern church, and especially Bro. Clark as one of the prime movers in this work of his church, richly deserve much praise for this extra mission work they are doing in the destitution around them.

Many churches might wisely profit by this work of the Newbern church. We thank Pastor Ford and his faithful and historic church for this illustration of what can be done to give the gospel to the neglected neighborhoods about us.

Important Action.

Dear Recorder:—Let me call attention to an important action of the Tar River Association at its last session.

Report on Foreign Missions: "Resolved, That we undertake to raise one thousand dollars for Foreign Missions during the next Associational year."

Report on Home Missions. The report was adopted with the following resolution: "Moved that we undertake to raise fifteen hundred dollars during the year for Home Missions."

It is desired that the churches send delegates to the meeting in Littleton, July 28th, that we may take steps towards the accomplishment of our purpose as expressed in the Association. Fraternally,

Montgomery County Union Meeting.

This Union meets with Bethel church, Friday, July 28, 1893. Introductory sermon Friday, 11 o'clock a. m. by Rev. H. M. Ingram.

What is our duty to the destitute parts in our bounds? W. B. Owen and J. F. Crowder.

How and by whom are young church members to be trained? T. F. Haywood, Rev. G. O. Wilhoit.

Is family prayer a duty? Rev. H. M. Ingram, Haywood Morris.

What is the best method of calling a pastor, and what obligations are involved by the call? Prof. A. Harris, Rev. S. Fuquay.

Are not a great number of our people looking to the noise from the pulpit, rather than the pure gospel for their spiritual support? If so, how remedied? Rev. W. M. Bostick, J. M. Wright.

Preaching Sunday by Rev. W. M. Bostick.

J. L. MCMILLAN,
J. W. DIXON,
Committee.

To the Churches of the South Yadkin Association.

In the last issue of the RECORDER it is stated that the next Union Meeting of the S. Y. Association will convene with New Hope church, Iredell county, July 28th, 1893. At the last meeting of the Executive Board of the Association (thinking that the last session of the Union Meeting had failed to appoint a place for the next meeting), called a meeting at New Hope at the time indicated. But since that they have found out that they were mistaken. The committee on time and place at last session reported Fork church, Davie county, as the place. The Sunday-school and Orphanage picnic of Davie county convenes at Mocksville, Friday, July 28th. Hence, there will be no Union Meeting on Friday. The delegates can go to the picnic Friday and then to the Union Meeting on Saturday, July 29th, at Fork church, Davie county, seven miles distant from Mocksville.

Brethren will please note the change of place from New Hope to Fork church, and time from Friday, 28th, to Saturday, 29th. A full attendance is desired. Would be glad if the delegates and visitors would start in time and come by the Orphanage picnic.

S. J. TATUM, Chm'n Ex. Com.

Saturday 10 a. m.—1. Devotional exercises.

2. How can we develop Christian liberality. J. H. Vernon.

3. What are some of the greatest needs of our churches? A. L. Stough.

2 p. m.—1. Under what obligations as professors of religion are we to non-professors? Rufus Ford.

2. Question box.

8 p. m.—Orphanage.

Sunday.—State Missions at 10 a. m.—J. C. Whitty. Sermon at 11 by Bro. Edwards.

Delegates and visitors will be met at Morehead.

B. H. MATTHEWS.

Eastern Association.

SOUTHERN UNION.

The Southern Union of Eastern Association convenes with Masonboro church on Friday, July 28, at 3 p. m. Those coming by rail will be met by conveyances at Masonboro, crossing on Sea Coast Railroad at 10 a. m. and 3 p. m.

Introductory sermon by Rev. W. B. Oliver.

QUERIES.

1. Are we missionary in spirit or only in name? Rev. R. E. Peele and Bro. D. J. Corbett.
2. Are not our churches too slack in their discipline? Rev. M. C. Walton, Bro. B. S. Montford.
3. Are lady missionary societies in all our churches advisable? Rev. W. B. Oliver, Bro. J. C. Stevenson.
4. What ought to be the attitude of the church towards the saloon? Rev. F. T. Wooten, Bro. J. T. Bland.
5. Should not a member of the church be disciplined for the sin of omission as well as for the sin of commission? Rev. J. T. Jenkins, Bro. J. H. McDougald.

SECRETARY.

WESTERN UNION.

Delegates wishing to go by rail to the Western Union of the Eastern Association at Bethel church will be met at Magnolia by addressing in time W. J. Fryer, Taylor's Bridge, N. C.

O. P. MEEKS.

Beulah Association.

This body meets with the Washington Street church, Greensboro, N. C., August 8th, and a full attendance is desired. Reduced round-trip rates have been secured over the R. & D. Railroad from Milton, Durham, Ashboro, Salisbury and intermediate points, and tickets will be on sale from Aug. 7th to 9th inclusive, and good until the 12th.

Special rates have been obtained at the McAdoo House for any visitors who do not wish entertainment by the committee.

All delegates are requested to send their names and P. O. address at once (and before August 1st) to Greensboro, N. C., addressed to Dr. W. W. ROWE, Chm'n Committee on Hospitality.

Death of Mrs. George W. Purefoy.

Mrs. Lucy Purefoy, the venerable relict of the lamented Rev. George W. Purefoy, breathed her last on Saturday, the 8th inst., at the advanced age of seventy-eight years. Her illness was of short duration, and her dismission from time gentle and easy.

"So fades a summer cloud away,
So sinks the gale when storms are o'er;
So gently shuts the eye of day,
So dies a wave along the shore."

She survived her bereaved husband thirteen years. She was the faithful and affectionate companion of his earthly pilgrimage for nearly half a century. Their house was a noted one, among the Baptist brotherhood particularly, in the years gone by. They kept a large and commodious house, and dispensed a large and generous hospitality.

Bro. Purefoy was widely known and honored as an intelligent and able minister, a man of unusual practical wisdom and sound judgment, and many there were to seek his counsels in matters of doctrine and difficulties of church administration. For these and other reasons, the latch-string of his house, which was always hanging on the outside, was frequently pulled; but a hearty welcome awaited all comers. Of course, Bro. Purefoy was the conspicuous figure in all these entertainments; but the party who did most to make the administration of them so pleasant and satisfactory to all concerned was the quiet but bright and brave little woman, whose mortal remains we laid away to rest by the side of her devoted husband in the tranquil hours of last Sabbath evening. A large circle of kinspeople and friends lament her loss. It will be greatly felt and for a long time.

J. L. CARROLL.

Chapel Hill, July 10, 1893.

Letter from Chautauqua, N. Y.

Dr. C. T. Bailey. Dear Sir:—When I saw you last, you asked me to write you sometime. I have often thought of doing so since, but my numerous household duties, and my duties as a pastor's wife while at home in South Carolina, kept me too busy to write many extra letters. Our work there is a very important one. They had had short pastorates, and for a year none at all, until they were disorganized as to doing regular, systematic work. I mean the church at Marion village. All this had to be overcome, and while my husband often thought he was not the man for the place, the Lord seemed to direct otherwise, and now they are more united and are doing good work. Of course they used to raise more money by festivals and the like, but now they give more systematically.

Our Woman's Mission Society has given more during the past year by regular contributions than they ever raised before in a year. We have a good Sunday-school, a nice library purchased during the last fifteen months, and church newly painted and otherwise repaired in the meantime.

Mr. Willoughby serves three other churches besides, giving this one half of his time, the church at Conway one Sunday, and two churches five miles apart in the country, one in the morning and the other in the afternoon Saturday and Sunday. The churches are somewhat behind financially, owing to the hard times, but they have contributed to the different objects of the Convention right liberally, and in the fall will no doubt pay all they owe. This refers to the churches in Marion county. Conway never gets behind, though they are weak: they meet their obligations promptly.

I think if our "new method" missionary brethren had served a number of churches in our own country for a few years before they went to foreign fields, they doubtless would have never conceived the new method. It is all right in theory, but impracticable. How few of our churches would agree long if they were to unite in the support of a missionary. Then the zeal and interest in a church lags sometimes. Churches fluctuate often, and some that have contributed liberally fail to keep it up. This method is an ideal one, which will be realized when all the churches are what they should be at home.

We came to Chautauqua July 5th. We left home on the 3d for rest and improvement. It is the most restful place I ever saw. Everybody seems at home and does as he pleases. The weather is cool enough for wrapping every day so far. The lectures, addresses and concerts are very fine. Last week we listened to four of Prof. Drummond's lectures on "The Ascent of Man." His first was "How man got a body"; second, "How he got a mind"; third, "How he came by speech"; fourth, "The evolution of a mother"; fifth, "Evolution of a father"; and last, "Christianity and evolution." We heard the last four cited. Some of his theory is rather confusing. He said "Revelation began at the top, evolution begins with the atom." I don't think he made it clear to us where they met and were reconciled, though we may not have been able to comprehend it.

This week we have four lectures on the "Development and Training of the Will," by W. L. Hervey. I attend nearly all the lectures, &c., but Mr. Willoughby's mornings are taken up by his Greek recitations. He was rather feeble when he came, and I fear he will retard improvement physically by undertaking too much at first. We expect to spend a month here.

Chautauqua is a beautiful place shaded by sugar maple and beech trees. The cottages are so thick that I don't know whether the place was laid off, or whether they just set a cottage where they found room for it. Some of the buildings are quite imposing, the hotel Athenæum, Amphitheatre and different Halls, for instance.

There are excursions to Niagara from here every Saturday. We think of going next Saturday.

Rates from here to the World's Fair are $12.00, limited to ten days. We think of going there, also, if nothing prevents, before we return home.

Strawberries and garden peas here remind one of May at home. The [illegible] very good. School teachers and music teachers act in the capacity of dining room servants, and of cooks in some places here. Many rent cottages and do all their work themselves.

The chiming of bells, the band, and the music halls, where they practice, furnish music about all the time.

School Notices.

We have perused the 1892-'93 catalogue of Peace Institute with pleasure. Prof. Dinwiddie has gathered around him an exceptionally fine corps of leading instructors in the arts and sciences, and has made Peace Institute one of the foremost educational institutions for young ladies in the country. Parents placing the education of their daughters in the hands of Prof. Dinwiddie and his able assistants should have nothing to regret.

The advertisement of Glade Springs Academy appears in another column. This excellent school for the preparation of students for college and business life opens Sept. 14, 1893, under the able management of Prof. C. P. Sapp, B. A., Salutatorian, and Thos. Dixon, Jr., Essay and oratory medalist at Wake Forest College last commencement, and Prof. T. Marion Anderson, B. L., (Richmond College of Va.), both of whom are highly recommended. We bespeak for them a liberal patronage.

FORTY SECOND YEAR.—Oak Ridge Institute, perhaps the most successful private school enterprise in the State, which has recently closed a very prosperous year, is now sending out one of the prettiest catalogues it has ever been our pleasure to examine. It is clear and complete in the letter press, fully illustrated and daintily bound. Any one who contemplates patronizing a good school the coming year should be sure to send for one of these catalogues. J. A. & M. H. Holt are the principals, and this is their nineteenth year in the work.

HOLLINS INSTITUTE.—This high school for young ladies, though bearing the name of "Institute," is really superior to many with the more imposing title of College or University. It has a fine equipment, in a most beautiful and salubrious country. Its faculty of eight gentlemen and twenty ladies are of the highest literary, scientific and artistic accomplishment, and personal character. During the past half century the school has done a great and noble work. Its graduates are all over this and other lands. Many hold elevated social and professional situations. Its semi-centennial was celebrated on the 7th of June, in the presence of pupils and patrons from twenty States, and looks forward into the next half century with the highest prospects of success. Further information may be had by addressing Chas. L. Cocke, Supt., Hollins, Va.

A Pleasant Reminiscence.

There is a peculiar incident connected with the story we are about to relate. It occurred in the experience of a little invalid girl. From her very infancy she was a child of affliction. Sometimes for weeks and months she would be confined to a bed of languishing, but in the days of her youth she sought and found the Saviour precious to her soul, which was the source of her only true consolation. Occasionally she would have a mitigation of suffering and would go forth for a little season to enjoy the beauties of nature which gave her more pleasure than words could express. She had a favorite walk, and when she would start on her little mission of recreation, her heart would abound with delight as she beheld the grand old oaks that overshadowed her pathway. Her subject for reverie was the greatness, wisdom and power of God. She would then draw a contrast with her poor frail, human nature: and when she remembered that not a sparrow falleth to the ground without his notice, and even the very hairs of our head are numbered; and then to think she would have to give an account of her stewardship to such a holy Being, she was so completely absorbed in her utter nothingness, she would actually feel like a little child not more than two or three years old, and was just walking along, leaning on the arm of the Lord, and as she paused to open a gate on her way, she seemed to rise higher and higher until she reached her natural height, then she would feel like prostrating herself on the ground, but the thought would come into her mind, the heart is the thing! The peculiarity about it was, it was always just in the same place, and only three times, although she has often thought on the subject! No wonder that was a favorite stroll, when the blessed Master seemed so near!

How often is the Christian who strives to walk the narrow way made to cry, "Father, take my hand." "He will guide us with his counsel, and afterwards receive us to glory."

An Arraigned Church.

"I have a few things against thee." Revelation 2: 14.

It is charged that some are guilty of plain, wilful, unblushing profanity.

It is charged that some bow at the shrine of Alcohol with strong and increasing devotion.

It is charged that some who hold a high head and claim recognition in society and church, are guilty of lewdness and base unchastity.

It is charged that some are covetous, using illegitimate means to establish themselves and overshadow their rivals.

It is charged that some will not pay their just debts, spending their money for unnecessary articles and leaving their creditors unpaid.

It is charged that some are fonder of the whirling dance, the reeling waltz, and foolish amusements, than they are of their Bibles, their church, and the ministry of the gospel.

It is charged that some attend service only to exhibit the basest of ill manners and the most inhuman irreverence for God and his sanctuary.

It is charged that some love the trashy novel and filthy paper better than the Word of God.

It is charged that some spend from twenty to thirty dollars a year for tobacco, while little or nothing goes toward church expenses and acts of benevolence.

It is charged that some are so unrefined and unchristian as to habitually tell and manufacture anecdotes of the blackest vulgarity; doing which, they forsake the sincere milk of the Word to gnaw the putrefying bone of obscenity.

It is charged that the church as a body, and its officers in particular, knowing these vices, are guilty of moral negligence in not leading the church to effect a thorough purification.

HIGHT C. MOORE.

Little River Union.

This body will convene with the church at Juniper Springs on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July, 1893. The following program has been arranged:

Friday, 11 a. m. Introductory sermon.

Friday 3 p. m. How shall we so interest our church members that they will attend the house of God on all occasions for worship, and especially our Saturday meetings.

Saturday morning. Is it the duty of all church members to give of their means to the support of the gospel? if so, how shall we bring this about?

Saturday p. m. Meeting of Executive Board.

Let all bring a contribution for the work of our Board, and come prepared to discuss the above subjects.

J. M. HOLLEMAN, Com.

The Yeopim Union.

This Union expects to meet with the church at Cool Spring on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July; Rev. A. W. Burfoot to preach the introductory sermon, Rev. Josiah Elliott alternate; Rev. W. P. Jordan to preach the missionary sermon, Rev. C. J. Woodson alternate.

The following subjects are to be discussed:—

1. Would it tend to the spiritual development of our churches to have preaching oftener than one Sunday in each month? If so, how can our churches be worked up to this point? To brethren George W. White and Josiah Elliott.

2. Our Home Mission Board, its work and needs. To H. Bass and A. W. Burfoot.

3. The Christian Sabbath, how it is observed, how should it be observed? To brethren C. J. Woodson and [illegible].

South Yadkin Union.

The next session of the South Yadkin Union will be held with Fork Baptist church, Davie county, commencing on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July. Introductory sermon by N. S. Jones; alternate, W. J. Hopkins.

QUERIES.

1. What are the duties of the church to their pastor? N. S. Jones and E. Frost.

2. Can our churches in Davie county supply the destitution in the county with preaching? J. W. Wiseman and S. J. Tatum.

3. How can our churches help one another? Dr. W. C. Martin and Jacob Stuart.

S. V. FURCHES, Sec.

Centennial Exercises.

A centennial will be held with the Baptist church at Maple Springs, Franklin county, on July 27th, it being its one hundredth anniversary. Visit to Mt. Olivet Church by a Former Pastor.

Dear Recorder:—My visit to Mt. Olivet to preach Sister Lucy Right's funeral was one of great pleasure—to meet the people that I served as pastor for six years, and to grasp the hands of many warm friends; but my joy was mixed with sorrow, to find the seats once occupied by Brother Calvin Wilder and Sister Right vacant. They were two of the best Christians that I ever met in all my fields of labor, but our loss is their eternal gain. According to their lives and to the teachings of the Bible, they are at rest in heaven, with God and the angels.

Bro. Wilder died April 19th, 1893. He had served his church for many years as a deacon, was faithful in all his duties, and sustained his pastor. He was one that didn't consider the calling of a new pastor the paying of the debt to the preceding pastor, or any part of it. He is gone, but his influence will long live in his church and neighborhood.

J. W. SLEDGE, former Pastor.
Stallings, July 7, 1893.

A Christian Home.

"A lighted lamp," writes McCheyne, "is a very small thing, and it burns calmly and without noise, yet it giveth light to all who are within the house. And so there is a quiet influence which, like the flame of a scented lamp, fills many a home with light and fragrance. Such an influence has been beautifully compared to a carpet, soft and deep, which, while it diffuses a look of ample comfort, deadens many a creaking sound. It is the curtain which, from many a beloved form, wards off at once the summer's glow and the winter's wind. It is the pillow on which sickness lays its head, and forgets half its misery. This influence falls as the refreshing dew, the invigorating sunbeam, the fertilizing shower, shining on all with mild luster of moonlight, and harmonizing in one soft tint many of the discordant hues of a family picture."—Presbyterian.

The Pastor.

No man is fit to be a preacher who is not also a pastor. Though he have the learning of Melancthon and the eloquence of Jeremy Taylor, he cannot properly minister to the spiritual wants of a flock with which he does not come into direct personal contact. It is false and foolish to say "I cannot make sermons and visits at the same time." The fact is that out of the visits to the poor, the penitent, the prisoner, the sick, the dying, all the best sermons are born. Mere knowledge speedily becomes as dead and dry as a last year's bird's nest unless it is kept vital by human associations. After a morning is spent in the study, the only rational thing is an afternoon spent in the homes of the people. A minister of Jesus Christ has no right to be a recluse. A sound scholar is a man to be admired, but a mere bookworm merits and receives only general contempt. One other thing needs to be said: many of the preachers who imagine themselves too busy with their books to do the work that they have solemnly pledged themselves to do on the outside are not students at all in any effective sense, but simply loungers in libraries.—Nashville Advocate.

The most stubborn skin and scalp diseases, the worst forms of scrofula, and blood-taints and poisons of every name and nature, are utterly rooted out by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. For every disease caused by a torpid liver or impure blood, it is the only remedy so certain and effective that it can be guaranteed. If it fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

Eczema, tetter, salt rheum, erysipelas, boils, carbuncles, enlarged glands, tumors, and swellings, and every kindred ailment, are completely and permanently cured by it.

Perseverance.

To succeed in any branch of study you must work for it. Then you will achieve success, because you will merit it. You should keep in mind that whatever is worth beginning is worth finishing. Solomon's temple was not built in a day, but every row of stones brought it nearer completion. A poor woman had a supply of coal laid at her door by a kind neighbor. A little girl came out with a small fire shovel and began to take up a shovelful at a time and carry it to a sort of bin in the cellar. A gentleman passing said: "Do you expect to get all the coal in with that little shovel?" Modestly she replied: "Yes, sir; if I work long enough." And so it is with the lessons of life. If they are to be mastered, it must be by perseverance. It is not enough to begin the race; you must reach the goal if you would have the prize, and to reach the goal you must be determined and persevering.—Selected

An Able Editor.

The editor of the Advanced Quarterly is selected as much for his thorough soundness in Baptist doctrine as he is for his scholarly ability. Dr. Taylor, of Crozer Seminary, is eminently fitted to prepare the Sunday-school lessons for our youth in the Advanced Quarterly.

Our heart turns to the multitudes of young men who will shortly emerge from our colleges and enter upon life's work. We want to say a word particularly to the young preachers. Divest your minds at once and finally of the idea of securing prominent and pleasant positions. Place yourselves in the hands of God and seek his direction. We believe that God calls men to special fields just as truly and as distinctively as he calls them to the ministry. The Lord has a work for each one of you to do, but you will never do much unless you seek humbly and devoutly for guidance. By all means do not aspire to city churches. If the Lord gives you a field in the city, take it, but as a general rule the man who goes from the seminary to a city church will become dwarfed.—Central Baptist.

This is the grandchild of one of Virginia's most distinguished living statesmen. When the child was in a state of collapse from cholera infantum, and the doctors had left it to die, it was given Germetuer. In two hours it revived and began to recover very rapidly. In a recent letter enclosing the above picture of the nurse and child, the mother says that "it was raised from the dead by Germetuer."

COVINGTON, GA., May 31, 1893.—For about five years I was a great sufferer from neuralgia in my face and eyes, and hemorrhage of the kidneys, which caused a great deal of blood to pass from them, causing me to suffer a great deal from its effects, as well as the daily attacks of neuralgia. A friend induced me to take King's Royal Germetuer. I took ten bottles of it, and have not had an attack of either since. I used the Germetuer in 1890. There are many who will testify to this.

Study of the Bible.

We should treat the Bible studiously. It is not enough that we be "parasites of the pulpit," content to feed on the Scriptural pabulum the pastor furnishes. We must study the Bible for our own selves; doing our own thinking, and doing it vigorously. "In what science," asks John Ruskin, "is knowledge to be had cheap, or truth to be told over a velvet cushion, in half an hour's talk, every seventh day? Can you learn chemistry so? Zoology? Anatomy? And do you expect to penetrate the secret of all secrets, and to know that whose price is above rubies in so easy a fashion?" For the Bible is exhaustless in its resources: it has one meaning for us to-day, and another meaning for us to-morrow; and both meanings are true. In the Dresden gallery of royal gems there is a silver egg; touch a spring, and it opens, disclosing a golden chicken; touch the chicken, and it opens, disclosing a crown studded with gems; touch the crown, and it opens, disclosing a magnificent diamond ring. So it is with the Bible: as we study it, we touch successive springs, disclosing exhaustless treasures. As Augustine rightly says, "Scripture has first draughts, second draughts, third draughts."

Again, we must compare Scripture with Scripture; for the Bible, after all, is its own best commentator. For example: We must study the Gospels in the light of each other; for they offer a beautiful specimen of divine mosaic, complementing and interpreting each other. So also the Acts of the Apostles often interprets in a marvelous way the Epistles of Paul. And we must study the Old Testament as well as the New; for both covenants form one divine unity. As Augustine again finely says, "New Testament is latent in Old; Old is patent in New."

Again, we ought to master the subtile principles which lie at the basis of Hebrew poetry, especially the principle of parallelisms; for while our English rhyme is the rhyme of sound, the Hebrew rhyme was the rhyme of thought; or, as Ewald beautifully expresses it, "The rapid stroke as of alternate wings, the heaving and sinking of the troubled heart." We ought to become familiar with the geography and natural history, as well as with the chronicles of the various countries mentioned in the Bible; for the pith of an argument or the beauty of a sentiment often lies buried in a dry archæological fact. The discoveries by Layard, Robinson, various exploration societies, and so forth, often strikingly illustrate some dark passage, or confirm some disputed statement of Holy Writ. A true map is, in a certain sense, a part of the Bible itself. No subject of attainable knowledge which can be made to shed light on the sacred volume should be allowed to discourage us by the difficulties which environ it, or escape our vision in its seeming insignificance. We must put forth all our mental powers; so that we shall be able to see acutely, conceive acutely, reason closely, express clearly. We must learn how to detect and trace delicate analogies, and bring out the real points in parables and comparisons. In encountering a difficult doctrinal passage, we must try not only to take in the outlines of the argument, but also to detect and supply the subtle, and often unexpressed, links of thoughts. Above all, in studying a particular clause of a paragraph, we must observe the general drift. If you had written a letter to a friend on some important topic, you would not think it fair in him were he to quote some parenthetical clause, and repeat it to others unmodified by the context; you would say to him, "quote the trend."

Once more, we ought, under certain circumstances, to summon the aid of imagination; for this fine faculty of man, not less than reason, is the gift of God, and hence is intended for use. Our conceptions of Bible heroes and scenes would often be more vivid, and therefore more truthful, were we to avail ourselves of imagination in transporting ourselves back among them. For instance: in order to understand the letters of St. Paul, we must link our fortunes with his; sit with him at the feet of Gamaliel; share his divine arrest on the way to Damascus; attend him on his long and perilous journeys; toil with him in the workshops of Corinth and Ephesus; feel with him the Pharisee's sting in Jerusalem, the philosopher's sting on Mars' Hill, the false brother's sting in Colossæ; wear with him the chain in Cæsarea; suffer shipwreck with him in the Adriatic; await martyrdom with him in Rome. In short, we must become Hebrews ourselves; becoming with Abraham sojourners in the land of promise, dwelling with him and Isaac and Jacob in tents as fellow-heirs with them of the same promise; ascending with Moses the mount of God; studying with Samuel in the prophetic schools of Jericho and Gilgal; pacing with the watchmen on the walls of Zion; bending our bows with the archers of Ephraim; weeping with the exiles by the rivers of Babylon; feeding our flocks with the shepherds of Bethlehem; casting our nets with the fishermen of Galilee; wandering with the scattered tribes of the Dispersion.

But let us beware of the old sin of being devoted to the mere letter of the Scripture. For, in these days of elaborate exegetical helps, the temptation is even stronger with us than it was with the ancient rabbies to study the words of the Bible microscopically; and so magnify the letter, which by itself kills, as to obscure and lose sight of the spirit, which alone gives life. It is possible to devote so much attention to the outward tabernacle itself, in noting its materials and shape and arrangement, in counting its curtains and loops and hooks and sockets and clasps and fillets, as to have no time or inclination to enter within the veil, to behold the beauty of Jehovah, or to inquire within his temple.—Dr. George Dana Boardman, in The Watchman.

No soul was ever lost because its fresh beginnings broke down, but thousands of souls have been lost because they would not make fresh beginnings.—Faber.

The Great Wheel.

During the last week one of the prominent incidents in connection with the World's Fair has been the "inauguration" of the Ferris Wheel on the Midway Plaisance.

The Ferris Wheel is to the Columbian Exposition what the Eiffel Tower was to the Paris Exposition of 1889. It has not yet become as widely known as that sky piercing structure, but there is no doubt that it will be in time. It is called by engineers, who are supposed to be competent to pass judgment, even a greater engineering feat than the Paris novelty. Whatever it may be to the engineers, to the ordinary, every-day visitor to the Midway, who throws back his head to look at the top, it is a ponderous network of iron. There are thirty-six cars on the wheel, each capable of comfortably seating sixty persons, and as large as the ordinary Pullman palace car, built just as substantially and upholstered just as luxuriously. The cars are twenty-seven feet long, thirteen feet wide and nine feet high, and each one weighs thirteen tons. The wheel, with its passengers, weighs 1,200 tons. The whole thing rests on two pyramidal towers at the axis. The towers are 140 feet high, 40x50 feet at the base, and six feet square at the top. Each tower has four feet resting on 20-foot cube concrete foundations. Underneath these are cross-bars of steel. The motive power comes from a 1,000 horse power steam engine under the wheel. The wheel is moved by cogs on the periphery passing over a chain that looks like a mammoth bicycle chain. Imagine this wheel, with its living freight to a total of 2,160 souls, slowly revolving. Imagine the sensation of being carried up 250 feet on one side, and of being slowly lowered on the other side, and of gaining, during the trip, a complete view of the World's Fair grounds. —The Watchman, June 29.

A New Study for Girls.

Would it not be wise if some exercises in the mysteries of money were added to the curriculum of every girl's studies, asks Harper's Bazar. A boy finds it all out by actual contact with the public as soon as he is out and a part of it; but a girl may become a mature woman, shrinking then through the habit of long protection, and be thrown on the mercies of the world with her money to fall the prey to the first cheat and cozener. She is taught at school the spectra of the stars, and the map of Mars; what pity that she should not be instructed in the workings of life on the planet where she lives! That a knowledge of the nature and meaning and care of money should be made a part of every girl's education is growing more and more evident in this age of enlargement and prosperity, which puts money into the hands of so many women. And in the coming century, the woman's century, as it is already called, in which so many women will be workers and earners of money, it is all the more important, in order that they may be neither handicapped nor too far outstripped, that they should be well instructed as to business movements and investments, that they may be directed in the right way before they set out to earn.

Habits.

Nearly all the disagreeable habits which people take up come at first from mere accident or want of thought, says a thoughtful writer. They might easily be dropped, but they are persisted in until they become a second nature. There are disagreeable habits of body, like scowling, winking, twisting the mouth, biting the nails, continually picking at something, twirling a key or fumbling at a chain, drumming with the fingers, screwing or twisting a chair, or whatever you lay your hands on. Don't do any of these things. There are much worse things than these, to be sure; but we are only speaking of these little things that are only annoying when they are persisted in. Then there are habits of speech with "you see," or "you know," "now-a," "and-a," "see here," "let me tell you," indistinct utterance, sharp, nasal tones; avoid them all. Stop and think what you are going to say and then let every word drop from your lips just as perfect as a new silver coin. Before you know it, you will find that your habits have hardened into a coat of mail that you cannot get rid of without a terrible effort.—Ex.

Finding Your Mission.

To find your mission you have but to be faithful wherever God puts you for the present. The humbler things he gives in the earlier years are for your training that you may be ready at length for the larger and particular service for which you were born. Do these smaller, humbler things well, and they will prove steps in the stairs up to the loftier height where your "mission" waits. To spurn these plainer duties and tasks and to neglect them is to miss your mission itself in the end, for there is no way to it but by these ladder-rounds of common-place things which you disdain. You must build your own ladder day by day in the common fidelities.—Rev. J. R. Miller.

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that we can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Subject for July: Foreign Board.

"Finally, brethren, pray for us that the word of the Lord may run and be glorified, even as with you." Missionaries, 91; native assistants, 81; stations, 185; churches, 74; membership, 2,723; baptisms, 434; schools, 20; scholars, 748. Receipts of Foreign Board, $114,325.80. Twenty-one missionaries added to the force in the field.

STUDY TOPICS.—Knowledge of the missionaries. Encountered difficulties. Past results. Future prospects. The Centennial, a pivotal era in missions. Chapel building.

The Southern Baptist Convention at its late session in Nashville, Tenn., extended the time of the Centennial of Missions until the close of this year. The Centennial Record Book will also be kept open until that time. It is hoped that renewed efforts will be made for this work, and the Woman's Central Committee of Missions will gladly supply Centennial Missionary Literature, Centennial Chapel Cards, Centennial Day Programs, and Centennial Certificates, free. All who are already entitled to Centennial Certificates can obtain them at once on application. If after application the Certificates are not received within a reasonable time, please renew your application, as some loss may have occurred in the mails. Address Miss Fannie E. Heck, Pres. Woman's Central Committee of Missions, Raleigh, N. C.

One Hundred Years Ago.

Anam and Siam and Burma, like Japan and China, wanted no strangers in their gates. Christian England's greatest commercial corporation shut India's door in the gospel messenger's face. Central Asia was a terra incognita, while all Western Asia, with Northern Africa, was held in the cruel grasp of Mohammedan powers. Passing southward, Africa presented a vast untouched continent, full of the habitations of cruelty—a field for the operations of the slave-trader, but closed to the missionary. Southern Europe was in the Pope's grasp, and the auto da fe awaited the man bold enough to enter his domain with an open Bible. South America was under sway of Pope or savage, or both, as were also Central America and Mexico, and even what is now our glorious West was the home of Catholic Frenchman and Spaniard, or wild Indian.

Yet further: The languages of the people, even after access was gained in their homes, were unknown tongues to the missionaries. And without grammars or lexicons, and in many cases without written language at all, how were these men to tell the story of salvation?

NOW.

That little missionary society, organized in the private parlor of a widow in Kettering, was a seed that has yielded fruit more than ten thousand fold. Then only one, and it small. To day there are in existence over one hundred and fifty general organizations for foreign missions, some of which number their local societies by the thousand.

The two missionaries who in June, 1793, sailed for India, proved but the advance guard of an army that now numbers more than 7,000, while over 35,000 natives are associated with them in the work.

The world's doors have everywhere been opened to their entrance, until it is said that the only closed ones are those of Thibet, a land hid away in the fastnesses of the Himalaya mountains and even there the Moravian missionaries sit and confidently await an entrance. The history of the opening of these doors is one of most thrilling interest, and he who studies it rises from the study impressed with the fact that God has been working mightily in it all, and using, as only he can do, every sort of instrumentality to work the purposes of his will.

If all the inhabitants of the globe were to pass by us in long procession, two-thirds of the whole innumerable multitude would be fetish worshippers, or fire worshippers, or idolators, or followers of Confucius, or sunk in the thinly-veiled negations of Buddhism. Would this have been possible if the church had retained the fervor and enthusiasm of her early faith and had sent forth not merely an isolated preacher here and there, like a Paul or a Boniface or a Columba or a Xavier, but an adequate number of laborers into fields already white unto harvest?

"Dr. John G. Paton recommends that a young man intending to become a foreign missionary secure the fullest possible preparation and insisted that his own son should take a full course of study, classical, theological, and medical, before entering upon his labors. This opinion is more significant since he has not been engaged in missionary work among educated people, but among savage cannibals, who were without even a written language when he went among them."

A Strong
Endorsement.
The St. Louis Trade Review and Export Journal in its issue of February 7th, 1893, has this to say:
EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.
One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B. Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Carolina, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1858. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches, and carry in stock a fine line of stationery, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, posters, circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report.
Royal Baking Powder
ABSOLUTELY PURE

From Henrietta, N. C.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—It is very encouraging to see in your valuable paper, week after week, reports from the great harvest field, telling of work done and of the many sheaves being gathered in and saved. Knowing of the encouragement that these reports give me, by your permission, I will write a short letter from this place.

The Baptists here are making strong efforts for the promotion of the Lord's work, and it seems to be prospering in their hands. Under the pastoral care of Rev. G. P. Hamrick, the church seems to be growing fast in power and efficiency to do the work which has been entrusted to them.

Christians are being strengthened and many lost ones are being saved. Both pastor and people are united in this great work and are striving to do greater things for their Master than ever before, and we believe that the future will bring great results.

Among the other things that could be mentioned in the lines of progress, is the building of a house of worship, which is now in course of construction.

Since the Baptist church was first organized here, the Baptists have been worshiping in the same house used by the other denominations, but feeling that it would add to their work, they have decided recently to build them a home of their own. It is to be a large and well arranged house, and to be ready for them to use soon.

We pray God that he may greatly bless them in their work, and that they may be the means of saving many who are now lost.

Yours in Christ,

J. C. GILLESPIE.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

It is stated that the seventeen year locusts have appeared in Mitchell county.

There is no truth in the published statement that cholera is in Northampton county.

The State had $15,000 on deposit in the wrecked bank of New Hanover at Wilmington.

Craig Murdoch was recently drowned while bathing in Deep river, near Jamestown, Guilford county.

Monroe aldermen have passed an ordinance imposing a fine of $10 on any minor who enters a bar-room.—Ex.

Charles White, the murderer of Charles Brookus in Buncombe county, has been captured in Laurel county, Kentucky.

The Scotland Neck Democrat reports that thousands of German Carp in Roanoke river are dying from some unexplained cause.

Concord is to have another cotton mill—a spinner. The Standard says that $25,000 of the $40,000 wanted have been subscribed.

Dr. J. W. Long of Randleman, N. C., has been elected to the chair of diseases of women and children in the Medical College of Virginia.

Mrs. Robt Dilworth, living north of Winston, committed suicide recently by taking a mixture of rough on rats, arsenic and ground glass.

P. H. Hanes and Co., of Winston will build a tobacco factory even larger than the mammoth structure which was recently destroyed by fire.

Hodgin Bros. and Lunn, tobacco manufacturers of Winston have assigned. Preferred credits amount to $50,262 05. Assets said to be $75,000.

Rev. L. B. Wurreschkie a Moravian minister, died of apoplexy in Salem the 8th inst., aged sixty-four years. He was formerly a missionary to the West Indies but had been a resident of Salem eighteen years at the time of his death.

During a thunder-storm last Friday evening, lightning struck the residence of Mr. Sid. Green near Wakefield, Wake county, setting fire to the house and badly injuring Mr. and Mrs. Green and a Mr. Purnell, who with his wife was visiting the Green family.

Some parties made an examination of the soil on a farm near Hickory recently, and it is said found abundant evidences all over the surface of gold and most probably in large quantities. Pits are to be dug at different places on the estate and then further investigations will be made.

John and Luther Vipman, brothers, aged thirteen and seventeen years respectively, were struck by lightning and killed last Saturday week, four miles west of Winston. The boys together with their sister were seeking shelter from a rain storm under a large tree. The girl was severely stunned.

A meeting of the North Carolina Board of Pharmacy for the examination of candidates for license to practice pharmacy will be held in the city of Greensboro on Tuesday, August 8th. The North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association will meet the day following.

Ex-sheriff Lakey of Yadkin county is reported to be several thousand dollars short in his accounts. He has given a mortgage on his property to his bondsmen. Several deputies are now trying to collect back taxes. Winston Sentinel states that Mr. E. A. [illegible] of Yadkinville, one of Mr. Lakey's [illegible] expresses no fear about the ex[illegible] every dollar he owes.

The First and Second regiments of the State Guard are holding their annual encampment at Morehead City. The camp is called Camp Bogart.

Gov. Carr has appointed the following directors of the North Carolina Railroad on the part of the State: W. P. Kornegay, Goldsboro; W. C. Maxwell, Charlotte; J. P. Allison, Concord; C. W. Johnson, Chapel Hill; J. J. Young, Polenta; Rev. F. L. Reid, Raleigh; Lee S. Overman, Salisbury; C. E Turner, Wake county. The directors selected all the old officers of the road.

The Railway Commission has completed its assessment of the railroads in North Carolina, seventy in number, and the total value closely approximates $25,000,000. The rate on the division of the Wilmington and Weldon railroad between Wilson and Fayetteville is increased from $8,000 to $10,000 per mile. The Raleigh and Gaston division of the Seaboard Air Line, which has heretofore paid no taxes, is assessed at $10,000 per mile.

A few days ago the people of James City announced their intention of appealing to the citizens of Newbern for aid to purchase a site for them to locate on in the near future, they having decided to move from their present homes in a body. They have the refusal of several tracts of land that suit them for the purpose and several citizens of the settlement are now out with the subscription papers soliciting contributions towards the purchase.—Newbern Journal.

Sol Bracy died at his home in Northampton county one day last week, leaving behind him a fortune, in cold cash, of $8,000, which he had hoarded up during his lifetime. Mr. Bracy was a hard worker and, from all appearances, was a very poor man, though rumor whispered that he had money. At his death it was found to be true; but what benefits did he derive from his vast wealth!—Henderson Gold Leaf, July 13.

The Wilmington Messenger says on Tuesday night (4th inst.) when the last train came up from Lake Waccamaw, a large number of men and boys were on board, returning to Whiteville. It was 8 45 when the train arrived and after the crowd got off some fools in the crowd recklessly fired their pistols at random in a spirit of fun. It was sad fun to one family, for a stray bullet struck a youth named Ward and he was instantly killed. He was struck in the head, but it is not known who fired the fatal shot.

Electropoise vs. Death.
In North Carolina and throughout the whole country this little instrument has saved all alone, life after life, when doctors had given up hope.
THAT'S A GOOD SIGN.
Isn't it? Its the same the world over. Let us send you the evidence of intelligent men and women. It don't cost you a cent.
Those who have used it longest are its best friends and strongest advocates.
In our Treatment Department, we are now ready to take desperate cases, and those who prefer the attention of a physician skilled in the application of the Electropoise. Despairing invalids are invited to investigate the advantage of this department.

A Minneapolis Miracle.

THE REMARKABLE CURE OF J. B. WHITE OF THIS CITY.

A CRIPPLE FOR TWO YEARS, PRONOUNCED INCURABLE BY PHYSICIANS AND GIVEN UP BY HIS FRIENDS TO DIE—HOW HE OBTAINED RELIEF AND BECAME A WELL MAN—HIS DAUGHTER'S MARVELOUS IMPROVEMENT.

(From the Minneapolis Journal.)

"Precious is the panacea that cures when hope is gone and medical advice pronounces the death sentence—'incurable.' How terrible it is to think of leaving this sweet life before the allotted years of man's time here on earth are spent." Thus spoke J. B. White of 1201, 3d St., N. E., last night to a Journal reporter. Mr. White has been much talked about of late, and the following conversation explains why:

"I am a native of Shediac, New Brunswick, and of French descent. I have been in Minneapolis for many years. I am now sixty years old. I fell from a building two years ago and broke my thigh, besides injuring myself internally. The doctors could do nothing for me but let the bones grow together as best they could. When I was able to walk on crutches I came near dying from the complication of troubles that had set in after the fall. For one year and a half I walked on crutches, striving in vain to find some relief from the misery I felt night and day. The worst part of my afflictions was that I could not eat anything. If I could have taken nourishment and kept it down I could have stood the pain better. I had four doctors, and kept taking all sorts of medicines. I had to stop all of them or I would have been a dead man. I have enough bottles left to start a drug store. I would be troubled so with headaches, and my hips would pain me so that I often thought I should go crazy. I was so emaciated that there was nothing of me but skin and bone. Last summer I felt as if I was nearly dead. My kidneys then began to bother me. I got so I could not sleep only at intervals. Finally I gave up in despair. One day I was sitting out on the porch. It was a beautiful, sunny day. The singing of the birds and the odor of flowers set me to thinking of my childhood days. From that my thoughts reverted to the little French weekly paper, Le Montieur Acadien, that we got, and I thought I would like to read it and see how things were at my old home. I told my wife to give me the last number. She brought me the one that came that morning. The first thing I saw was a long article about the miraculous cure of a cripple. I read on and on, becoming more interested than ever. The patient described in the article said that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People cured him and they would cure others. The story aroused my interest and I induced my druggist to send for them. I did not expect relief right away, but soon they made the headache pass away. After taking them some days I could eat. People laughed at me when I began to take the pills, telling me I was taking so much candy. But the day I threw away the crutches they thought different. I am now well and hearty as a young man of twenty-five."

At this juncture his married daughter, Mrs. N. White, came into the store. "There," said he, "is another case. She has tried them, too." The reporter thought it would be a good idea to speak of her case, also, since it was a woman's. Mrs. White married a man of the same name as her father, so this accounts for the same name.

"The doctors," she said, "told me I had uterine trouble. I was in a miserable condition. Nothing that I took could alleviate the pains I would feel in my limbs and abdomen. I often had fluttering of the heart, and frequent weak spells. I would eat, but it would do me no good. I could not sleep. I was in misery and despair. My father took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and his improvement was so rapid that I thought I would take them too. At first I felt worse, and then I began to mend so rapidly that I was astonished. I have taken seven boxes and am now nearly well. I can do my own work and can sleep and eat well. In the mornings I feel refreshed after a night's rest."

August Grotefend, who keeps the Germania Drug Store, at 1011 Main St., N. E., corroborated what Mr. White had said above in regard to his condition, saying, "I have sold a great many since these cures. Some of the lumbermen going in the woods have taken half dozen box lots of these pills with them. They certainly have done a wonderful lot of good and should have the entire credit of the cures."

On inquiry The Journal reporter found that these pills are now on sale at the various wholesale drug houses of Minneapolis and St. Paul and are meeting with a good sale, but not as fast as they will sell as soon as their merit is fully known. He also found that they were manufactured by Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and Brockville, Ont., and the pills are sold in boxes (never in bulk by the hundred) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a perfect blood builder and nerve restorer, curing such diseases as rheumatism, neuralgia, partial paralysis, locomotor ataxia, St. Vitus' dance, nervous headache, nervous prostration and the tired feeling therefrom, the after effects of la grippe, influenza and severe colds, diseases depending on humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. Pink Pills give a healthy glow to pale and sallow complexions and are a specific for the troubles peculiar to the female system; in men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of any nature.

The cold storage warehouse in grounds of the World's Fair was destroyed by fire July 10th. Eighteen persons (eleven being firemen) perished in the flames.

Reason! Beecham's Pills act like magic.

WATSON—ALLEN—On June 21st, 1893, by Rev. J. R. Pendergrass, at the residence of Mr. B. M. Allen at Ellijay in Macon county, N. C., Mr. James F. Watson of Knoxville, Tenn., and Miss Sallie L. Allen.

DIED.

SEAWELL—Mrs. Nancy Seawell departed this life in Jonesboro, N. C., on May 22d, 1893, in the sixty-sixth year of her age. Sister Seawell was a consistent member of the Baptist church, having joined Bethlehem church, Moore county, in her younger days, moving her membership to the church at Jonesboro soon after its organization.

D. O. B.

BROOKS—Near Silk Hope, Chatham county, N. C., Miss Mary C. Brooks, the oldest daughter of J. J. and Kate Brooks, died June 4th, 1893, after a painful illness of about two weeks. She had just entered her twentieth summer. The deceased was unusually bright, and for one so young she had developed wonderfully as a Christian. She professed religion at the age of thirteen. She has been a consistent Christian ever since, and died rejoicing in a Saviour's love. She is greatly missed by the entire community, but especially by the family. To these sorrowing ones we extend our sympathies, and for them we offer our prayers that God will comfort them in this sore bereavement. C. C. TEAGUE.

MARKHAM—Died at his home near Durham, N. C., Bro. Henry Markham, in his eighty-seventh year. Our departed brother was a faithful and active member of Yates Baptist church. He loved his church, and was generally present at her services, unless providentially hindered, even when old and feeble. He was a great help to his pastor, as he always sat near the pulpit, and seemed to feast on the word as preached by him. He leaves several children and a large circle of friends to mourn his death. He will be missed in the family circle, at his church, and in his community. May the Lord comfort his bereaved family. The aged pilgrim has entered into rest, and eternal youth has come.

C. A. WOODSON.

HOLWILL—William Holwill departed this life June 25th, 1893, aged sixty-nine years and fifteen days. He was a member of Sandy Cross church for a number of years and also a deacon. For two years he has been a member of Warwick Swamp church, and served faithfully as a deacon and a co-laborer with his brethren and pastor. The fourth Sabbath in April he attended his church and enjoyed the preaching of his dear pastor, Bro. J. F. Tuttle. He returned home, and in a few days began suffering from asthma. For five weeks before his death he was compelled to sit up in order to get breath. Everything was done that could be done, but God called, and he passed over the river. He was a true man as a citizen and a Christian. All the neighbors and his brethren loved and honored him. This was demonstrated on the day of his burial. The people came for miles. He will be missed in his community, his home. The old chair looks lonely. His seat is vacant in his church and at his business. A good husband and father has fallen. He leaves an aged wife and four children to mourn their loss. Yes, but we believe it is his eternal gain. Then, aged wife, look up through your tears, and remember that your Father did this in love. JOSIAH ELLIOTT.

HUGHES—Sister Mary C. Hughes, the beloved wife of W. H. Hughes, departed this life at her home near Colerain, Bertie county, June 24th, 1893, in the seventy-second year of her age. Sister Hughes has been a consistent member of the Baptist church for fifty-five years. Her deeds of love and kindness will be long remembered by all who knew her, for although children of her own never graced her home, yet during her faithful walk of nearly fifty-three years with her husband but few days passed in which she did not manifest her maternal care upon some poor orphan or wanderer cast upon the cold charities of this life. She did not seem to dread death, but rather to regard it as the last obstacle which separated her from her God. When it was known by all that her spirit would soon pass out of this into another life, she pressed the hand of those who stood by her bedside, and in tender remonstrances bade them meet her in heaven. When we consider the patient endurance of Sister Hughes, and the welcome with which she met death, we are inclined to say, "Oh grave, where is thy victory? oh death, where is thy sting?" Her husband has in his old age been bereft of a faithful companion. But may he be shielded and comforted by him who does all things well. May he look to the Lord in his trouble, and feel that separation here is only for a short time, and that union in heaven means union forever.

Beautiful spirit, free from all stain,
Ours the heartache, sorrow and pain,
Thine is the glory and infinite gain,
Thy slumber is sweet.

FOR THE RECORDER.

Heaven Above.

BY HIGHT C. MOORE.

"Where is joy? Where is gladness?
Where is there no more of sadness?
Where is peace and love?"
Jehovah heard the wanderer's cry
And angels flitting from on high
On snowy wings brought this reply,
"In heaven above."

FOR THE RECORDER.

A Crown of Stars.

NORRA WINSTEAD.

A crown of stars, thank God!
When saddest, sombrest night kneels on the grave of day,
When the dead day is a dream, a beautiful dream alway—
When purple gleams and golden clouds are memories of light,
He gives a crown of stars—when it is night.

A crown of stars, thank God!
When I shall lay me down to walk on earth no more,
When I see the sapphire waters break on the silver shore
In the visions of that silence! When is heard my human cry,
I'll wear a crown of stars—when I shall die.

Duties Never Clash.

"Oh, dear! What shall I do?" Lucy Hammond was kneeling at her desk in the deserted class room. All her companions were enjoying themselves in the large reception parlors, where to night they were allowed to entertain their friends. She thought herself quite alone when she uttered her despairing words; but a gentle hand touched her shoulder, and a voice replied to them.

"You are in trouble, dear. Tell me what has gone wrong for you."

"Oh, Miss Holmes!" Lucy turned to her teacher with a sobbing cry. "I didn't know anybody was here. But I am in trouble. Harry has just gone away so angry with me!"

"Your brother! I thought you were so fond of him. How did you vex him?" asked Miss Holmes, with ready sympathy.

"He wanted to borrow some money to go to the theatre with some boys that he'd promised to treat. And I hadn't any of my own, but I had five dollars that grandma had sent me for contributions to the Sunday-school and the missionary society. She wrote expressly that I wasn't to use it for anything else. So I didn't feel that I had a right to lend it to him."

"It would certainly have been wrong," said Miss Holmes.

"So I thought, but Harry didn't agree with me. He said I preached about religion, and duty, and all that stuff, but it was much more a duty to help my brother when he was in a scrape. And he had promised the boys, he said, and he would pay me back when his allowance came. But I couldn't feel it was right to give him grandma's money. So he called me mean, and stingy, and selfish," sobbed Lucy; "and he said he would never speak to me again if I didn't send him the money to morrow morning. Oh, Miss Holmes, what shall I do?"

"Don't do wrong, whatever happens," her teacher answered. "There is an old saying that duties never clash; and even if Harry wanted the money for a better purpose, you have no right to disobey your grandmother."

"But if Harry never speaks to me again!"

"You can always pray for Harry, that God will make him wiser and kinder," said Miss Holmes. "It is hardly possible that he will carry out such a foolish threat."

She comforted her pupil with such kind words and good counsel that Lucy took heart again; and knowing that she had done right, resigned herself to bear whatever might happen. She had a letter from her brother the next day, demanding the money; but she did not send it. She wrote to him lovingly, repeated her good reason, and begging him to give up his follies and extravagances, and turn to better things. Then she waited with an anxious heart to see what he would do. But she had not long to wait.

That night a fire broke out in the theatre, and two hundred people were burned, or crushed to death. Harry came to see his sister early in the morning afterward. He was trembling and pale with excitement.

"If you had given me that money," he said, "I shouldn't have been alive to day. The fellows that I was going with are all killed. I had to stay at home because I had no money."

Lucy's thankfulness need not be described. She felt truly that she would have been her brother's murderer if she had yielded to the wrong that he urged; and he learned a lesson that checked him in a course of folly, and led him to a wise and Christian manhood.—M. E. B., in The Sunlight.

For Mental Exhaustion,
Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. R. M. Tucker, Helena, Ala., says: "I have used it in my practice for some time, and am well pleased with the effects in dyspepsia, nervousness and in deranged secretions. It acts well on the kidneys, and in mental exhaustion I think it is a good thing."

Manliness.

The manly way is to treat lightly the [illegible] passed on us by others, but to be manly and honorably sensitive about the [illegible] which we are compelled to pass [illegible]. This, I say, will produce a [illegible] and a noble life. It is not [illegible] meet the demands of the world. [illegible] morality is mainly negative; all [illegible] is to be respectable. But [illegible] watch upon his own spirit, and judges his own outer and inner life conscientiously and intelligently, must make great demands upon himself. He who does so will not need to care very much what others think of him. True worth will shine out sooner or later. He may give offense sometimes, and be occasionally misunderstood, but he has only to wait a little and stand his ground. He is not like the miserable slave of conventionality who has constantly to be resorting to mean expedients to hide his defects and make his tinsel look like gold. The workman who cannot bear to let his work out of his hands as long as his own eye can detect a flaw in it will not have to wait long to see it appreciated by others also. There are few feelings more satisfying than amid public depreciation and obloquy to fall back on one's own sense of pure motives and right conduct. This, however, is a comparatively easy thing to do; it is a far rarer manliness to acknowledge to faults which one's own eye can detect even when others are applauding, and to pass through all the drama of moral feeling which the conscientious review of our conduct ought to excite whether others know anything about it or not. This is an experience unknown to the shallow man; it is the manly way.—Rev. James Stalker.

The Test of Laughter.

There are few tests of character surer or more easily applied than the one of laughter. If you know what a man laughs at, you can form a pretty accurate estimate of what he is. There are all sorts of laughs, from the silly simper to the broad, hearty guffaw, and each one of them tells its story to the discriminating observer. As a rule, men are off guard when they laugh; they are in the attitude of children, and so show forth without disguise just what is in them. The deep springs of character, the permanent habits of mind, are touched and disclosed by this commonest of all actions. A laugh is more involuntary and instinctive than a speech.

It is true that "a man may smile and smile, and be a villain," yet the villain's smile can rarely be a perfect counterpart to that of perfect integrity. How much it tells of a person to say that he never laughs, or that he always laughs in the wrong place! The finer shadings of a person's nature come out better in his laugh than in almost any other way. People will laugh at what is low and coarse and mean, when they would be rather afraid or ashamed to say it. So, also, the quality of the mind, whether trained or untrained, is plainly shown in the quality of the laugh and the occasion that calls it out. The disgusting giggle of the empty-headed young lady is familiar to all; so also is the twinkling sparkle in the eye that marks the keen appreciation of a nice point in refined conversation. The dull of wit, or the abnormally solemn and slow, never see anything to laugh at. The shallow trained and frivolous laugh too much. The absent-minded or slow paced laugh too late. The thoughtless or unreflective, and the reckless or cruel, laugh too quick. The ill bred laugh too loud. The sly and crafty laugh too low—they snicker. The smirk, the chuckle, the grin, and the sneer also lay bare the contents of the secret chambers of the soul. Yes, very much may be learned from a laugh. It will well repay the student of human nature to observe this point closely.—Exchange.

The Magic Hammock.

Such a queer hammock it was. Sometimes it was large enough to hold Bess and Benny and Bert, with plenty of room to spare for dollies and kitties, and even Bert's little pug dog Popsey.

Then the very next day it would be so small that there was just barely room for one little child, with only one dolly or kitty. This is the way I found out about it.

One day Bert and Popsey were having a nice swing in the hammock, and I sat on the porch watching them. Pretty soon Bess came out with Kitty Grey in her arms, and said: "Let us get in too, Bert."

"No," said Bert, crossly; "there isn't room enough only just for Popsey and me."

"Why, Bert," I said, "that is very strange. Is not this the same hammock that held all of you this morning?"

"Yes'm," said Bert, hanging his head.

"I will tell you how it is," said grandma, who sat by the window with her knitting. "It is a magic hammock, with a puckering string. One fairy always lets out the string as far as she can, and takes all the children in. She is a good fairy, and her name is Love. The other is a bad fairy, called Selfishness. She always draws up the string so tight that only one little boy or girl, with his own pet dog or kitty, can possibly squeeze in. Either one of these fairies will come at the children's call. I think Bert made a mistake just now and called the wrong one."

Bert looked so red and ashamed that I said: "Shall we call the other fairy, Bert?"

He nodded his head, and I called, softly: "Come, Love; come, Love!"

And, if you will believe it, the moment I spoke the words the hammock flew wide open, and Bess and Kitty Grey sprank in; Bert's face was all smiles, and the hammock swung so gaily that I feared the children would be tossed out. Did I see the fairy? Oh, no! Fairies are too small to be seen with our eyes. But I saw her good work, and that was enough.—Our Little Ones.

His Benefits.

I was walking along one winter's night hurrying toward home, with my little maiden at my side. Said she:

"Father, I am going to count the stars."

"Very well," I said, "go on."

By and by I heard her counting, "Two hundred and twenty-three, two hundred and twenty-four, two hundred and twenty five. Oh, dear!" she said, "I had no idea there were so many!"

Ah! dear friends, I sometimes say in my soul: "Now, Master, I am going to count thy benefits."

Soon my heart sighs, not with sorrow, but burdened with such goodness, and I say to myself, "I had no idea that there were so many."—Mark Guy Pearse.

To the small and large farmer, why not take ten acres to the plow and bring it up; work it like a garden spot and make from ten to twenty bales of cotton on it, rather than fifty acres to the plow and make seven bales of cotton.

The experienced farmer of to-day knows that the above is not unreasonable, and can be accomplished by the farmers of the South as well as by other people. Then, I say, let us begin now to farm for profit by adopting the intensive method of farming, making it a pleasure, for who could refuse to be happy when in looking over his farm he can realize that he has not labored in vain?—*B. A LONG TRAIN —of diseases follows bad blood and inactive liver. Every one knows when their blood is impure and liver sluggish; pimples and boils appear, or they feel drowsy, weak, tired and thick-headed.

We want to teach you how to fight it. Begin in time. Plenty of fresh air, exercise, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, will bring you out of danger. The reason? "Discovery" enriches and purifies the blood and renders the liver active. As the germs of disease enter the circulatory system through the liver, they can be resisted there and in the blood. In those scrofulous conditions of the blood which invite catarrh, bronchitis, and end in Consumption, you have the means of prevention and cure.

You can save yourself from Grip, Malaria, or Fever by putting all the functions of the body in a healthy state, besides building up healthy flesh, by taking the "Discovery." Better than all the emulsions of Cod liver oil which put on fat, but not wholesome flesh. G. M. D. is guaranteed to benefit or cure all blood disorders, or money refunded.

IN THE North American Review for July, Dr. Briggs, in an article on "The Future of Presbyterianism in the United States," after setting forth his views and showing how he and other men have been harassed through lack of intelligence and denominational usurpation of power and filibustering on the part of the assemblies during the past century, declares that he will remain in the church. His reason for so doing is that the General Assembly that convicted him is not a permanent body; has no continuous life; "is composed of the representatives of the presbyteries who meet together for a few days and then dissolve forever." He says, "One, two, or three General Assemblies in succession may usurp power, may do great injustice, may make breaches in the constitution of the church. But all these wrongs may be righted by a fourth or a fifth, or any subsequent Assembly." Therefore he and his minority are justified in remaining in the church to wait until an Assembly may be appointed that will please them and displease the present majority; or in the words of Dr. Briggs, continuing "the struggle for truth and for right." To us it seems that such a struggle can only result in dissatisfaction to one side or the other, and to final division and error.

All this may seem well to Dr. Briggs and the Presbyterians, and we certainly hope that God will terminate all well, but we are glad from the bottom of our hearts that we have a belief and a religion which is not in the hands of mortals to change, however unintelligent or learned, or however great their majority or minority.

THE recent movement to hold a Sunday-school chautauqua of North Carolina Baptist Sunday-schools at Mt. Vernon Springs Aug. 22–27, next, is one that can be made of invaluable aid to the prosecution of our church work. We believe that the Baptists of this State have the best organized Sunday schools in many sections to be found anywhere. We know that those in this city are superior to any we have ever seen. But in many sections where good Sunday-schools are organized the work is not conducted as it might be. This is not through lack of zeal or good intentions, but through inexperience. In the chautauqua ideas and plans may be set forth by those who have been successful in the work; difficulties and obstacles may be discussed and removed, and a general plan of work may be determined on which cannot but result in vast benefit to all of our Sunday-school workers, —experienced and inexperienced: More than this, it can be made a means of exciting a greater interest in this important department of the church, and of renewing zeal and harmony in its prosecution. Our Sunday schools should never be neglected. In them are our future leaders, the boys and girls who shall take our place in a few years, and as surely as they are inclined aright today, we may have no fears of the result in the future. We would be glad if all our churches and Sunday-schools would send good delegations to this first chautauqua, that the brethren who have taken steps towards making it permanent may be encouraged in their work. It is worthy of our heartiest support.

A NEW educational campaign is upon us, and it is, in our opinion, one that should be hailed with delight by everyone interested in the present and future of his country. We speak of the campaign for students. Years ago it was the question with the young man to obtain a rudimentary education that would warrant a further prosecution of his studies, and to acquire sufficient money to maintain him at a college. Today the rivalry of our institutions in this State and the United States for a strong showing in numbers has almost driven these questions from consideration, and now the youth has only to consider if a college education is worth the time, and which college to attend. We believe in educating our boys at a minimum cost; we believe in an education that bears the greatest good to the greatest number, but we do not believe in sacrificing scholarship for numbers. That there is imminent danger of our educational institutions doing the latter, through their intense rivalry, is more than apparent. Let them be careful. The quality of the students and the standard of scholarship of an institution are of far more value than mere numbers and names.

THE people who are wondering what the (Chicago) university can possibly do with so much money (few of these people are left in Chicago, however,) will be enlightened by the president's statement that no adequate provision has been made for the general expenses of the university, or for the extraordinary expenses of its first years. "It needs at once," says the same high authority, "$100,000 for books, $100,000 for apparatus, $100,000 for the improvement of the quadrangles, $100,000 for an electrical and heating plant, and $100,000 for miscellaneous equipment."—Chicago cor. Examiner.

We wonder what went with that $7,000,000 endowment, and what those enormous expenses are for. It seems to us that if an institution cannot get along with $7,000,000 the money ought to be distributed among our unpretentious colleges who do a great work with $200,000. The greater the endowment the greater the cry for more seems to be true of many of our great universities. It strikes us that the money will be of far more worth if distributed among some of our struggling colleges. We should strive to give all a rudimentary education first, and let those who have ten years to spend in pursuance of one subject pay their way. Wake Forest only asks for $20,000 before next March. Surely she should have that.

Talks About Law—No. 14.

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

CORPORATIONS.

A corporation is said to be an "artificial person." So numerous and important have corporations become, that all men should have some general knowledge of them.

First. How does a corporation come into existence? In one of two ways: either by the act of the Legislature, or else by the order of the Clerk of a Superior Court. A Clerk can grant any charter except to a railroad company or to a bank. The Legislature alone can grant charters to them; but the Legislature also has concurrent power to incorporate any other company.

Let us suppose that Mr. Cheeryble and six of his wealthy friends wish to venture in a banking scheme. Now they could, if they wished, form a copartnership, and not obtain any charter.

But there would be many objections to this course. In the first place, if one of the partners were to die, the concern might be put to trouble with his estate. Again, a copartnership is not permanent; it is a personal affair, depending upon the mutual good-will of the partners. And lastly and mainly, if a copartnership becomes involved in debt, each partner is individually liable, that is to say, his whole estate is responsible for the debts of the firm generally.

Not so with corporations. "They are to be commended," said my Lord Coke, "in that they secure the best learned counsel. They have a charter carefully drawn up, and by the terms of that charter, and by that alone, they stand.

The Legislature of North Carolina have endeavored, during many years, to grant no bank charters without inserting a clause that the stockholders are individually liable, at least to the amount of the stock that they take. But many charters will be found in which there is no such clause.

Take the case, then, of Mr. Cheeryble and his six friends. They obtain such a charter, and open the "Cheeryble Banking House." The credit and reputed stability of the bank attract a long line of deposits. Finally, the day of reckoning comes, and the institution closes its doors. The public find the mere rind of the cheese; the heart has some time since been consumed. Subsequent stockholders lose all, and innocent depositors lose half, their deposits. Such things transpire around us often.

The stockholders of each national bank are individually liable to creditors to double the amount of stock taken. That is to say, not only is the stock of each holder assets for creditors, but also each stockholder must pay an additional sum, out of his own pocket. This is a great protection to the public.

Now, in the case supposed of the Cheeryble Banking Company: The depositors might lose half or more of all moneys deposited with the bank, and yet the owners of the bank be not liable out of their own individual funds for any part of such loss. There might be cases in which the directors of the bank, if guilty of fraud or imposition, or of gross and wilful carelessness in managing the bank, would be individually liable to creditors. Of this we will write in our next.

But would it not be fair, wise and just, both to banking institutions and certainly to the public, if the Legislature were to refuse to charter any more banks except such as rendered all stockholders individually liable to creditors? Would it not greatly increase deposits?

Banks are quite indispensable to commerce. If it were felt and known by the public generally that our banks were as secure as the old stocking tied up and carefully deposited in the bottom of the old "chist," many a rusty silver dollar and many a quaint gold piece that have not seen the light of day in years, would begin to flow in the sweeping channel of trade.

Indeed, one of the disastrous features of the recent money panic will be loss of confidence and the corresponding hoarding of money at home.

Be it said to the credit of the South that we have better stood the financial panic than any section of the Union.

The Recorder as a Help.

Bro. Bailey:—I very much enjoy your editorials as well as those healthful sermons, and other religious articles from the brethren all over the State, but especially the letters from the foreign fields. Oh, that our brethren could be induced to subscribe for the RECORDER. It would, I think, infuse into them more zeal and energy for a holy cause, and prompt them to give more liberally of their means to the support of the gospel. Besides, it is a great educator of the young, and should be taken by every parent who is rearing a family of children. My wife and children enjoy reading its pages very much. Yours truly,

LIZZIE LOWNDES.

Yanceyville, July 13, 1893.

The Church of Christ and Her High Mission.

It is becoming quite common to magnify the society and minify the church. The society craze has about exhausted the alphabet, and yet the work of organizing goes on without abatement. Meanwhile, the church is of sufficient breadth and elasticity to prosecute all the legitimate work of all the religious societies now existing and yet to be born.

I have not aught to say against any society within the church working with and through the church for the furtherance of the church's enterprises. These are nothing more than committees carrying out the expressed will of the church and her divine Master. But the Lord's people should become entangled with no society that tends to diminish their zeal, devotion, contributions, and general efficiency as members of the church of Christ.

There are several causes, besides the society craze, that have led men to minify or disparage the church.

The independence and responsibility of the local churches with regard to all evangelistic work at home and abroad are, to some extent, lost sight of. Boards, which are creatures of the churches, should ever remember that it is for the churches to decide what to do, and raise the means wherewith to do it, and for the boards to serve or execute the will of the churches. Boards and other bodies created by the churches may suggest or advise, as well as execute, but never dictate to the church. I am not sure but that some evil has come from the very phraseology used in the reports of the secretaries of our boards, wherein they speak of what the boards have done. True, the boards, as the servants of the churches, have had supervision and direction under the churches of the work entrusted to them, but the work is the work of the churches where rests the responsibility and whence come the means of its accomplishment. This is really what our worthy secretaries mean, but I doubt not that many fail to get the meaning.

Another cause for disparagement of the church is the vast number of religious societies, all so widely differing in doctrine and polity that they are compelled to live apart, and all claiming, in spite of their divergent and antagonistic views, to be the true church of Christ. For this evil I know no other remedy than for every man to make an honest endeavor to ascertain from the New Testament what are the characteristics of a church of Christ, and then to make his religious organization conform to the divine model or abandon it to the owls and bats.

The true church was set up in Jerusalem in the days of Christ and his apostles. Her high mission is to bring ever increasing praise and glory to God. Says Paul, "Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus, throughout all ages, world without end, amen." Eph. 3: 21. The nervous language of the apostle seems to bend and tremble under the great weight of this prophetic doxology.

In the New Testament, and there only, can we find out what the church is, and what is her mission. It is there that we learn that a church is a company of regenerated persons baptized upon a profession of faith in Christ, and associated together under the law of Christ for mutual edification, and for extending the Messiah's kingdom throughout the world—all to the praise of God's wondrous grace and wisdom and glory.

Another cause for disparagement of the church is the wicked desecration of many of our houses of worship by transforming them into lecture rooms, play-houses, halls for secular societies, &c. To such an extent has this evil grown that in many places the desire to draw and amuse has led to the employment of the devil's avowed servants to lead the musical part of God's service, and to filling the pulpit with men that act the monkey, deal in coarse wit and low anecdote, for the entertainment of fun-loving audiences, to the great dishonor of God, the dismay of Christians, and the damnation of sinners.

Along with this evil is the kindred evil of linking together worthy ends and wicked means on the Jesuitical principle that the end justifies the means. For example, I quote the following extract from a Baptist paper concerning an entertainment given in behalf of a Baptist mission in a Southern city: "The entertainment will be interspersed with tableaux, singing and dancing." Dancing in the interest of a Baptist mission!—all under the management and supervision of some of the most prominent Baptist ladies of the city! I am almost prepared to read of a dance at a prayer-meeting, or a big ball at the close of a funeral.

One more evil that leads to the disparagement of the church is the wide tolerance of ungodliness and wickedness among her membership. In many churches men are shamelessly guilty of habitual profanity, licentiousness, drunkenness, &c., and have no fear of arraignment or expulsion for their crime.

No church should allow its house to be used for any other purpose than that for which it was erected—to worship God,—or retain on her roll the names of those whose daily life belies their profession of faith.

Taking into consideration all the foregoing evils that to-day curse our Christianity, we need not wonder at the shocking announcement of the quadrangular debate in Philadelphia, in which the church has been entered as a competitor against three of the political parties of America.

We have fallen upon evil times. Woe to the Lord's people, if they do not speedily awake to a sense of their sins and their great responsibilities!

Let us have better, higher thoughts of the church of Christ, and seek her spiritual improvement by personal effort to become more Christ-like and to restore the purity and simplicity of worship that marked the apostolic age. Our tendency to observe days and cultivate a ritualistic worship presages the decay of spirituality and godliness among us.

Before I close this article, I wish to give two reasons why we should give the church our best service of heart, hand, brain and substance.

I. The church is the only human organization of divine origin in this world. God himself is the Master Architect that built this holy institution and perpetuates her existence. She is God's appointed means of disclosing to his intelligences, especially to the principalities and powers in heavenly places, or the holy angels that burn with desire to look into these things, his manifold wisdom as displayed in the great work of human redemption and salvation, according to his eternal purpose of grace. The visible creation is but a scaffolding erected for rearing this heavenly structure, and when the church shall have accomplished God's gracious purpose in this world, the scaffolding will be torn down and burnt up.

There are other religious organizations,—all extra-scriptural, some anti-scriptural,—but they are purely of human origin. Associations, conventions and boards are expedients of human origin, and are to be encouraged as very helpful agencies in our co-operative work so long as they seek to serve, and not dominate, the churches, and no longer.

II. Another reason why we should love the church more ardently and serve her more faithfully is, that God himself gives many proofs of his high estimate of the church—his own workmanship. Here are some of them:—

1. The co operation of the Trinity in rearing the heavenly structure,—the Father electing, the Son redeeming, and the Spirit sanctifying the material (sinful human beings) that enters into the building.

2. The vast expense incurred. Before even one stone could be laid, the eternal Son must be veiled in human flesh, made a curse under the divine law, and a sin-offering for lost and guilty men.

3. With his own hand God laid the corner-stone of the church,—the noblest, divinest piece of masonry known to earth or heaven. God says, "Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation, a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner-stone, a sure foundation." Isa. 28: 16.

From the quarry of depraved humanity God has chosen the stones that are to enter into the building throughout all the ages past and to come. Children of wrath, dead in trespasses and sins, vile as the inmates of perdition, they who are thus chosen are regenerated by the Spirit and prepared for their place in the spiritual temple. Says Peter, "Ye also as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ." 1 Pet. 2: 5.

4. The church is God's home. "His dwelling place is in Zion." "This is my rest forever; here will I dwell." Like man, the Lord loves the home of his adoption, purchase and building. Here are his treasures and the objects of his affection and parental solicitude.

5. He has set his beloved Son as Head over the church in all things. Woe to him that dares assume headship over the church of God. He is antichrist, be he pope or king, that takes Christ's place in the temple of God and lords it over God's heritage.

6. As law-giver in Zion, God has given to his church all the laws she needs, adapting them to all times, places and circumstances. Knowing the folly of human wisdom, he has left no legislation for his church to do. Therefore, let not his people be guilty of the folly of making, amending or repealing any of God's laws governing his church. As to the positive ordinances of the church—baptism and the supper—we are to keep them just as they were given to us. To take from, or add to them, or in any way to modify them, is base disloyalty to our King and Law-giver.

7. God is so jealous for the welfare of his church that he calls and qualifies the men whom he places over the church as under-shepherds and preachers of the everlasting gospel. All others that attempt to fill the place are but sounding brass and tinkling cymbals, whatever may be their eloquence or intellectuality.

8. God has shown his high estimate of the church by his loving special providence over her interests through all the centuries of her existence. Christ has promised that the gates of hell shall never prevail against her. He has fully complied with that promise. Never has the day yet come since the founding of the church in Jerusalem, in which the church was not witnessing for Christ somewhere in the world. She will continue to witness for him while the world stands, in spite of the rage of men, the thunderbolts, the edicts of rulers, and the fires of martyrdom. For God is with her.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 26, 1893

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

After August 5th we shall cease to give the premium "What Baptists Believe." Many have expressed themselves as well pleased with this work, and we know that there is a place for it in every Baptist home. It has been selling all over the country during the past three months. We will be glad to give it on the former conditions, viz., to every new two dollar, cash-in-advance subscriber, and to every old subscriber who pays to date and a year in advance, until Aug. 5th. After that date this golden opportunity is lost.

COLONIAL HISTORY.

The News Observer Chronicle some time ago took issue with Dr. Stephen B. Weeks in reference to a published statement of his that no one could at one period in colonial times conduct a school in North Carolina without being a member of the Episcopal church, and also the further statement that Presbyterian ministers could not at one time perform the marriage ceremony.

In referring to the statements mentioned, the News-Observer Chronicle accuses Dr. Weeks with not being content to narrate facts, but with trying to "work up to a point." Being now the only morning daily at the capital, and a triplex paper besides, we thought that rather a brash way of putting things, in view of the fact that reputable historians of various beliefs had put down against the Episcopal church of colonial times charges of much graver nature. It occurred to us to say that if our esteemed contemporary proposed to enter upon a defence of the Episcopal church of those days, there were some things which had been lodged in our mind we would like to have explained. Referring to our request, the News Observer Chronicle of the 16th inst. says:—

The BIBLICAL RECORDER asks us if ministers other than those who belonged to the Established Church were not improperly treated in early times in Virginia. We have no particular acquaintance with Virginia matters, and do not know except as to the Quakers. At one time Virginia, like puritanical New England, was very oppressive in regard to the Quakers. One of our own forbears was, in 1663, expelled from the Virginia legislature on the charge of "being kindly affected towards the Quakers."

Our esteemed contemporary also asks us if ministers other than those who belonged to the Established Church were not required to give bond in North Carolina. We are more at home in North Carolina matters. We never heard of such a law, regulation or practice at any time in North Carolina. We do not mean to say that some particular person may not under some circumstances have been put under bond—but not because he was a minister.

As to the foregoing, we remark that Quakers were not the only or the chief ones who were persecuted in Virginia by the Established Church. Dr. Hawks (Episcopalian) in his History of the Episcopal church of Virginia, p. 121, says: "No dissenters in Virginia experienced for a time harsher treatment than did the Baptists. They were beaten and imprisoned, and cruelty taxed its ingenuity to devise new modes of punishment and annoyance." The records of Middlesex, Culpepper and other counties bear out the allegations of the Episcopal historian. The persecutions to which the Baptists of Virginia were subjected made them the champions of religious toleration in that State, and they agitated the question in their associations until the Episcopal church was disestablished in Virginia in 1779.

Dr. Hawks says: "Persecution had taught the Baptists not to love the Establishment. In their associations they had calmly discussed the matter and resolved on their course. In this course they were consistent to the end, and the war which they waged against the church was a war of extermination. They seem to have known no relentings, and their hostility never ceased for twenty-seven years." Hawks Hist. 137-38.

Semple in his history of the Baptists of Virginia, pages 72, 73, says: "In this grand struggle, while individuals of all parties joined in the opposition, the Baptists as a denomination stood alone, except so far as they were aided by the few Quakers." See also Rives Madison, 599-610. Some broad-minded public men in Virginia, notably Madison and Jefferson, aided in this struggle. It was this fight in Virginia, more, perhaps, than anything else, that put full religious toleration in the Constitution of the United States.

The Constitution as adopted in 1787 had no provision relating to religion: "No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust in the United States." In March, 1788, the General Committee of the Baptists of Virginia met in Goochland. The question was considered by them, "Whether the new Constitution which had now lately made its appearance in public made sufficient provision for the secure enjoyment of religious liberty?" It was unanimously agreed that it did not. Upon consultation with Mr. Madison the General Committee determined to address General Washington. The address said: "When the Constitution first made its appearance in Virginia we, as a society, had unusual struggles of mind fearing that liberty of conscience, dearer to us than property or life, was not sufficiently secured. Perhaps our jealousies were heightened by the usage we received in Virginia under the regal government, when mobs, fines, bonds and prisons were our frequent repast." General Washington in reply assured them of his "readiness to use his influence to make these principles indisputable, and declared that the Baptists had been the persevering promoters of the glorious revolution." Curtis Progress of Bapt. Prin, 56.

Shortly after this address, (but a few months), Virginia proposed the first amendment to the Constitution as follows: "Congress shall make no law requesting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof," and the same was adopted. Thus this country was freed from the religious intolerance in Virginia and other sections, and also the persecutions of "puritanical New England." It would have been better if there had been put in the Constitution a further provision that no moneys raised by taxation or public moneys should be appropriated to sustain religious sects in their work. The necessity for such a provision is seen now in some sections of the country.

As to whether or not Baptist ministers were required to give bond in North Carolina for preaching the gospel, we have this to say: In 1882 Col. John D. Whitford of Newbern (not a Baptist) wrote a series of articles for the Newbern Journal on the early history of that town, in which he says that Brinson, Fulchor and Purefy were imprisoned there for "holding the Baptist faith. They were held in jail for three months, and were stronger in the faith when the doors of the jail were unlocked than when they were locked up"

In 1883 Rev. John T. Albritton, now of Mt. Olive, requested Mr. H. S. Nunn, (not a Baptist), then editor of the Newbern Journal, now dead, to examine the records of Craven county with respect to the persecution of Baptists in colonial times. On the sixth of September, 1883, the editor wrote in his paper:—

In looking over the old dusty records in the Register's office, we find an entry in the minute docket of the county court in 1741 noting the application by Baptists to be allowed to build a church in Newbern. Instead of granting the application, these applicants were all publicly whipped, bound over to keep the peace, and required to give bond for their good behaviour, and also to take the test oath.

We examined the minute book of the Court of Pleas and Quarter Sessions, of Craven county from 1730 to 1746 some months ago. This book has, seemingly by design, been mutilated in many places. At one place a half page is torn out, at other places a page, two pages, and even three to six pages have been cut or torn out. We were not able to find what Mr. Nunn found in 1883, but there are some parts of the record that remain which are pertinent to the matter under consideration. The following appears:—

June 30, 1730. Court met according to adjournment.

A motion and petition was received by a sect of dissenting people, which call themselves Baptists, praying that they may be admitted to build a house of worship.

Rees Price, William Caruthers, and John Bryan, Esqs., made oath to several misdemeanors committed by the Petitioners, contrary to and in contempt of the laws now in force. Upon which it was ordered by the Court that the Petitioners be bound by recognizance for their appearance at the next court of assize and jail delivery, to be held at this town, then and there to answer to such things as they shall be charged with, and in the meantime be of good behaviour to all his Majesties Liege People.

Then follows the bonds of six well known Baptists, John James, William Fulchor, Francis Ayers, Nick Purify, Lemuel Harvey and John Brooks. It is true it is said that these men were charged with misdemeanors, but it seems clear to us from the connection that they were deemed ecclesiastical or dissenting offences, else why were charges preferred when they presented their petition to build a house of worship? What occurred reads very much like Acts 16: 21, and 24: 5.

June 30, 1740.

At the request of P. Roberts, it was admitted to receive a motion and petition read, made by a sect of dissenting people called Baptists, that they may have the liberty to build a house of worship, and being duly examined by the court, acknowledged to all of the articles of the Church of England except part of the 27th and 36th, they desiring to preach among themselves. Referred. Court adjourned till to morrow morning.

June 21st, 1740.

Be it remembered that Francis Ayers, John James, William Fulchor, Lemuel Harvey and Nicholas Purify, do each and every one of them acknowledge themselves to be indebted to our Sovereign Lord, the King, 40£ each. These to be levied on their several goods, chattles, lands and tenements, &c. The condition is in case the aforesaid named do well and truly keep the King's peace to all of his Liege people and in good behaviour, and appear at this court on the third Tuesday in September next, then and there recognizance.

We think the foregoing pretty strong evidence that bonds were required in North Carolina of dissenting ministers on account of their religious faith and preaching the gospel. History has not received that attention in North Carolina that it should. In recent years more attention has been paid to it than formerly, and many facts are being brought to light which are interesting in connection with colonial times. We think it is clear there was considerable intolerance in church matters among the colonists, and there was a fierce struggle against and victory over it. There was so much of it in various sections of the country that those who write about and record it ought not hastily to be charged with trying to pervert history for so doing.

In the struggle which occurred the Baptists shared their part in the battle and more, but they made a glorious history. Mr. Bancroft, in his history of the United States, Vol. 2, p. 66, 67, says: "Freedom of conscience, unlimited freedom of mind, was from the first a trophy of the Baptists." We recur to the achievement of the Baptists now not to brag about it, but that the errors that were made may be seen, and it may appear to our readers to whom they are indebted for some of the blessings they enjoy.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

Leaving Raleigh at 6:30 a. m. on Monday, the 17th, I was in Franklin, Va., at 10 o'clock, a. m. I like the fast train in some particulars very much. You certainly go somewhere very soon when you get on board of it. I found everything complete except breakfast, and that is not in it at all. If Mr. Cleveland will stick to that train long enough he will soon cease to be troubled with corpulency. I am glad it runs so fast that the window sash of the cars cannot be hoisted while the train is in motion. The proneness of a woman to hoist a car window is to me inexplicable, but nine out of ten will do it regardless of weather, dust or cinders. It was on this same trip that a good sister who chanced to have the seat in front of me all at once decided we needed some ventilation, and without any notice to anybody, up went her window. I felt like a piece of a western cyclone had come aboard. While my eyes were being filled with dirt and cinders, I had just a little pleasure in seeing her veil leaving her hat, and ribbons and bows getting into various positions, which were evidently not in accordance with the desire of the wearer. This, however, didn't last long, for after adjusting and re-adjusting her hat, and examining the stability of her hat pins, she decided to lower the sash. First, she pulled the sash, then the spring that held it; but never both at the same time. The kind assistance of the conductor at this juncture relieved the situation, and we had a pleasant ride till I left the train at FRANKLIN, VA.

Here I spent an hour or so with the brethren over the line. A number of these were brought up in the Old North State, but who either by accident, providence, or design, have settled upon the "sacred soil." I found a good number of these taking the RECORDER, and it was a real privilege to me to allow them to continue it for another year. I am sure if I were in Dr. Dickinson's place I should go to see these brethren often.

Just as I was making my way to the boat, I found that the usual pleasures which always attend a ride to Edenton on the "Lota" were to be multiplied by the presence of Dick Vann, Mrs. Vann and Harvey. I had heard Dick was in bad health, but I never saw him looking better. Certainly he doesn't eat like a sick man. He seems to be enjoying his rest fully. He neither reads, sings, nor preaches. This is a big subtraction to make from Dick, and if it had to continue, the question would be, what is there left? Just before we reached Winton I read him a chapter in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." This made him mad, so I gave him the book, Sister Vann promising to read it to him for insomnia. Travel is very light on the boat just now. An insurance agent and myself had the entire upper deck after we left Winton. Fortunately, however, he could sleep and so could I. So it was not long before we were in Edenton and at our quarters for the night. It is always a real pleasure to meet the people of this old town. They may not be as aggressive on some lines as men of other places, but there is a sort of high-toned independence among the people, a grateful and reverential remembrance of what has been, that is hard to keep from falling in love with. Fishing and trucking have been a success in this section, so I did not hear so much about scarcity of money. Bro. K. R. Pendleton was very kind in the help he gave me in my work. Bro. White made a good impression on the brethren for the time he was with them, and they look forward with pleasure to the first of August when he becomes their pastor.

Now the want of just one more railroad pass is the only thing that disturbs me as I start to

ELIZABETH CITY.

It is bad enough at any time for a newspaper man to have to pay money to ride, but especially when the returns of the week promise to be short, as they are now. The investment, however, was a good one. I found Dr. Blackwell and his people not at all cool, but in a good humor, all of them willing and most of them able to pay their subscriptions. The new Sunday-school room is rapidly going up. This will, all told, cost $2,500. It is well planned, and will, when completed, be the finishing up of a complete and elegant church. I almost feel that they ought to have Dr. Hatcher to come and re dedicate the entire church since this much needed addition has been made. I want to suggest that some of our churches which have been trying to build a Sunday-school room for two or three years, and are fearful that they may be that much longer in completing them, write to Bro. E. F. Cohoon, Elizabeth City. He has a plan that worked like a charm with the church there, and will be successful in any Baptist church in the State. The brethren are much pleased with Dr. Blackwell. The church is constantly receiving members. The entire town seems to be looking forward with real delight to the meeting of the Convention there in December. Whoever fails to be present will miss what now promises to be a most enjoyable meeting of our people.

J. C. C.

WE must have money to publish the RECORDER, and we must have it now. Subscriptions are out all over the State that will come in at the Associations, but we cannot wait so long. We know times are hard, but that is no reason why we shouldn't have what is due us if you are able to pay it, in order that we may satisfy our creditors. As we said before, it is small to you, but it amounts to considerable with us. Please attend to this at once. Don't send stamps.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Dr. Chas. Lee Smith of William Jewell College, is spending a month of his vacation at Carolina Beach. He writes that the last session of William Jewell was the most prosperous in its history.

....We were pleased to see Bro. Rufus Hunter, formerly of this county, recently of Oshkosh, Wis., back in North Carolina. He intends to return to Johns Hopkins University in the fall to complete his course.

....It is Richmond Female Institute, and not college, that we spoke of so highly in our last issue. Dr. Nelson will take pleasure in sending catalogues and other information to parents having daughters to educate.

....The announcement of Crozer Theological Seminary appears in another column. This Seminary has made rapid strides to the front within the past few years, and is worthy of the consideration of ministerial students.

....We call attention to the announcement at the top of the first column on this page. If you want "What Baptists Believe," you must pay up before August 1st. We need the money now, and cannot afford to give a premium in the fall months.

....Cards are out announcing the marriage of Prof. William J. Ferrell of Wake Forest College and Miss Irene Cartwright of Cartwright's Wharf, Va., July 27th, at Court Street Baptist church, Portsmouth, Va. We extend congratulations and best wishes.

....Rev. Jasper Howell, Jr., is at present at Home, Tenn. He contemplates preaching next year, and would be glad to get a church in North Carolina. Bro. Howell has just completed his third year at Wake Forest College, and is spoken of very highly by his professors.

....Rev. M. C. Walton writes that Rev. J. T. Jenkins will join him in conducting a tabernacle meeting at Pinhook, about four miles from Teacheys, beginning Aug. 5th. A tabernacle has been built to seat 1,500 people, and other arrangements made looking forward to the salvation of many souls.

....The annual meeting at the Thomasville Orphanage takes place to-day, (26th). Rev. R. L. Patton of Morganton preaches the sermon, and Bro. E. E. Hilliard of Scotland Neck delivers the annual address, which is followed with exercises by the orphans. Trustees meet the 25th. A very pleasant time is expected.

....Rev. G. H. Church of Bryson City preached at the Baptist church Sunday morning and evening. Mr. Church's visit here was with a view to a call to the pastorate of the church. The congregation were well pleased with him, and will hold a meeting Sunday to decide the matter.—Statesville Landmark.

....Rev. and Mrs. H. C. Moore of Morehead City are in the city on a visit to the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Peterson. Mr. Moore having resigned the pastorate at Morehead City, will shortly leave for Rochester, N. Y., where he will enter the theological seminary, and also will have charge of a Baptist church.—Goldsboro Headlight.

....The church at Goldsboro has called Rev. C. A. Jenkens to be their pastor. Bro. Edwards, the present pastor, goes to Fayetteville August the first. The church at Goldsboro has been most fortunate in securing the best of pastors. We congratulate the brethren in the selection of Bro. Jenkens and hope he may find it in the line of duty to accept this work.

....Pastor A. M. Simms resigned the care of our church here Sunday. His acceptance of the Tabernacle church, Raleigh, N. C., was like a thunderbolt in a clear sky to us. It is with great reluctance we give him up. There has been, and is now, the best of feeling between the church and Bro. Simms. Bro. S. will remain here until August 1st. May God direct the right man to McKinney.—Cor. Texas Baptist and Herald, July 20.

....Rev. A. Cree met with the colored ministers and brethren at Kelford, Bertie county, on Friday, 14th inst., to form a new colored church. Pastor Wilson preached, Pastor Pearce read the constitution and terms of fellowship which he had drawn up. Bro. Cree addressed the assembled brethren and united with the other ministers in setting apart three members of good standing from Sandy Branch church as deacons. The church starts with twenty members from Sandy Branch church.

....Sunday opening of the World's Fair at Chicago is a failure. The voice of the people has for once made itself heard above the press, above the demagogue, and above the mandate of the highest American court. So can it be always if the people only know their wishes and stick to them in spite of the opinions of others. "The voice of the people is the voice of God."

....In our issue of the 12th it was stated that Rev. J. G. Blalock would study at Chicago next year. This is a mistake. He will attend the Louisville Seminary. He writes: "I found the Seminary all and more than it was represented as being. It holds a place second to none, and for those who expect to labor in our Southland it offers advantages possessed by no other."

....Rev. Jno. T. Albritton writes: "Dr. Pritchard, in his "Notes and Comments" in this week's Charity and Children, speaks strongly and conservatively about our State Mission Board and its work. He says about what I wanted to say—only he says it so much better than I would have done. I believe what he there says would do additional good if transferred to the columns of the RECORDER. Heaven bless the brother! I yet grieve over his departure from the Eastern Association."

....The Historical Chart of Christianity, accompanied with an excellent explanatory key, by Rev. M. Loucks, D. D, of Dayton, Ohio, is before us. The Chart is 33x46 inches, in colors, and presents quite an attractive appearance. It contains a complete history of Christianity from the beginning, and is filled with an immense amount of valuable information, arranged in a manner that is at once both clear and impressive. It is of great value to the student of history. Price, $2.00, with key.

....Rev. Dr. Tupper, President of Shaw University, who has been lying at death's door at his cottage in Martha's Vineyard, shows signs of recovery. His foot has been successfully amputated, and he is in as comfortable a condition as circumstances will allow. He shows a splendid power of will in baffling disease, and a most serene and pious cheerfulness in the endurance of pain. Few men in the denomination have done so much for the poor freedmen as has this now afflicted servant of God.—Christian Inquirer.

....It is strange how long it takes some people to learn a very simple thing. We have a set of six rules at the top of the first column of the RECORDER that have stood unchanged for years and years, and yet everyone of these rules are broken every month, sometimes during a week. We get obituaries each week beyond the limit in length, and no money to pay for them. In justice to our readers we must request that all obituaries be made shorter. And we want to impress these four words on the reader's mind: "Do not send stamps." We cannot sell them and we can't use them to mail the paper. The other rules are very important: read them now.

A Basket of Scraps.

PROF. CARLYLE.

I was greatly relieved and gratified on Wednesday by the reception of a brief letter from Prof. Carlyle, written by his own hand. For several days we felt no little anxiety about him. Now, however, he is convalescing. But his heart and mind were so full of the College that he wrote more about it than he did about himself. I trust that now, within a few days, we shall hear of his entire recovery.

BRO. GEO. W. GREENE.

A charming letter from my late colleague, now in Canton, China, lies before me. He says, "The work moves on here quietly with frequent baptisms." He speaks of "One man, a literary man, a class who think much walking or labor beneath their dignity, who walked four days over mountains to ask for baptism." He adds, "I have made my first attempt to preach a regular sermon. It was poor preaching, but I hope to follow it up."

A SALUTARY REACTION.

Among the foremost of living American scientists is Prof. N. S. Shaler, Professor of Geology at Harvard University. In the preface to his recently published work, the interpretation of Nature, he says,

"My first contact with natural science in my youth and early manhood had the not uncommon effect of leading me far away from Christianity. Of late years a further insight into the truths of nature has gradually forced me once again towards the ground from which I had departed. Although the individual man is apt to over-estimate the importance of his mental history, I think that I am not mistaken in believing that my own experience, in a way, represents the course which many other naturalists are more or less consciously following."

This quotation will, I am sure, be of interest to very many. To my own mind it suggests several reflections; among others, the importance of giving the very best scientific instruction in Christian colleges, where the tendency referred to by Prof. Shaler may be, to a great extent, resisted and neutralized. It is a source of constant joy to me that at Wake Forest the very best work is done in all the Scientific Departments, and that it is done by men whose lives are living epistles.

THE UNION MEETINGS.

At least two score of these will meet in a few days. In some of them, educational questions have, in one form or another, a place on the programme. May I not be pardoned for expressing the hope that at every one of them some little time be given to one or more brethren for talking to the people about the education of their children? There are many academies and schools in which we feel interested as a people. We ought to avail ourselves of every opportunity to let our own brethren know of them and their work. And the College,—will there not be some son of the now venerable Mother, who will be glad at each of these meetings to work privately and publicly for the College? Our main reliance for reaching our Baptist people is through the pastors and other friends.

REYNOLDSON ACADEMY.

I am delighted to know that this institution is to be re-opened under very favorable auspices.

For many years it was one of the most useful of the secondary schools in North Carolina. Not a few men who afterwards achieved distinction received their preparation for college within its walls.

Mr. John G. Mills, the son of one of my honored colleagues, has now accepted the position as Principal. His high character, his excellent scholarship, and the enviable reputation made by him as a teacher in Georgia make me believe that under his administration the Academy will more than regain its former prestige. And I hope that the brethren of the Old Chowan Association will rally round it and make it, as their own Academy, a feeder for the Colleges at Murfreesboro and Wake Forest.

CHARLES E. TAYLOR.

Wake Forest, July, 21, 1893.

More Kind Words About the Wake Forest Law School.

Mr. W. W. Kitchen of Roxboro writes:

"I regard the establishment of the Law Department of Wake Forest College as a great step forward in educational progress. Its need was felt. Every year young men of talent have gone elsewhere, simply for the lack of it. Its Faculty (Judge Clark, Judge Strong and Mr. Gulley) reflect credit upon the College and will attract youth of legal aspirations to our favorite institution. The acknowledged learning, ability, and dignity of these gentlemen assure for the Department advantages second to no other for North Carolina young men. Such men guarantee success. The friends of the College have the boys to make for it a large class. The material is abundant. The workmen are masters. I predict much usefulness for the new departure."

Mr. E. F. Aydlett of Elizabeth City says:

"I learn with great pleasure and satisfaction that you are to have a Law School established at the College, to be managed and conducted by Hon. Walter Clark, Hon. Geo. W. Strong, and N. Y. Gulley, Esq.

"The ability and legal learning of these distinguished gentlemen are so universally known and recognized throughout the State that they need no comment at my hands.

"The School is a move in the right direction,—it is a necessity, and has long been desired by many of the friends and patrons of the College. I believe that it is another step in the advancement and prosperity of Wake Forest College, and desire to congratulate you upon its establishment, and upon securing such able jurists to direct it."

Mr. J. C. Scarborough, Supt. of Public Instruction, writes:

"I approve the action of the Committee of the Trustees in its arrangement for a Law Department at the College, to be opened at the beginning of the session in September, 1893. It is a forward movement for the College and its work which has my hearty endorsement.

"The selection of the Faculty, as announced, is a sure guarantee of the success of the Law Department.

"Justice Walter Clark, of our State Supreme Court, is one of the best equipped lawyers in the State and one of the brightest and clearest thinkers in the legal profession.

"Judge Geo. V. Strong is a very fine lawyer and a first class teacher, thoroughly conversant with the law and its principles, having in a marked degree the real teacher's gift of clearly imparting to students the principles mastered by himself.

"Mr. N. Y. Gulley is a born teacher, thoroughly understanding what he undertakes to teach, and imparting it to others as clearly as he understands it himself.

"They are all strong men and true."

Mr. J. Y. Phillips of Dalton writes:

"I learn that a Law School has been established at Wake Forest, in connection with the College, with Judge Walter Clark in charge, and Judge Strong and Mr. N. Y. Gulley as his assistants. The establishment of this School is a very considerable addition to the College. The well known legal ability of these gentlemen warrants me in predicting success for the School. It should have, and doubtless will receive, a very large patronage from the start."

Mr. J. H. Tucker of Asheville writes:

"I have noticed with great pleasure and satisfaction the new departure the Trustees have made in the establishment of a Law Department in connection with our College. It is a move in the right direction, and shows the spirit of progress that has ever characterized the College. I am specially pleased with the Faculty. With the profound legal learning of Judge Clark, the experience and ability of Judge Strong, and the ambition of Mr. Gulley, I can see no reason why the Law School at Wake Forest should not become the leading law school in the State."

Mr. J. E. Vann of Winton writes:

"I am highly pleased at the action of the Trustees in establishing a Law School at Wake Forest. In my opinion it is the very thing; it ought to have been done ten years ago. It will broaden the field of usefulness of the College and give it an advertisement such as it has never had before. It will show to the prejudiced and ignorant that other things besides theology (as many seem to think) can be, and will be, thoroughly taught at Wake Forest. As to the Faculty, it is simply superb. Judges Clark and Strong are worthy of the highest praise; but they are too well known throughout the State as gentlemen, scholars and lawyers to need any praise. And Mr. Gulley, though comparatively a young man, is not unknown to the profession. I am sure that the School will be a success. The College is to be congratulated upon the selection of this learned trio."

The S. S. Chautauqua.

MT. VERNON SPRINGS, AUG. 22—27.

Every day we are receiving letters heartily endorsing the movement for the Baptist Sunday-school Chautauqua, to be held at Mt. Vernon Springs near Ore Hill, commencing August 22d and closing on the 27th.

We shall have a larger attendance than was expected, but Mr. Foust, proprietor of the hotel, is making preparations to take care of all who attend.

The following extracts from some of the letters received show the favor of the movement:

Rev. Dr. T. H. Pritchard of Charlotte says: "I am sorry to say to you I think it highly probable that I shall not be able to attend the Chautauqua. If I can, I will do so with pleasure, as I greatly approve of the enterprise."

Bro. J. H. Smith of Winston writes: "I consider it one of the best moves yet inaugurated for the advancement of our Sunday-school interests—an inspiration. I am now confined to my bed with sickness, but am improving, and see no reason why I should not be on hand."

Bro. N. L. Shaw, Warrenton, writes that "it is unnecessary for me to assure you I am in full sympathy with the Chautauqua, and will do all in my power to make it a success."

Mrs. T. M. Tucker, Reidsville, says: "When the roll for the Chautauqua is called, I'll be there."

Bro. B. B. Price of Marion writes: "I regret very much to say I cannot attend this important meeting. Our court begins on the 21st of August, and I, being the clerk, cannot be absent court-week. Would be delighted to attend, because of the interest I feel in the work, and know it would be a great benefit to me. I pray that it may be the beginning of a new era in the Sunday-school work in our State."

Rev. W. C. Tyree of Durham says: "May the blessings of God be with you and the work."

E. K. Proctor, Jr., of Lumberton, heartily endorses the Chautauqua, and says: "I am in thorough sympathy with a meeting of the kind, but on August 22d, or in fact any date after the middle of August, I shall be so occupied in making arrangements for our school that I cannot be away from home. I should be much pleased to be present and undertake to speak on the subject assigned me, for it is a favorite of mine and one I like to think about."

Rev. R. L. Patton, Morganton, says the movement is in the right direction, and he is arranging to be present.

Prof. C. E. Brewer, Wake Forest College, writes: "My heart is with you in this work, and I regret that I cannot be with you in person at your first meeting."

Bro. J. Y. Joyner, former principal of the Goldsboro schools, in a letter, says: "I approve heartily of this movement, and shall fervently pray for God's blessings upon it."

Prof. Theodore Wood, Peachland, says: "I am most heartily and soulfully glad that steps have been taken to organize the North Carolina Baptist Sunday-school Chautauqua, and I send congratulations. My heart and soul be with your efforts and prayers for success."

Prof. F. P. Hobgood, of the Oxford Female Seminary, says: "I hope to be able to do the work assigned me in the Chautauqua."

Prof. E. P. Moses, Superintendent of the Raleigh Graded Schools, says: "I see no reason why I cannot be present."

Bro. M. F. Allen of Reidsville, in writing his commendations of the meeting, says: "Unless providentially hindered will fill my place on the program for the Chautauqua."

We shall be pleased to hear from the brethren, giving their opinion of the movement, whether they expect to attend or not.

N. B. BROUGHTON.

Rev. George P. Moore, Dead.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Rev. George P. Moore died suddenly Sunday morning, July 23, 1893, at his residence five miles east of Pittsboro, N. C. The cause of death was angina pectoris. He had had a few attacks before, but during the present year his general health had been very good. He was to all appearances as well as usual when he arose yesterday morning, went out to feed his stock and fell dead at his crib door. He filled his regular appointment at Rock Spring church on Saturday, and remarked to his wife before starting to church that he "never felt more like preaching in his life." His appointment at Rock Spring was not filled yesterday, for the preacher had joined the church above. He died just as the king of day was beginning to throw a flood of light over the Christian Sabbath.

He was a zealous, industrious, honest Christian gentleman, and had a host of friends. He was a member of the Mt. Zion Association and has served quite a number of churches in this county. He was in his sixty-seventh year. He leaves a devoted wife and seven children.

A few years ago he represented this county, in the General Assembly. A good man has gone to his reward.

Two Questions.

[The following questions have come to our office. We cannot answer them, because we have no evidence that the allegations are true.—EDITOR.]

Editor Recorder:—We would like to ask on what authority President Winston of Chapel Hill offers free tuition to almost every Baptist boy he knows, who is thinking of going to Wake Forest, and does the State give him permission to spend the money given the so called University in paying the expenses of good athletes?

And again, we would like to ask if the Baptist ministers of our State are doing their duty towards Wake Forest, many of whom received their education free, and are now in a position to aid their Alma Mater.

Goldsboro, July 12, 1893.

From the Pacific Coast.

Bro. Bailey:—Perhaps a few lines from the Pacific Coast will interest some of your readers.

I attended the Baptist Convention of Northern and Central California at Santa Cruz June 21st to 24th. I heard Bro. J. B. Hartwell tell why he was going back to China as a missionary. I believe one of the best men is gone from California. I rejoice that he is gone to China to preach to the Chinese, and I am sorry that the West has lost so good a man. It does seem to me that California needs the gospel almost as much as China does. Many men have come here from the New England States and some from the South who were failures as ministers before they came here and worse than failures here. Some of our New England brethren don't appear to think that any good thing can come from the South unless it is a Negro. I am sorry that such is the case, but I see too much of a want of Christian courtesy among Baptist ministers and often a marked difference is made by our mission boards.

I have been preaching some for Bro. J. G. Pulliam at Woodland since I came to California, and I expect, if the Lord is willing, to go to Dixon to preach for Elder W. T. Jordan, while he and his wife go to North Carolina to visit relatives. Bro. Jordan is pastor of one of the best churches on the coast, and he is doing a good work. He and Bro. Pulliam have boldness enough to rebuke sin in high places, but many of the preachers here wink at sin rather than rebuke it. The Baptist ministers here often preach about "Lizzie Borden," "Moral Microbes," &c., and let the plain truths of the Bible alone.

I expect to return to North Carolina in September and locate at Gastonia to help the brethren in the work.

I forgot to say, in the proper place, that in the California Convention they adjourn so often for the W. M. U. and the B. Y. P. U., that I hardly knew when I was in the Convention or out of it. This all appears strange to a green "Tar heel."

Women take the platform in mixed assemblies and talk (of course they can't speak), and also preside in mixed assemblies. It has been said that the women make better presiding officers than men. Well, that may be so, but it does look so strange to a North Carolinian who has not been West long to a hear a woman squeal so as to be heard over a large congregation. I will be somewhat prepared for women to lead when this wave reaches the South. I have hunted up the Scriptures that Paul wrote against women speaking in church. I am going to mark them and be ready to cut them out of my Bible, and then help denounce Paul as an old "jilted batchelor" who was not inspired half the time when he was writing, that is, he was inspired when he wrote things that suit us, and not inspired when he wrote things that don't suit us.

I pray the Lord to bless North Carolina. I believe we have the best men, and especially the best Christian women in the world. Now, if anybody is displeased with this statement, let it be remembered I have worked in the mountains of North Carolina for twenty four years, and I have seen how people are elsewhere.

I met Bro. W. B. Pope of Reno, Nevada. He is doing a good work at that place. Reno Baptist church is the only Baptist church in Nevada. Woodland has nine churches in all, and thirty saloons. The Baptist church is small but composed of good people.

San Francisco has 4,500 saloons and a population of about 300,000. No Sunday proper here! The day is a day for horse-racing, shooting-matches, dancing, &c. The saloons are open, and saloon-keepers do more business on Sunday than any other day. But few people attend church; hence the desire of certain preachers "to draw" by using sensational themes.

May the Lord bless the RECORDER.

Yours fraternally, E. F. JONES.

Rev. R. T. Bryan.

Our people here have been greatly pleased by a visit from this loyal and enthusiastic representative of our Foreign Mission Board. Bro. Bryan was a student here, graduating at the University in 1882, and is consequently well known. He preached his first sermon in our church when a student. He has always been greatly beloved by our people and the community generally. So we gave him the whole day last Sunday, and right faithfully did he use it. And it was so gratifying to have him return in the true apostolic spirit—not to criticise our mission methods, and seek to revolutionize them by the substitution of pet schemes of his own, but when the church was gathered together to rehearse all that God had done through his co-laborers and himself. He is in a bright, cheerful and hopeful frame of mind, and his encouraging reports of our work cannot fail to do good wherever he goes. It was a happy thought of Secretary Durham to engage his services for a general visitation of our approaching associational meetings, and I look with confidence for great good to come of it. Let our brethren give him a royal welcome as he comes among them. He is a worthy representative of our Lord's work and richly deserves it.

The Book, "The Baptist Position."

Dear Recorder:—I wish to call special attention to a most admirable book entitled "The Baptist Position." Its author is Rev. E. J. Forrester, pastor of the Baptist church at Greenwood, S. C., one of our most scholarly and accurate men. The exigencies of his work called forth a series of sermons, which were so favorably received that their publication was at once called for. This volume is the result. It is one of the clearest statements of Baptist views that I have ever met with, and the arrangement of topics unexcelled. It fills a distinct and valued place in the literature of the subject, and is specially valuable as a book of reference. Every Baptist minister would do well to get it, and indeed every one who desires a brief and clearly defined statement of our position.

The press work is excellent and was done by R. H. Woodward & Co., Baltimore.

and will make all the storms that assail her advance her power and glory in the world.

Finally, my dear Christian reader, in humble imitation of your Divine Master, let the church have your best love and service. Sing, with more devout spirit—

"I love thy kingdom, Lord,
The house of thine abode,
The church our blest Redeemer bought
With his own precious blood."

If you have, by unholy life, neglect of her ordinances and service, or indifference to the moral grandeur of her high mission in the world, in any way marred her beauty or retarded her growth and work, the Lord help you to repent! Oh, think what unspeakable grace, honor and privilege the Lord has bestowed upon you in bringing you into fellowship with his church, the spirits of the just made perfect, the angelic hosts, and the everlasting Father, Son and Holy Spirit! The Baptist Teacher.

Progress is evidently the motto of the American Baptist Publication Society, Philadelphia, with regard to their periodicals. The Baptist Teacher for 1893 is enlarged four pages, to make room for the new department of Inductive teaching, supplementary to all the other helps provided in this admirable periodical for teachers. A large number of articles as side-lights to the International lessons are given by some of the best writers in Baptist ranks; there will also be a short series on Sunday-school music by the Rev. W. H. Geisweit; a series upon Inductive teaching; a series upon Baptist doctrine in the current lessons; character-sketches; descriptive articles of places in the Holy Land; and general articles upon various phases of Sunday-school work. It is intended that The Baptist Teacher shall be made as complete as possible in all respects.

A Good Meeting.

"Hope Mills No. 1," (called "Rockfish Baptist church") in Cumberland county, N. C., has recently been the scene of one of the most gracious religious revivals, (so far as human judgment goes) that ever was witnessed in all that region of country. And the outcome of it all must result in permanent and lasting good to the entire village in the days to come. But "God giveth the increase," not man.

The present scribe was called by urgent telegram the day before the meeting commenced to preach the funeral of an "Odd Fellow" who had died that day very suddenly. We posted off at once by the next train for the scene of the calamity, which was at Hope Mills No. 2, and there learned that the sudden death was that of a suicide; a man who had been in a debauch the day before and to rid himself of the horrors of a guilty conscience, had deliberately taken his own life by blowing out his brains with a pistol ball, fired into his right temple; leaving a sorrowing wife, who is a good woman, and an aged father "having no hope," himself, for the better world above, to weep and mourn.

It was a solemn thing, a terrible event for the people to contemplate, as the vast crowd surged into the Methodist church to see the body of the self murderer, as it was borne there, (his wife being a member of that people) and to see the "Odd Fellows' procession as they bore him thither, and also, no doubt, curious to hear the funeral sermon of a suicide. We didn't preach him to heaven by any means, nor did we fail to warn the living of the dread consequences of a sinful life.

We never preach to please men on any occasion and we dared not attempt it now. "No murderer hath eternal life abiding in him." And a self murderer is no exception to this scripture. But God, the Judge of all the earth, doeth right. The awful death of this man, moved the whole community of sinners, doubtless; and the meeting at "No. 1," that very night in the Baptist church, under the powerful and searching discourse of Rev. F. H. Martin of Lumberton, started off with intense interest at the first; and many souls in the great audience asked the people of God to pray for them, that they might be saved.

The Spirit of the Lord seemed to come down upon the whole assembly, and Christians were melted to tears as they beheld the wonderful effects of "the gospel of peace." Day after day the word of God was proclaimed and urged with power and demonstration of the Spirit, and the people, notwithstanding the oppressively hot weather and the increasing crowd of eager hearers, both inside the church and without, the people listened quietly and most orderly to every sermon; and many seemed to give heed to "the things spoken" by the faithful servant of the Lord Jesus.

About thirty or forty souls professed faith in Christ during the nine days of the meeting and ten persons were baptized by the pastor at the close. Others may follow and unite with us at our next visit. We don't say (as the manner of some is) that thirty or forty persons were converted for we cannot see hearts. We can only say that they professed to be changed and to be turned to God, and on that profession, we received ten of them to the obedience in baptism—the "one baptism," required in the Scriptures of divine truth. May the Lord help those ten to be faithful unto the end.

We had for our organist, during the meeting, Miss Sallie Atkinson of Fayetteville—an excellent young sister, devoted to her calling and a consecrated Christian woman, whose constant aim, in every service, seemed to glorify God in sacred song and holy Martin, who is the loved pastor of Baptist church, has a way of presenting God's word, and it way indeed. His preaching searching, and when he subject, the hearer feels that he has listened to a man who knows what he is about, (so to speak), and that he is well assured of the truth of that which he declares to others. This is the kind of preaching we find in Paul, and which caused him, no doubt, to say, that "Seeing we have such hope, we use great plainness of speech." And that is the preaching the world needs to day.

It will not do in this notice of the great meeting at Hope Mills, last week, to overlook or to fail to mention the work, outside of the meeting, that was done daily, by the —(as the sisters called her)—"sweet little wife"—of the preacher. Bro. Martin has, in Sister Martin, one who is not only a helpmeet, as a most consecrated and devoted companion, but she is "heart and soul" earnestly and at all times ready to further the blessed work of her husband in soul saving, and seems to be as untiring and anxious in so doing as he. What a blessed thing it is for a young preacher's wife to do this. While he stands up before men for God and Christ, she is active among the girls and the women, telling them of the great salvation in private and from house to house. Sister Martin's presence in the congregation, at every service, seemed an inspiration to the preacher, as the burning words of the gospel fell from the lips of her able and eloquent husband.

The conclusion to which we arrived, after daily hearing Bro. F. H. Martin declare the "glorious gospel of the blessed God," is that the Lumberton Baptist church is to be congratulated in securing and holding such a pastor as he is; and may the Lord bless them all—both pastor and people.

Base-ball—Brother Daniel's Article.

Dear Recorder:—Bro. Daniel's article on base ball is before me, and I want to endorse his article, notwithstanding I have not "got inside, seen nor analyzed"; but as a servant of my Master, I have seen enough from the outside to satisfy me that the game of ball of to-day is no place for a minister of the gospel to attend, nor any Christian to aid and abet by his presence.

Nor should any be disposed to censure Bro. Daniel. First, hear the other side fully, then judge as for the Master. It was my lot to be on the train when boarded by the team and accompanying visitors to one of the games referred to by Bro. Daniel. I then saw and analyzed to my satisfaction that no preacher could go with them under the circumstances to a game of ball without destroying a portion of his usefulness: though I have been informed that one was aboard going to see the play, but I trust his experience has made him a wiser and better man for the Master. The destination was reached, which was mine, i. e., the town, not the game.

The game was started, but not finished, the players getting mad and refusing to play the game to the end. Betting ran high, money was publicly flaunted and men challenged to take bets on one side or the other would appear victorious. The inhabitants of each town took sides with their respective teams, leaving a feud that may take a quarter of a century to heal. Now every preacher in town was there, including the visitor aforesaid. Of all this I was informed after the game was over. Then drawing a paper from my pocket, I propounded these questions promiscuously as I met the returning crowd, and pursued them the next day until censured therefor:

1. Was that any place for a preacher? Unanimously answered, No.

2. Does the Bible allow the laymen to go where it forbids the ministry? Some answered, No. Others refused to answer.

3. Was that a place for any Christian to be? The worldlings, with two exceptions, answered, No—those two refusing to answer (as I thought) for cause; but the professors who attended the game could see no harm in it.

Now, Bro. Daniel, you see I have not been "inside" nor "analyzed" the game from the "inside," but information promiscuously obtained from those who have been "inside" lead us inevitably to endorse even the closing part of your article. Therefore, when the world condemns Christian attendance upon these games, and like dancing we are forced to go among the professors to find some one to defend the Christian in participating therein, is it not time that we as Baptists should leave these gambling games to the world and not aid and abet them with our presence?

Now I believe in the Christian participating in innocent amusements, and so Brother Daniel's article admits, but when the line is drawn, Christians should keep upon Christ's side thereof. J. W. POWELL.

The getting it down is bad enough, with the ordinary pills. But the having it down is worse. And, after all the disturbance, there's only a little temporary good.

From beginning to end, Dr. Pierce's Pellets are better. They're the smallest and easiest to take—tiny, sugar-coated granules that any child is ready for. Then they do their work so easily and so naturally that it lasts. They absolutely and permanently cure constipation, indigestion, bilious attacks, sick and bilious headaches, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. They're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

The MAKERS of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy say: "If we can't cure your Catarrh, no matter what your case is, we'll pay you $500 in cash." Now you can see what is said of other remedies, and decide which is most likely to cure you. Costs only 50 cents.

A Few Questions.

1. A large, influential church in a city has erected a beautiful mission chapel out in the suburbs, located in an unusually inviting field. What are the duties required of the members of the mother church in regard to the work of the Lord to be done in that field?

2. If they never attend any services held in the chapel and apparently take no interest in the work of the mission, have they done their duty as Christians and laborers in the vineyard of the Lord Jesus Christ?

3 Will not all who neglect so sacred a duty be held strictly accountable for disregarding the express commands of our Lord and Master?—"Go, teach," &c.; "Why stand ye here all the day idle?"; "Go ye also into the vineyard."

4 How can the mother church expect the work to go on and sinners be brought to a saving knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ, if her members take no part or interest in the work of the mission?

5. Is it probable that the mission will ever grow into an organized church without the encouragement and help of the mother church?

6. What are the duties of the Board of Deacons of the mother church in regard to the work of the Lord in their mission field?

7. Would not neglecting to carry on the work of the Lord in the mission field seriously retard the spiritual growth and work of the mother church?

8. Would not a church that neglects the work of her mission field be better off without a mission? ENQUIRER.

Prayer.

Prayer is the sincere desire of the heart. It is a duty as well as a privilege that none of us should neglect. Oh! how negligent we are of so great a duty. Many people never think about praying; they live from day to day, and wilfully neglect this solemn duty. They don't consider that all they have comes from God; they seem to think that all they have is their own, but they are mistaken. It is only lent to them until it pleases the Lord to withdraw it, or take it from them. Oh! how thankful we should be that we have a Heavenly Father to whom we can go when we are in trouble and distress. He has promised that whatsoever we ask in his name, doubting nothing, we shall receive. We should remember that he who gave us our life, can take it at any moment. Human life is uncertain. When the glorious sun sinks beneath the western horizon, we have no assurance of ever seeing it again. Then how careful we should be not to neglect praying before retiring at night. No wonder people are restless and cannot sleep, when their heads rest on prayerless pillows. Let us never dare to sleep without asking God's protecting care over us during the night. We should not only ask God to protect us while we sleep, but the first thing we should do in the morning, before beginning our daily work, should be to ask our Heavenly Father to guide and direct us through the day.

Now, let us not think that when we have said our morning prayers, we are under no obligations to pray any more till night. The Bible commands us to pray without ceasing, and in everything give thanks.

We have many examples of prayer in the Bible. Look at Daniel. What a great hero! How loyal he was to his religious duties! Notwithstanding his many persecutions, he prayed three times a day, in spite of the threats of an enraged people, and even the king! And what was the result? Why, when he was cast into the lion's den, the Lord delivered him from the mouths of the lions, and next morning he came out unhurt. We see that if we will only do what is right, our Heavenly Father will not forsake us. He has promised that if we put our trust in him, he will never leave nor forsake us. What a precious promise! How thankful we should be that people are not persecuted now like they were in the days of Daniel, but live in a gospel land, and can perform the duties that God has enjoined upon us without being persecuted.

Prayer should not be a mere formality, but we should pray in the proper spirit and not as that wicked Pharisee who prayed in order to be heard and praised of men. Let us retire to our closets and pray to God in secret. Look at our blessed Saviour in the garden of Gethsemane, sweating great drops of blood! Was he compelled to be there and endure this suffering? No. He had no need to agonize in prayer for himself, but it was to save poor sinners from the terrors of an awful hell. Hear him as he prays on the cross, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do." Oh, how many of us can say, without a particle of enmity in our hearts, "Father, forgive our enemies, for they know not what they do." In our prayers, we should remember our enemies as well as our friends.

"To God our hearts and hours be given,

The Next Session of the Seminary.

The session of 1893-'94 promises to be well attended, perhaps surpassing the attendance of the last year, which reached 264. It is a pleasure to note the increased interest in Biblical study on the part of North Carolina young ministers. We had eighteen last session from this State, most of them Wake Forest men, and many of them stood in the very forefront of our students. Those young men deserve all the interest that home folks and friends may feel in their future. Keep your eye on them and ask them to come back to some of your churches, when they finish their studies, but don't insist on cutting short their course of Bible study. Many an unintentional wrong has been done a young minister's future usefulness in the Master's cause by persuading him that he knew enough to get along without going to the Seminary. Most of these see this mistake now, and are the warmest supporters the Seminary has. It is better not to make such a mistake. No man ought to be content to get along simply. We all owe it to God and men to make our lives fulfil the highest measure of usefulness possible to us.

The manifold duties of the preacher of the gospel demand trained men to train the people. Wake Forest and the Seminary supplement each other in giving our North Carolina boys opportunities far greater than the fathers had. Let us humbly avail ourselves of these aids to heightened power. The Bible is the greatest book in the world and deserves the deepest study, the most reverent handling, the most complete mastery, especially by him who undertakes to teach it to the people.

There are many other young ministers in North Carolina, who have more or less recently completed their collegiate studies, some actively engaged in the pastorate, some even married, who ought gravely to consider the question of taking a course of study at Louisville this fall. Do you need it? Will it do you any good, enough good, to justify the expense and sacrifice? Can you do it? Settle this question not to please your accidental surroundings, but in a way that will best meet your highest duty in your great and exalted work. You will find a varied range of study that ought to give you new insight into the blessed Bible, and ought to kindle new inspiration in you, and give you improved methods of study to guide your future work. Numbers come to take a pastor's course who can only come eight months. You can be a useful man without such a course of study. You can be far more useful with it. May God help you to reach a wise conclusion as to your duty in this matter. The hand of God is on your head. May that hand ever bless and lead you. Some friends will think it queer that a man who can preach as well as you, should think of going to school any more. Well, let them think so. You will not be the first or the last one who has that experience. You do what will make the most effective preacher of you. That is your duty. If you wish further information, write to Dr. John A. Broadus, Louisville. If you need your board paid, write to Dr. W. H. Whitsitt, Louisville, Ky. If I can be of any service to any one, write me at Louisville, Ky., as I shall only be in North Carolina a week more.

I would earnestly urge all interested in the origin and growth of the Seminary, to read Dr. Broadus' Memoir of Dr. Boyce (A. C. Armstrong & Son, New York, or Baptist Book Concern, Louisville, Ky., price $1.75.) A most fascinating account is given of God's marvelous leadings in this work.

May God lay the solemn work of training our young ministers heavily upon the hearts of his people. Sometimes pray for those who study and those who teach them.

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that we can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

South Yadkin Union Meeting.

AN EXPLANATION.

Dear Recorder:—I see in RECORDER items of July 5th that the next session of South Yadkin Union will be held with New Hope church, Iredell county, July 28th. It also states that this is the first Union for over a year, and requests that every pastor in the Association be present.

I do not know where the RECORDER received this information; but it is news to many in this part of the Association.

Now, if the brother who furnished the RECORDER with the information will allow me, and the RECORDER bear with me, I will explain.

At the Union Meeting in Salisbury, January, 1892, it was agreed not to prepare a program for the next Union, as the Sunday-school Association would take its place. So at the S. S. Association held in Mocksville the 5th Sunday in April, 1892, there was a program prepared for the next S. S. Association to be held at New Bethany 5th Sunday in April, 1893; but none was prepared nor a place accepted for the next Union Meeting. The result was that we had no more Unions until the fifth Sunday in January, 1893. A month or more before that time Bro. B. B. Cornelison and I went to Maj. W. B. Clements, where we met Bro. C. S. Cashwell, S. J. Tatum and another Bro. Tatum. We agreed to try to bring our Unions into exercise again. These brethren instructed me to prepare a program and send to RECORDER for publication, which I did. Also they asked me to write to pastors and a number of brethren, informing them of what we had done. I did this; but as there are so many brethren, I did not write to all. I asked those to whom I wrote to scatter the word.

But we had a good meeting at Eaton's, Jan. 5th Sunday, 1893. At that meeting there were two invitations for the next Union. We accepted the invitation from Fork church. Also, prepared a program and adopted it for the next Union to be held at Fork church to begin on Friday before the 5th Sunday in July, 1893. The other church that invited the Union was Yadkin Valley. There was no invitation from New Hope.

Some of us think probably at the S. S. Association held with New Bethany church, that the brethren, not knowing what was done at Eaton's, decided to hold the next Union at New Hope. This S. S. Association should have only looked out for the next S. S. Association.

However, brethren of Iredell and Rowan, after this lengthy explanation, please allow me, in behalf of the Lord's work, to beseech you to give up the New Hope Union, and let us all meet at Fork church in unison on Saturday before the 5th Lord's day in July. Friday was the day to begin, but the Orphanage picnic will be held in Mocksville on Friday, and we cannot neglect the Orphanage. Yours in behalf of more and better Union Meetings, J. B. NEWTON.

Mexico.

PROGRESS.

"But the spirit of progress," says the Rev. Hugh McCormick, our missionary in Zacatecas, "is abroad in the land. Within a few years the railroad, telegraph and telephone have been thrust upon them. But material prosperity will not save the souls of the Mexicans. The word of the Lord must set them free. Let us prepare this upper room for his coming. These railways are the Roman roads built for the hurrying feet of the messengers of peace."

NEEDS OF MEXICO.

Says Rev. W. D. Powell of Toluca, Mex.: "We need—1. The prayers of God's people for the Spirit's presence and blessing upon all our missionaries. 2. Reinforcements—that we may occupy many inviting fields now open to us. 3. Now and then a chapel at some strategic point. 4. The warm sympathy of those who have sent us to the front. Romanism in Mexico, though shorn of many of her locks by the Liberal party, stands before us as a mighty Goliath, and only through Israel's God shall we ever be enabled to prevail over her.

Does not the reader now believe that Mexico is an idolatrous nation, and, without the gospel, is hopelessly lost? Will you not work, pray and give for Mexico? How many churches, woman's societies and associations will agree to support, each, a missionary?

WHAT YOU CAN DO.

If you cannot go, if you cannot give, you can pray; and remember this must make all other agencies effective; pray, then, for Mexico. It is recommended as a special topic for prayer and contributions. But to pray effectively, you must pray intelligently; you must know about Mexico to pray for Mexican mission work; who our missionaries are, where they are, what they are doing and enduring; what fields are most needy, and what needs are most urgent.

OUR OPPORTUNITY.

"We should celebrate our Centennial by sending the twenty men for the twenty States unoccupied. Thus the close of our century of missions will mark the beginning of a better era for Mexico. Shall we not work and watch and pray for the hastening of the coming of the Lord? The ends of the earth are preparing to receive him. Saints from Mexico will rise to greet him. There are signs of his coming. Let us work while it is day. He that is faithful unto death shall receive a crown of life. Even so. Come, Lord Jesus; come quickly."

A Question.

What are you going to do with your knowledge of God? You must some day render an account of your talents, time and money. But a far greater responsibility is your knowledge of God. Will you wrap it in the napkin of indifference and poke it in the hole of selfishness, or will you use it for the salvation of the lost? You must face God and render an account. What will you do with your knowledge of God?

EPILEPSY OR FITS

Can this disease be cured? Most physicians say No—I say, Yes; all forms and the worst cases. After 30 years study and experiment I have found the remedy.—Epilepsy is cured by it; cured, not subdued by opiates—the old, treacherous, quack treatment. Do not despair. A Strong Endorsement.

The St. Louis Trade Review and Export Journal in its issue of February 7th, 1893, has this to say:

EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.

One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B. Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Carolina, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1858. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches, and carry in stock a fine line of stationery, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, posters, circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

Ministers' Relief Board.

We are in pressing need of funds to help our aged and needy ministers. Has your church, brother, given anything this year for our work? It has been suggested that some of our pastors are rather slow about mentioning our work to their churches, as they feel rather a delicacy in asking aid for those, among whom they may possibly be placed in their old age. If your pastor, then, is hindered by any such reason as this, will not some active member in each church see to it that aid is sent at once. For some reason, our worthy pastors are slow in responding to our calls for help. We believe that many of them intend to do so; but our dear old brethren cannot be fed on good intentions. The nature of our work is such, that we need contributions all along through the year. Many of our churches postpone their contributions for such important work as State, Home, and Foreign Missions until the end of the year; but if we do the work expected of us, we must meet the wants of our aged brethren month by month as the years pass by.

So, dear brethren and sisters, let us hear from you at once; and have us in mind more than once as the year passes. We thank the churches and pastors that have given, but we are saddened when we think of the many that have not. Our Associations will soon be meeting. We have written to brethren in about all of the Associations in the State to represent our Board at their annual gatherings. Some have done so; some have not. If you read these lines, brother, and no one else speaks for us at your next Association, will you not do so? By the way, how many of our Associations have placed our Board among the objects to which they contribute? Do you have a report at your Association or the M. R. Boar if? If not, will you not see to it that a committee is appointed near the opening of the next session of that body to bring in a report on this work before the close of the session? This brethren is no longer an individual or Board matter. It is part of the regular work of the Convention, and you and I have no more right to slight or ignore it than that of State or Foreign Missions.

It is well to give to these great objects, and others like them; but it is not well to ignore another object that has as strong claim upon us as any other. Ah, brethren, let us rid ourselves of the reproach of neglecting the aged and needy men at our very doors, who have worn themselves out in doing the Master's work! Will you not hear these men as they stand with dim eyes, sunken cheeks stretching forth their hands toward you and calling for help? In the persons of these men, brethren, the Master comes to your doors. How can you turn him away empty? Remember the words, "I was hungry and ye gave me meat."

My home engagements will be such that I cannot visit many Associations this fall. Again, I ask will not some brother, preacher or laymen, represent us at the next meeting of your Association; and will you not bring our pressing need before your church next Sunday? How long, O how long shall we wait to hear from the churches!

C. A. WOODSON, Cor. Sec Board.

East Tennessee S. S. Convention.

The third annual session of the East Tennessee Baptist Sunday-school Convention, comprising twenty-three Associations, with a church membership of 50,000, met on Monday night, July 17, 1893, with the Baptist church of Johnson City, Tenn. Col. T. H. Reaves of Johnson City is President of the Convention.

East, Middle, and West Tennessee each has a S. S. Convention.

The welcome address was delivered by the pastor of this church, Rev. J. H. Snow, which was responded to, in behalf of the Convention, by Rev. T. R. Wagoner of Athens.

Each of the twenty-three Associations are represented by a Vice-President, whose business it is to push forward Sunday schools in his territory and report his work to this body.

One of the Vice Presidents reported that there had been a Sunday school Convention in his Association for eleven years.

It is gratifying to hear of so many schools springing up, and they in turn establising mission schools in all directions. There was a time when Baptists opposed Sunday-schools, but the spirit of these East Tennessee Baptists now is for Sunday schools. The Knoxville delegates added greatly to the enthusiasm of the Convention.

The object of this Convention is to work in destitute places, to develop workers and methods, scatter literature, and cultivate a missionary spirit in the churches.

I mention the following subject, which called forth much discussion: Should any but Baptists teach in our Sunday-schools? It was decided in the affirmative.

So many fine speeches full of the spirit of missions will tell on the work in the next year.

About fifty little boys and girls furnished the music for the Convention. They seemed to know that the Convention was for them.

Col. R. H. Dungan of Jonesboro opened the discussion on "How can we secure and retain efficient teachers"? Sunday-school work cannot fail to move forward when the workers meet together for plans and enthusiasm and conviction for their work.

"The teacher's work" was well presented by T. T. Gwine of Knoxville. He is a layman whose heart is all aglow with love for Jesus. His essay was requested for publi[cation] in Baptist and Reflector.

"The present condition and needs of the Sunday-school work in the State" was well [pre]sented by Rev. O. L. Hailey, State Sec[retary] followed by Rev. J. C. Rockwell of [and] others.

[Dr.] Bell, now of Nashville, spoke on [the] Sunday schools." His con[nection] Foreign Mission Board re[vived] [the] of missionary spirit in the churches. His work now shall be at the source for the children. The Sunday schools of the land can do so much good. The children must be reached because they are children. They can be easier impressed. They are more generous. They are in the formative period. Habits of liberality and generosity can then be so easily formed. This generation is not sufficiently missionary. If the next is, we must teach missions in the Sunday schools. The Nashville literature from now on will be full of missions, and taught alongside of repentance, faith, and salvation.

"For what purposes should the regular Sunday-school collections be used"? W. R. Cooper of Knoxville and Rev. J. H. Richardson of Sweetwater spoke to this subject as well as others.

There are few churches and schools that have the primary teacher that the Johnson City school has in its primary teacher, Mrs. J. H. Snow. She brought forth her model class of fifty boys and girls and delighted the Convention with the way she interested her pupils.

"The pastor and the Sunday school." Supt. J. A. Cargille of Johnson City school opened this discussion. The pastor should be the pastor of the school as well as of the church. Prof. J. T. Henderson, President of Carson and Newman College, made an intensely spiritual and practical address on the above subject. There are few Hendersons. This Convention has a Pace of leadership and devotion in one of the Knoxville pastors as well as North Carolina had.

These brethren have been in session for three days, considering alone the Sunday-school work. Nearly one hundred delegates are in attendance. The Convention has been attended by spiritual power.

By request, the Convention next year will meet with the First church in Knoxville.

A Word from the Pee Dee Association.

The Anson and Richmond Associations united in March, under the name of "Pee Dee," and held the first session in Rockingham in April. The delegation from each county was fairly good, and all pronounced the first meeting a great success. The body is so much larger than the old ones, that new life has been infused.

The next Union will convene at Wadesboro on Friday before the fifth Sunday in this month. An attractive program has been prepared, and a good time is expected.

The Wadesboro saints are again left pastorless. Bro. Wildman had just laid the foundation for a grand work, when he was tempted back to Virginia. The church, however, is in no wise discouraged, but is casting around for a pastor.

Bro. Kesler and his Laurinburg people are feeling the effects of the removal of the railroad shops from that place. Some of the most active members of the Laurinburg Baptist church are employees in the shops; and if they leave when the shops are removed, the church will lose considerable of its strength. We hope, however, that most, if not all, of these good brethren can find other employment in the town. Bro. Kesler is a wise and safe leader, and if there is a way out of the difficulty, he will find it.

Bro. T. S. Wright of Peachland has resigned his churches. Wright is a fine worker, and always leaves his impress wherever he goes. We hope he can be induced to remain in the Association.

It has been my pleasure to "trouble the waters" lately. A few weeks ago I baptized four at Rockingham. The Wadesboro brethren sent for me to go up last Sunday night and administer the ordinance. Five were baptized. So you see the good work goes on, pastor or no pastor.

Several await baptism at Lilesville.

Have just perused Bro. Durham's most excellent tract, "Our Board and Its Work." It contains a vast amount of valuable information, and shows the wonderful work that the Board has done and is doing. If, instead of so much petty criticism, which, so far as I can see, will only result in arousing suspicion, the brethren would all rally around the Board with their co operation, sympathy and prayers, a vast deal more could be accomplished, and there would be less to criticise. L. JOHNSON.

From Oxford, Mississippi.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I am in the third week of a meeting with my church which has been blessed of God to the good of the church, and in the salvation of sinners. I carried it on for nearly a week when Major Penn joined me. He has done a great work. He preaches the gospel and has no objectionable methods in conducting his meetings.

This is my fourth year as pastor here, and the prospect for the future seems brighter than it has ever been during this time.

I am rejoicing with the brethren in North Carolina over the glorious future of Wake Forest. What a forward move they have made in adding the Law Department!

In Mississippi we are in distress about our College. It is blighting all our work.

The RECORDER is a great favorite with me, and is read closely every week.

Columbian Fair Chimes.

The Chimes in the tower of Machinery Hall, at the World's Fair, are attracting wide attention, and the visitors to the Fair appreciate them highly. They are cast and exhibited by the Vanduzen & Tift Co., proprietors of the old Buckeye Bell Foundry, Cincinnati, Ohio, who made the first Chime of ten bells ever made in this country, and which are yet doing most excellent and satisfactory service. The Buckeye bells are superior in every respect, and our people will never regret purchasing them.

Acknowledgments.

[The Treasurer requests that when money is sent, that the name of the contributing church, society, or individual, and the object for which the money is intended, be clearly stated. A heavy storm swept over Chicago and the lake Sunday the 9th inst. Many small boats on the lake were capsized and thirty persons are believed to have been drowned.

On the 4th inst. at Newberyport, Mass., a statute to Wm. Loyd Garrison, was unveiled. On the same date at Bridgeport, Conn., a statute to Phineas T. Barnum, the great showman was also unveiled.

On July 18th the towns of Voghera and Casteggio, Italy, were wrecked by a tornado. Not a structure at either place was left intact. Hundreds of persons were injured. The number of dead is not yet known as the bodies are buried in the ruins.

An exchange cites as an example of the instability of some large American fortunes that President Waterbury of the Cordage Trust, was a three times millionaire at breakfast a few weeks ago, but at supper that same day he was a pauper.

A new corporation was chartered last winter to cut a ship canal through the neck of Cape Cod. The organization has been effected with a capitalization of $7,500,000. The survey will begin at once, and ground will probably be broken in the autumn.

Clemson Agricultural and Mechanical College, Columbia, S. C., was recently opened, with three hundred students. The institution was founded by Thos. G. Clemson of Massachusetts who married a daughter of John C. Calhoun. He died in 1888 bequeathing $80,000 and eighty acres of land for this purpose. The buildings costs $250,000.

Anthony J. Drexel, the Philadelphia banker and philanthropist, died at Carlsbad, Germany, on the 30th ult. He and Mr. Geo. W. Childs gave each $5,000 to the International Typographical Union, which sum formed the nucleus of the fund by which the beautiful printers' asylum at Colorado Springs, Col., known as the "Childs Drexel Home" was erected. In this Home, the disabled, sick and superannuated members of the International Typographical Union can be sent for treatment and care until they recover, without expense.

NORWOOD—KNOTT—On July 15th 1893, in Vance county, N. C., by Rev. J. A. Stradley, Mr. Herbert Norwood and Miss Sarah M. Knott.

DIED.

HENRY—At her home, near Lilesville, on June 18th, Miss Vivian Henry passed peacefully away. She was just entering young womanhood, and was dearly beloved by all who knew her. For months she was a great sufferer, but bore it all with Christian fortitude, and died in the triumph of faith.

PASTOR.

ELLIS—Mr. A. D. Ellis was born March 4th, 1815, and died June 6th, 1893. He was seventy-eight years old. At the age of twenty-five he and his wife, who died just one year ago, were baptized into the fellowship of the Baptist church at Rolesville. At the time of their deaths they were members of the Louisburg Baptist church.

Early in the spring he went on a visit to his daughter, Mrs. Dr. Winston, at Winter Haven, Fla., where on June 6th he died. His body was brought to Louisburg for interment.

He has always been a man of great piety, and has been considered by those who have known him best as one of the best and most godly of men. The most fitting thing to be said is found in Psalms 37: 37: "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace." Nothing better can be said of any man: no man is more worthy of the saying. W. B. MORTON.

WILLEY—Mrs. Mollie Bynum Willey was reared in Hertford county, N. C., and died in Gatesville, N. C. She had been a widow about two years, her husband, Hillory Willey, having died in 1891. For several months she had been a great sufferer from consumption. She was fifty-four years old, and had been a member of Buckhorn Baptist church for twenty-one years, and died in its fellowship, though she had lived in Gatesville much of the time since the death of her husband. She leaves two sons, a large number of relatives and friends who loved and honored her while living, and think lovingly of her now that God has taken her to himself.

Our sister possessed much of that meekness and quietness of spirit which God prizes so highly. In her suffering and illness she was patient and resigned, and while suffering she often declared her unfaltering trust in her Saviour. When a large number of her relatives and friends had assembled at her old home in Hertford county and buried her by the side of her husband, those who knew her felt that her spirit had gone to be with the spirits of just men made perfect and with Christ.

JONES—Mr. Thomas Jones, a young man of unusual promise, is dead. During his residence with his parents in Moore county he had made many friends, who now desire to testify to his character, and express their sympathy to the stricken family.

Mr. Jones had moved to Alabama a short time before his death. Before going he expressed his earnest purpose of becoming a minister of the gospel in a few years, and we know that he died in the Lord. May we all be as ready as he when the call comes.

A. G. S.

EATON—B. F. Eaton of Cleveland, N. C., died July 6th, 1893. Bro. Eaton was born in Davie county, N. C., April 1st, 1816. He was born the new birth early in life and united with Eaton's church. He remained a member of this church for a number of years. Then he moved to Caldwell county where he lived a few years, after which he moved to Cleveland, Rowan county, where he lived until death. Bro. Eaton has been an earnest Christian all his life since conversion. He was far-seeing and wise in business, gathering quite an estate about him. He was always ready to do his part in bearing the expenses of his church and very punctual in paying what he promised. He gave liberally to the endowment of Wake Forest College and to all the objects of the Convention. He took a great interest in the preachers, and his house was the preachers home. He was kind and sympathetic toward all, and by his sympathy and confidence in all who came to him for help he lost largely of his means. In all his business he was punctual and strictly honest. He was married twice. His first wife departed this life Feb. 6th, 1883. His second wife still survives. There were born to him by his first wife six children, two of whom are gone on before him to the better land. In the death of Bro. Eaton the little church at Cleveland has suffered a very great loss. But we bow submissively to the Heavenly Father's will.

D. P. BRIDGES, Pastor.

SETZER—At his residence, on the Catawba river, near Bethel Baptist church, Iredell county, N. C., Tuesday, July 11th, 1893, Bro. John Setzer, in his seventy-first year.

Bro. Setzer accepted Christ at "Old Olivet" Baptist church, Catawba county, under the ministry of Elder L. M. Berry (now in Missouri) and was baptized by him in October, 1858.

On August 27th, 1860, Bethel church (Iredell county) was organized, with Bro. Setzer one of the constituency, from which time he has proven true to Christ and to his cause, through evil and through good report. He was the last of the older men and sturdy leaders of the Lord's work at Bethel church. Christy Clark, David Setzer, J. J. Hicks and John Setzer will continue to be remembered, kindly and tenderly, not only by their contemporaries, but also by their posterity, for generations, for their kind but firm manliness and piety.

Bro. Setzer has been a useful man in the South Yadkin Association, in his county, and in the church of which he was a member, and we are all mourning our loss of a personal friend, as well as a safe counsellor in the Lord's work, ever at his place and his duty, which he esteemed a privilege.

During the several months of his sickness I have had frequent interviews with him relative to his spiritual experience. Going to comfort I have been comforted, has been my experience. Simply, but assuredly, resting on Christ as his only hope and his all-sufficient comfort and peace, saying, "I have lived here long enough; it is right that now the Lord should take me; I have done my work. I am ready any time he sees it best to take me. He will take care of those I leave behind."

W. J. H.

Mooresville, July 19, 1893.

Tributes of Respect.

WHEREAS, Our Heavenly Father, in the mystery of his divine providence, has taken from our midst our well-beloved sister, Mrs. Susan King; therefore

Resolved, That we bow with reverence to this sorrowful bereavement, and ask for grace to sustain us.

That we cannot forget the cheerfulness and alacrity with which our sister always responded to every call of duty—how heartily she entered into every work for the church and for the glory of God—how she seconded the pastor in his efforts to build up the cause of Christ.

That we commend her example in the character of a Christian, a church member, a devoted parent and liberal supporter of every good work.

That we tender to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in this hour of deep distress.

"Not Shut In."

"Shut in, did you say, my sister?
Oh, no! Only led away
Out of the dust and turmoil,
The burden and heat of the day,
Into the cool, green pastures,
By the waters calm and still,
Where I may lie down in quiet,
And yield to my Father's will.

Earth's ministering ones come round me,
With faces kind and sweet,
And we sit and learn together
At the loving Saviour's feet;
And we talk of life's holy duties,
Of the crosses that lie in the way,
And they must go and do them,
While I lie still and pray.

I am not shut in, my sisters,
For the four walls fade away,
And my soul goes out in gladness
To bask in the glorious day.
This wasting, suffering body,
With its weight of weary pain,
Can never dim my vision,
Nor ever my spirit restrain.

I wait the rapturous ending,
Or, rather, the entering in
Through the gates that stand wide open,
But admit no pain or sin.
I am only waiting, sisters,
Till the Father calls, 'Come home!'
Waiting with my lamp all burning
Till the blessed Bridegroom come."

—Invalid, in The Housekeeper.

Little Things.

Young people in beginning life are apt to be impatient of the first little steps that apparently make no advance, forgetting that seeming "trifles make up the sum of life," just as in building, the little bricks, laid carefully, one at a time, side by side, and securely cemented together, make at last the great, strong structure.

A young man, having exhausted his patrimony in obtaining a professional education, settled himself in a town already filled with successful lawyers, to practice law. One day one of these older lawyers asked him how, under such circumstances, he expected to make a living.

"I hope I may get a little practice," was the modest reply.

"It will be very little," said the lawyer.

"Then I will do that little well," answered the young man decidedly.

He carried out his determination. The little things well done brought larger ones, and in time he became one of the most distinguished jurists of his State.

Again, a certain old Bishop, who was fond of finding odd characters in out-of-the-way places, was visiting in a quiet neighborhood. One day, in a walk with a friend, he came across a crossroad settlement of a few houses. Among them was a snug little shoe-shop, kept by an old negro man, which showed signs of prosperity.

Interested in the old cobbler, the Bishop stopped for a chat.

"My friend," he said, "I would not think so small a business as mending shoes would pay so well."

"Ah," said the gentleman with him, "old Cato has the monopoly of shoe-mending in this region. No one else gets a job."

"How is that, Cato?" asked the Bishop.

"Just so, marster," replied Cato. "It is only little patches put on with little stitches or tiny pegs But when I takes a stitch, it is a stitch, and when I drive a peg it holds." Little things well done!

The good Bishop used that reply as a text for many a sermon afterwards.

A bright young girl, living in a mountain region, by accidental contact with some visitors at a near watering place became conscious of her lack of education and consequent mental inferiority to them.

She was intensely anxious to obtain this education, and at once set about gaining the money to secure it. There was absolutely only one way within her reach. Near her home was a stream filled with mountain trout, which she knew to be greatly in demand by the proprietor of the watering place hotel. She made an arrangement with him to supply fish for his table.

Every day found her with her rod fishing diligently, and every morning found her at the same early hour at the hotel with her fish. A benevolent old gentleman chanced to see her one morning, and was greatly interested when told her story and the object she had in view in selling the fish. Particularly when the hotel proprietor added:

"You will scarcely believe it, but this young girl is actually the only one—though I have tried many—who has kept scrupulously to her bargain. She never fails me, be the number of fish large or small."

Thinking that such diligence in small matters deserved large reward, the old gentleman obtained the consent of the girl's parents, and out of the abundance of his means placed her at a school to be fitted for a teacher.

With painstaking care she mastered each difficulty in her new life, and became an educated, cultured woman and a skilled teacher.—M. E. Saffold, in Christian Union.

Over-Eating.

It is perhaps true that most Americans eat too much. The person who eats much, yet is hungry and grows thin, is not suffering from lack of food, but from lack of power to digest the food taken into the stomach, or from abnormally rapid tissue waste, and should consult his physician. He puts into his stomach more food than is digested by it, but in many cases a large part of the material really digested does not do its full share of vitalizing work.

We live by the oxidation of food. Food, whatever its chemical nature—if it is food in the true sense—is capable of being changed into a more oxidized material. This chemical change must go on in a more or less active way, or death ensues, since the oxidizing of food is necessary for the life of the individual cells, whose aggregation constitutes the whole of our complicated structures.

Now, if more material is supplied to the system than it can use, or, in other words, more than it can combine with oxygen, much of the supply must pass out of the body in a state not fully exhausted of its vitalizing power; and it is highly probable that these unoxidized products are the causes, direct or indirect, of many troubles of a somewhat obscure nature, to which we have applied the names of rheumatism, gout, lithæmia and the like.

Such partially oxidized materials circulate in the blood and are carried to all parts of the body, and are known to be more or less irritating to the delicate structures, organs and tissues.

In the case of the habitual over eater, the presence in the blood of such materials, which are constantly acting as irritants to the organs, may easily produce changes in the tissues so irritated. As time goes on, these changes become greater, and finally result in permanent conditions of disease, or in an appreciably hastened death.

Exercise, by promoting oxidation, lessens the dangers of over-eating. The habit of rapid eating especially when habitual over-eating is indulged in, results in an inability to digest the amount of food necessary to keep in active condition the various functions of the body.—Youth's Companion.

A Gentleman Defined.

London Tit-Bits recently offered a prize for "the best definition of a gentleman." The winning definition is as follows:

A knight, whose armor is honor, whose weapon is courtesy.

The following are some of the definitions sent in:

A gentleman is one who combines a woman's tenderness with a man's courage.

The mirror of mannerly manhood.

A man whose money mars not his manners.

Is one who wherever he may be, remembers what he is.

The quintessence of true manliness.

The embodiment of male perfections.

A happy result of the combined efforts of nature, preceptors, and—the tailor.

One whose merits are patent as well as his shoes.

Manly, honest, generous, pure, a gentleman—rich or poor.

A man both cultured and refined, who always has in his mind, and acts upon it always, too, to do as he'd have others do.

A human magnet.

A man who gracefully recognizes the rights of others

Nature's finishing touch.

The crown of man's accomplishments.

A planet in humanity's constellation.

A gentleman is a person who perfectly combines self-forgetfulness with self-respect.

A compound of various good qualities that embellish mankind.

A human brilliant very frequently unpolished

One who acts with equal courtesy and consideration to all men, be they prince or peasant

Man's truest model—with "honor" for its base.

A gentleman is one who realizes that there are others besides himself.

The male unobtrusive tit-bit of humanity, who makes life a success without blustering or vanity.

Honor personified.

One who knows what honor is and acts up to it.

A man who treats others with considerable kindness and respect because he can't help it.

A man who has a great capacity for doing right.

A man who does unto others as he would they should do unto him.

He whose first consideration is for the feelings of others.

One who is well-behaved to the meanest of his fellows, kind and genial to his equals, deferential, but not servile, to his superiors.

One who is chivalrously tender to women, honorable among men, and guided at all times by an innate delicacy of feeling.

The Seventeen Year Locust.

The lives of most species of insects are very short, lasting from a few days to a few months. There is one genus, however, which lives for seventeen years. This is the periodical Cicada or seventeen-year locust, Cicada Septendecim. This insect lives in the ground for all but about two weeks of its long life. It issues from the ground only to pair and lay its eggs. A brood of these Cicadas is expected this summer in Moore and Bladen counties and along the R. & G. Railroad from Raleigh to Weldon.

On account of the long interval between broods, few people are familiar with the appearance of this insect and a great deal of alarm is usually created when they do appear. The earliest account we have of the Cicadas was written in 1639. "They are," says the narrator, "about the bigness of bumble bees. They come out of holes in the ground and did eat up every green thing and made such a yelling noise as made the woods ring and ready to deafen people."

It is only just to say that the "yelling" is done exclusively by the males who are no doubt celebrating their release from the cold ground into the bright sunshine.

When these insects appear, they usually do so in swarms and settle by preference upon oak trees and next upon apple trees; but when they are very numerous they settle upon fences and all sorts of trees and stumps. Here they cast their larval skin and come forth as winged insects.

In the winged state they live but ten days or so. They do more or less damage by the female puncturing young twigs to place her eggs. The eggs hatch in about six weeks and the young maggot at once drops to the ground into which it burrows and feeds upon the juice of the roots it finds there.

The winged male insects do not feed; the female does if she live above a week. These insects are not dangerous to handle as they do not bite or sting.

Usually it will not pay to attempt to destroy the winged insect, but where it attacks fruit trees or nursery stock, it may be jarred upon sheets moistened with kerosene as recommended for the plum curculio.

The Station desires information as to localities in which the Cicada may appear this year and solicits specimens and notes as to time of appearance, trees most infested, damage done and time of disappearance. Address communications to the Experiment Station, Raleigh, N. C.—Gerald McCarthy, N. C., Experiment Station.

WHAT conduct belongs to a good citizen in our present trying conditions, is a question which the times have called forth, and which, if settled aright, cannot but lead to blessed results. Therefore it is worthy our serious contemplation. Through all things we should live in brotherly love, placing the great commandment, "Love thy neighbor as thyself," above all other considerations. But this is regarded by so many as a mere general rule that cannot be specifically applied that it is effectual only in a limited degree. Although it brought Christ to the cross, there are but few of those who bear his name that observe it to-day. The people have trusted and been betrayed until there is but little of fraternity among us. But this is no reason why we should wish to destroy our institutions; it is no reason why new demagogues should replace the old; it is no reason why those few faithful men who are serving us should be replaced by untried, and, perhaps, untrue servants. Let the good be separated from the evil; but remember that we all are brothers. Because one man has betrayed his trust, is no reason why we should stamp him out of existence and conclude that all mankind are deceitful. Let our consciences decide for us—the freedom of speech and of the press has been abused until we can consult only ourselves. Yield not to the prejudices or the ambitions of a political aspirant, but rather listen to the man who is disinterested, whom your conscience and his actions tell you that he has your interest at heart. We should remember that our cause is the country's cause; that good government depends on the peacefulness and contentment of its citizens, and that these ends can never be attained by hasty and revolutionary action. What we do let us do deliberately and prayerfully, without prejudice, without malice, but with the good of the country and the country's Creator as our aim. To sum up our remarks: Hold fast and assert with firmness those truths and principles on which the welfare of our country seems to depend; but do so with a love of peace, without ill will and prejudice. Discourage all sorts of frenzied animosities, for in them lies the faithless demagogue's power; deprecate that rancor, malignity and unfeeling abuse which is so common in public discussions; all in the love of Christ, and we have our nation safe.

WE dislike to join in the general and indiscriminate fault finding with the secular press. Carping and cavilling should have no part in the making of a religious paper, and we do not wish to appear as assuming a general censorship. But in these times of such bitter strife, partisanship and unprovoked hatred among our secular brethren, we feel that a few words to them and their readers may not be out of place. To day our country is in the midst of a great vital crisis; we are on the verge of a great change. The people are divided in their opinions and desires. What one section cries for, another repels. And the editors are divided as well. But this is not all; they are not content to discuss issues;—they seldom do that now—but give their columns up to reproachful and exasperating epithets heaped upon their fellow editors who may hold a different opinion. Principles never enter into the question; personalities are the only consideration. And therein is the fault. Discussion and opposition lead to investigation, education and intelligence; but this way of heaping abuse upon your adversary will never educate the people, and will never win a political victory. We do not wish it to be understood that we disapprove of a lively and intelligent political discussion, for tameness is not worthy of this age; we do not mean that indignation is not to be poured forth on wicked men and wicked deeds, but we do mean that it should be found out whether indignation is deserved before we express it; and the object of expressing it should ever be, not to infuse ill will, rancor and fury into the minds of men, but to excite an enlightened and conscientious opposition to injurious measures. By this means, and only this, can the great aim of the press, the education of the people, be accomplished.

THE movement known as "University Extension" is one that American education is likely to owe much in the next few years. Although it has been in active and successful operation in some of the northern States for more than three years, the people of North Carolina scarcely know its meaning. In its simplest application it is this: An educational institution appoints a lecturer who prepares a course of several "lectures upon some topic which he has studied so deeply and extensively that he has obtained a complete grasp of it in all its bearings." He then delivers these lectures before his audiences, gives them questions to answer, essays to write, etc. As it can be easily arranged so that he may deliver one lecture in a certain place and move on to another, and another, delivering the same lecture, and return to the first place in a week to deliver the second, and go on thus through the entire course, it may be easily seen that the change of locality and the length of time between lectures makes the work pleasant to both lecturer and audience, and gives the latter plenty of time to reflect on the former lecture before hearing the second. This great movement is a boon to the man who is settled in business life and the student who is unable to obtain an education at an institution, and the work can be made of far more pleasure and profit to the lecturer than ordinary day-school work. And now that the supply of school teachers is so much greater than the demand, it is to be hoped that many of our college graduates will turn their attention to this mode of instructing the masses. The work of the educator one of the noblest known to man, and surely no one can attribute either drudgery or degradation to the work of the extension lecturer—far from it, it is next to the occupation of the minister of the gospel.

Talks About Law—No. 15.

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

BANKS.

We have seen that if a party of men open a banking establishment and take out no charter, they are simply a copartnership. As such they are governed by the law of partnership. So far as the public are concerned, all dealings with a copartnership are not different to such dealings with an individual, as a general thing. But just so soon as a charter is obtained and a corporation is organized, subtle rules and laws, and quite unknown to the public, govern and control that institution.

For example: John Smith, an individual, and the same John Smith, constituting a corporation, are quite different persons. John Smith, an individual, will, no doubt, buy with care and will contract debts with care; but the "John Smith Company," a corporation in which John has no individual liability, that will undertake almost anything; no venture is too hazardous for it, in many instances. Let us see how the corporation is organized:

First, the Legislature grants a charter. Then the promoters of the bank meet and formally accept the charter. After certain preliminaries are gone through with, a committee is appointed to open stock books. Say that the capital stock is put at $100,000. Shares of stock are, say, one hundred dollars each. Each person who subscribes for a share of stock is thenceforth a stockholder in the bank. As such, he can vote at all meetings of stockholders and has other privileges and duties. At a meeting of the stockholders, voting is always by a "stock vote." Sometimes one man will himself and as proxy cast a majority vote over twenty other men who are present as stockholders.

Having subscribed for stock, the person is required to pay the par value of the same into the company. If he fails to do so, any creditor may make him pay the full amount of stock subscribed. In a word, the stock of the company is assets, just as any other property which the corporation may own.

Finally, the whole amount of stock is taken. Now, evidently all the stockholders cannot be present each day in the bank to supervise the business. Each day loans are to be made, money collected, paper discounted, checks on other banks cashed, securities carefully inspected and passed upon, and the whole policy of the institution shaped. Some one must do these things.

So the stockholders have a meeting and elect all officers for the bank. Among others, they elect "directors." There are of these, say, seven. And a "discount committee" is also appointed. The duties of these officers are indicated by the names they bear. The directors are trustees. They act as agents of the stockholders. Under their care and keeping the bank is placed.

Now, the bank is fully organized for business. The "capital stock" of $100,000 is paid into the bank. This is a part of the working capital of the bank. But they have other capital with which to operate. This consists of "deposits."

Any person having money which he does not think safe or advisable to keep at home, carries the same to the bank and deposits it there. If the money remain only a short time, no interest is paid. If it remain several months, a small rate of interest is sometimes paid. The relation of a depositor to a bank is simply that of creditor.

In the event of a failure of the bank, of course all creditors are to be paid first, and if anything remain, it goes to the stockholders. Now, if no individual liability clause exist in the charter of the bank, the creditor cannot look to any member of the corporation individually; he must collect his debt, if at all, out of the assets of the corporation.

But it will be observed that the directors of the bank occupy a closer relation towards the concern than any other stockholder, and in certain circumstances, if there has been a breach of trust, they may be called upon individually to answer for such bad conduct, and, it may be, to make good all losses.

"There can be no doubt that if there be actual fraud on the part of the directors, and the bank fail because of the same, the directors will be individually liable."

"A topic of greater doubt and deeper interest is, how far will the law enforce judicious management upon directors, and hold them responsible when there is no charge of fraud, no suggestion of intentional mismanagement, but the complaint is of mere easy-going carelessness? Suppose that in a bank, well-meaning directors hold meetings now and then; some attend and others do not; a report or two is heard; an order or two are made; all details are left to subordinates; and so business proceeds until some day there is a defalcation or a robbery (or a collapse) from mere failure to prescribe and enforce strict rules. Have the losers any remedy against directors for feebleness in executive management?"

The decisions on this subject are numerous and conflicting. It is always best to have the measure of liability of directors regulated by the charter or by the by-laws in advance, and then if a failure come, there can be no doubt about the responsibility.

The object of the writer in touching upon these subjects will be fully attained if the great, innocent public are brought to an awakening of the importance of a knowledge thereof.

A man and his work are born together.

"Our Board and Its Work."

I have read this tract setting before us so clearly the work of the State Mission Board. It was very interesting reading to me, since I have been connected with the Baptist State Convention for thirty-three years, and during all that time have been a close observer of the Board's work. Ten of these thirty-three years I was one of its missionaries laboring in several of the towns mentioned in the tract and also in the country surrounding these towns. For nearly twenty-two years I have been a number of the Board of Missions. When I first saw the Convention in 1860, there were only three missionaries in the employment of the Board. Then there were very few towns in the State in which there was any Baptist church or any Baptist preaching. Quite a number of these towns have come into being since 1860. Thirty years ago we had not only very little hold in the towns, but very much of the country was destitute of Baptist preaching. Having seldom been absent from a session of the Convention for a third of a century, I claim to be fully well acquainted with its workings and with the men who composed, and now compose, its Boards. Many of the men with whom I used to meet and discuss the work have gone to their reward. They were tried and true men. They earnestly studied and planned for the best interest of the Lord's kingdom. I can say from personal knowledge of the Secretary of the Board and of the men who attend its meeting to day, that they are as unselfish and untiring in their efforts to promote the work as were any of their predecessors. No set of men in this or in any other State more honestly and earnestly study the best interests of the denomination, than those whose names appear on the Board as published in the tract. These men can be trusted. They have no axe to grind. They have nothing in the world to hide that needs to be known. But why have I written this last sentence? Having written it, I am ashamed of it. Well, I have heard and read so much recently about Boards—State, Home, and Foreign—that if I believed it all, I could have no confidence in the integrity of the men who compose them. And if I lose confidence in the men who compose them, many of whom I know personally, then I lose confidence in all men, and am ruined, and the sooner I get out of this world, the better for me.

I know that all men are fallible and often make mistakes, and of course, in managing a great business like State, Home and Foreign Missions, we must expect mistakes to be made sometimes. But in trying to correct mistakes, let us be careful not to reflect upon men's characters, and cast discredit upon Boards to whose care the Lord's work is committed, and thereby pull down the cause of our Redeemer instead of building up.

But enough of this. I have said it in all kindness to everybody; and am fully persuaded that no one has intended to injure the cause in the least, and perhaps no one has intended to injure any brother by anything said or written. But, brethren, dear brethren, the time has certainly come for a kind word of caution. In the fear of our God and Saviour, let us guard our words.

THE WORK OF MISSIONS IN THE STATE

was earnestly discussed in the Convention seventeen years ago. Some of us thought that each Association could best do its own mission work without any co-operation with the State Mission Board. Others thought as there was such vast destitution in the territory and on the borders of some of the Associations, that without a Board and help from the other Associations, through the Board, that this great destitution could not be supplied. Some of us who held the views first stated saw it all in a different light after that discussion. Soon after that meeting, quite all the Associations came into full co-operation with the Board of Missions, and are working in harmony with it to-day. Having lived long enough to see both of these methods tried in our State Mission work, we are prepared to say that in our opinion the work done by the latter plan could not have been done by the former. Having worked on these plans and having studied them, and seeing the blessing of the Lord upon them, we want no change. Those of us who can look back over the State through a third of a century and see what the Board of Missions has done can thank God and take courage. State Missions never had such a hold upon the Baptists of North Carolina as to day. And I am rejoiced in believing that there is progress along all our lines of Christian work.

W. R. GWALTNEY.

About our College at Wake Forest.

I have just returned from Wake Forest. The campus is now luxuriant with its mossy carpet of green; the flower-beds shed their fragrance through the air; the great, giant oaks stand like grim sentinels at their post of duty while their comrades are sleeping. I never return to the College in summer time but that I think how faithful they are, a fit example for her sons to follow.

The bell seldom rings, the gymnasium is never open, the great doors of the dormitory are closed looking like some castle or prison of feudal days.

How the boys are missed! The people of the "Hill" say "we are glad to see them leave, but gladder to see them return."

Dr. Taylor is almost buried in a great heap of letters—letters from every section of North Carolina making inquiry as to next session. He had just received a large number of letters from students who are actively engaged working for the College they love so well.

I am glad to find so many of them doing such good work. This is a duty they perform with pleasure. If a College is worth attending, it is worthy our efforts to increase its usefulness. The students are the ones on whom more or less the patronage of the College must depend. Individual work is the most effective. The older alumni should give their undivided assistance. If Wake Forest is worthy of her sons, now is the time to show that they are worthy of her.

Never in the history of education in North Carolina has the competition been so intense. More strenuous efforts are being made to draw students away from Wake Forest College than ever before. The students of the College must come from the Baptist ranks. No other denomination feels the least interest in the College save as it serves the general educational interest. If the Baptists do not stick to this College, no one else will. No one doubts that it is worthy of their undivided support. Its past history is a matter of pride to the State, especially to the 160,000 Baptists. There is a class of men in this country who claim that denominational colleges have failed to accomplish that whereunto they were sent; that their day of usefulness is past. The history of Wake Forest College shows the falsity of that school of thinkers. More has been accomplished than was first intended. These heretical doctrines scattered abroad may so cripple the patronage of the institution that years may lapse before it recovers.

It is reasonable to expect Baptist boys to attend Wake Forest College. Why should they attend any other? Wake Forest furnishes the maximum of instruction for minimum of cost. Her sons have won laurels in all callings of life. The moral atmosphere (not "supercilious air of sectarian bigotry") of Wake Forest has made its impress upon the lives of the young men who have attended the institution. In the formative period of their lives, noble impulses were instilled into their minds, which have brought forth men noted for strength of character and lofty views of life.

So, then, in these times, let us one and all bestir ourselves, and extend an invitation to every worthy and suitable young man in our respective counties to attend Wake Forest College next session. An invitation through the columns of the RECORDER is not sufficient. With its immense circulation it still fails to reach many young men who are studying the question of whether or not to attend College. There is no place in North Carolina so good for a Baptist boy as Wake Forest College. E. W. SIKES.

Monroe, July 19, 1893.

The Editor of a Religious Paper.

"The editor of a religious journal—what must he be?" is a question that has been started, and we will pass it along. The Observer has this comment:

"He must be as serious as a parson but as scintillant as the best of diners out." He must be as confident as a cyclopedia, but as efficious as a table of logarithms. He must not be altogether a philosopher, but he certainly must not be a buffoon, for in the one case he will sink his ship with his own weight, in the other his paper will, like a toy balloon, explode with its own gas."

The Congregationalist makes the following comparison:

"In welcoming contributions, he must be as omniverous as an ostrich, and in publishing them as fastidious as an epicure; in dealing with his visitors as patient as Job; in enlarging his subscription list as peripatetic as Ishmael; in responding to appeals for aid as ready as Paul, and in receiving reward as "other worldly" as Lazarus, who had to be satisfied with Abraham's bosom."

The Living Church respectfully adds: "He must be a leader of public opinion, yet never express any opinion; he must receive with meekness the criticism of everybody who pleases to take him to task, yet never presume to criticise anybody or anything; he must grind all the axes of his denomination, and all the little hatchets of his brethren, but be counted mean if he charges enough to pay for oiling his wheel; he must correct and condense almost every contribution that he publishes, though he is ordered to print it "exactly as it is;" he must be held responsible for all errors, mistakes, unwisdoms, infelicities, bad taste, and bad temper of contributors, though he may protest that he is not; he must publish everything that he receives, even if he has to enlarge his paper."—Western Recorder.

"We all do fade as a leaf." Some leaves in fading become more beautiful, and while tinged with hues of rarest loveliness, fall to the ground and carpet its green with gorgeous robe. Others, with the first touch of autumn's frosts, part with their rich green and become seared and withered. Crisp and shriveled, they still cling to their branches until compelled to release their hold by the rough winds of winter. So there are some Christians whose loveliness of character attains its full development when they are in "the sere and yellow leaf." But others, like autumn leaves which become brown and scraggy and yet refuse to fall to the earth, cling to life and to earth, without either the beauty of the one or the yellow ripeness of old age.—Presbyterian.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 2, 1893.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

After August 5th we shall cease to give the premium "What Baptists Believe." Many have expressed themselves as well pleased with this work, and we know that there is a place for it in every Baptist home. It has been selling all over the country during the past three months. We will be glad to give it on the former conditions, viz., to every new two dollar, cash-in-advance subscriber, and to every old subscriber who pays to date and a year in advance, until Aug. 5th. After that date this golden opportunity is lost.

THE BOARD PLAN.

A good deal is being said and written now on mission methods, the board plan, &c. In deciding as to the wisdom of any plan of work, it is important for us to get back to "first principles," and also notice the origin and the need for such organizations. We have a Foreign Mission Board, a Home Mission Board, Sunday school Board, etc., etc. There are some good brethren who think that the board plan of work is worn out, and needs setting aside, or at least, considerable modification. This has been true, more or less, of the board or society work of our Baptist brethren North; but we are writing now with special reference to the work of our people in the South. It is well known that the three boards already mentioned are the three main channels through which we are doing our home and foreign mission work and the Sunday school work of the Southern Baptist Convention. Of course, the States have State Boards and other minor organizations for doing work which is more local in its nature.

Now when a Baptist church meets to transact business, and any important matter comes before the church that may require the prompt attention of that body, the question at once arises, "How shall this thing be done?" The whole church is agreed that it should be done; but how shall the church get at it? Will it be best for the pastor to charge the whole church with the performance of the specific work that claims the attention of the body? The pastor and the wiser members know full well that such a charge on the pastor's part would not be wise, because "What's everybody's business is nobody's business." So, almost invariably some brother moves that a special committee be appointed to attend to the work, whatever it may be, often giving them instructions and calling for a prompt report. Here we see the germinal idea and necessity of the committee or board plan. Centuries ago, when the apostles saw a need of special men for a special work in the parent church at Jerusalem, they charged the church thus: "Look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business." Years ago our fathers met and organized the Southern Baptist Convention. Being a missionary body, it at once became apparent that some plan of doing mission work at home and abroad should be adopted. It was evident that the Convention as a body could not be appointed to attend to the proposed work; so, adopting the committee plan, boards composed of good and trusty brethren, were appointed "over that business." In this the brethren were not only backed by long and well-established denominational usage, but also really by apostolic precedent; for the board plan is only an enlargement of the committee plan.

Just as it is evident to the members of a local Baptist church in conference assembled that one or more committees are needed to do a specific work, so it seemed to this representative body of our Baptist churches South that committees or boards were needed to do mission work at home and abroad. The man has not yet been found to suggest a plan superior to the committee plan to a Baptist church that wishes to do something for the Master; and we say it with the kindest feelings for all concerned, that the man or men have not yet appeared who have found a better plan than the committee or board plan by which the work of the Convention can be pushed.

The main question, then, is, "Are the boards needed?" It would seem from apostolic example from Baptist polity and usage, they are. If so, we are compelled to give such boards sufficient authority to do efficiently the work with which they are charged. How can we hold them to strict accountability unless we give them sufficient authority to act for us? Our boards, then, are the servants of the Convention, and they rehearse annually how they have managed the work committed to their charge. Their reports would be very unsatisfactory, however, if they were mere figure heads, and the power to plan and execute their work were retained by the churches. For local churches, or combinations of local churches, to attempt to do the mission work now committed to our boards would, it seems to us, be acting on the same plan of a whole church attempting a work which they usually deem it wise to commit to a special committee.

It may not be amiss to add, however, in deference to the judgment of some worthy brethren whose views these remarks may more or less antagonize, that there is a possible danger connected with the appointment of standing committees or standing boards, and that is, that these bodies may at times assume a tone or air toward the denomination that appointed them, or toward good brethren who would ask questions about the plan of this work, the extent of their authority, which the circumstances of their appointment and the relation they sustain to the appointing power, will neither justify nor encourage. Brethren should remember, however, that while our boards are servants of the Convention, they are not accountable to individuals here and there who would criticise them, but rather to the body (the Convention) that appoints them. Hence it follows that the best place to offer criticism is before the body that appoints, and in the presence of those criticised, so that, if need be, they can answer for themselves.

THE PROTRACTED MEETING.

The season is now upon us when many of our churches, especially in the country, will be engaged in protracted efforts for the good of the church and for the salvation of souls. From time to time we have made suggestions to our people about what we conceive to be the best manner of conducting them, and we may make a few more before the hot season is over. Just here, however, we wish to guard our younger members especially against quite an erroneous notion in regard to the annual protracted meeting, and that is, that they regard the meeting as affording the opportunity of what they call "a good time of it."

During such meetings there is great danger that the young church members, and those that are not members at all, will band gether to have fun and enjoy themselves, caring little for the spiritual interests of the meeting; and as for making efforts to win souls to Christ, that is left entirely to the pastor and older members. There is often a gathering together of the beaux and belles; courting, light talk, and frivolous conversation, are the order of day, even though souls are perishing all about them. Nothing more than this can be expected from ungodly people; but the Lord, the pastor, the church, have a right to expect something better from Christians, even young Christians.

We love to see our dear young brethren and sisters enjoy themselves, and at the proper time and place engage in innocent amusement and recreation; but while a protracted meeting is going on in their community, is certainly no time for amusement. Do turn over a new leaf this year, young brethren and sisters, and instead of spending the golden hours of the meeting in the manner many of you may have spent them in the past, give them this year to earnest conversation with your young associates who are not Christians about their souls salvation. Pray much that God may lead them into the light of the gospel.

JEWELRY IN THE PULPIT.

Do we not sometimes see rather too much of it? We think it altogether in good taste for the minister to have a good watch with a neat chain attached, and if he can afford it, both may be of gold. We do not see the need of large, flashy watch charms and the same kind of cuff buttons and shirt studs. We very much question the wisdom of even city pastors wearing diamond studs. The ring had better be dispensed with by the minister, but if worn at all, should be plain and modest. The following is a minister's experience as to wearing a plain ring:

"When I first commenced standing before men to preach the gospel of Christ to them, I was wearing a neat gold ring, given to me by my brother's wife. Several times when preparing to preach, I noticed the ring on my hand, and I could but ask myself the question, 'Would not my preaching have more effect without it?' After awhile I asked God to guide me, in even what may seem to some of my brethren a small thing. I prayed over that ring; but I was never satisfied until it came off. I have never attempted again to wear a ring."

We give the experience of this brother for what it is worth, and we must say candidly we think it worth a good deal.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. J. Hartwell Edwards took charge of the Fayetteville church August 1st.

....Rev. J. J. Lennon writes: "The RECORDER is a welcome messenger in wiregrass Georgia."

.....Dr. H. M. Wharton is meeting with great encouragement in his series of meetings at Asheville.

....Rev. J. R. Jones began a series of meetings in the church in Yanceyville on Sunday, July 30th.

....Rev. F. H. Martin of Lumberton has been given a vacation which he is spending at Gilliamsville, Va.

....Miss Annie Armstrong, Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Union is spending a short vacation at Asheville.

....Rev. M. L. Kesler is making good progress in his field. He baptized five persons near Laurinburg on the 23d.

....Rev. G. H. Church has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Baptist church at Statesville, and will take charge Sept 1st.

....Rev. C. A. Jenkens of Oxford, recently called to Goldsboro, preached in the First church of Brooklyn, N. Y., on Sunday, 30th.

....Rev. H. M. Groom of Globe writes: "Our church is flourishing and we are looking forward to a series of meetings in the near future.

....Miss Pattie Tuttle, the principal, desires to announce that the fall session of Warwick High School, Chowan county, will begin Aug. 7th.

....We may give sample reports for Associations this year on Home Missions, State Missions, Education, Sunday-schools, and Orphanage later on.

....Our office was brightened last week by pleasant visits from Revs. J. E. White, W. R. Gwaltney, Dr. Jno. Mitchell, and Brethren Biggs and Fleming.

....Nellie, the seven months old daughter of Bro. R. E. Royall, died at Wake Forest, Sunday morning, July 30th. We extend sincere sympathy to the stricken parents.

....We were glad to see Prof. C. D. Graves, the recently elected professor of Moral Philosophy and Mathematics in Chowan Baptist Female Institute, in the city last week.

....Rev. T. J. Taylor has closed a very successful series of meetings at the Warren Plains church. There were thirty professions, and eight baptisms so far. More are expected.

....We acknowledge receipt of an invitation from Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pearce to the wedding of their daughter, Mary, to Mr. S. F. Williams, August 9th, 1893, at Rocky Hock, N. C.

....The First Baptist church in Goldsboro has called Rev. C. A. Jenkens of Oxford to its pastorate, made vacant by the resignation of Rev. J. H. Edwards. Bro. Jenkins accepts.

....I can report about nine hundred and fifty subscribers and renewals during the nine months I have been employed on Charity and Children.—E. J. Edwards in his Annual Report.

... Rev. A. H. Porter of Orton is on a visit to Mocksville and the churches in that section. He is pastor of four churches, clerk of two Associations, and a brother greatly beloved wherever known.

....Rev. M. A. Adams of Monroe believes in keeping things alive. After having delivered a series of lectures himself, he is engaged in an effort to have several prominent lecturers in his town this season.

....Thirty-five of the present number of orphans belong to the church. The spiritual interest among them, as well as among other members, has been good through the year.—S. W. Hall in his Annual Report.

....Rev. G. W. Greene has had published, at his own expense, ten thousand copies of a personal letter addressed to the Associations, and they will be given out to the brethren and sisters who attend these meetings.

....Dr. Cooper of the First church of Richmond has been granted a vacation during the month of August, during which Dr. Hawthorne of Atlanta will fill his pulpit. Dr. Hawthorne was the former pastor of this church.

....It is reported that the Chinese are again showing their aversion to missionaries. One missionary has been attacked and others threatened, and a state of uncertainty prevails. So far our representatives have not been molested.

....The Central and Pilot Mountain Associations meet this week, and the Beulah meets next week. The Flat Rock, the Waughtown and Greensboro churches will gladly welcome the delegates and visitors, and entertain them during the meetings.

....Rev. W. R. Cullom has been appointed a tutor in theology at the Louisville Seminary. Bro. Cullom is an A. M. graduate of Wake Forest College, and a North Carolina boy of whom we may all be proud. May the Seminary find in him another Robertson.

....Dr. J. J. Hall preached his farewell sermon to the Baptist Tabernacle of this city on Sunday last. Dr. Hall leaves the church in an excellent condition after a pastorate thereof of several years. His many friends will follow him in prayer to his new field in Norfolk.

....The present circulation of Charity and Children is 3,300. The expenses of the paper amount to $200 a month.—J. H. Mills in his Annual Report. This 3,300 circulation includes all the copies sent out to churches and Sunday-schools on account of their contributions.

....Rev. R. T. Bryan has been for some weeks at Waynesville, N. C., and has been in bed for some days with chills and fevers. He may not be able to attend the Central and Pilot Mountain Associations this week.

....Our subscribers are still very slow in renewing their subscriptions. We wish we had some means of impressing it on our delinquent patrons that we must have money now, to day, if we are to conduct a good paper and pay our debts.

....I respectfully recommend that during these days of financial distress the number of orphans be not allowed to exceed 120, and that monthly current expenses be reduced to an average of six hundred dollars.—J. H. Mills in Annual Report.

....Let all the reports on missions, &c., be well digested and full of facts this year when presented to the Associations. We give a sample of a good report on Foreign Missions in this paper in another column. Cut it out and save it. You may have a good place for it at your Association.

....The protracted meeting conducted by Rev. G. L. Finch at Falling Creek church, Graham's township, came to a close Sunday, after nine days of successful labor, resulting in six additions to the church. Rev. A. G. Wilcox of Halifax county, ably assisted throughout the meeting.—Goldsboro Headlight.

....He is a happy editor who can retire to the seclusion of a country resort during these oppressive months and still have his paper up to its usual standard. Bro. Eaton of the Western Recorder is resting at Lyndon, but the Recorder still continues the same excellent journal.

....Rev. W. L. Wright of the Leigh Street Baptist church of Richmond, has been given a vacation. After his sermon on the night of the 23d, being his last service before vacation he was tendered a loving reception by his charge. Rev. C. W. Duke, a graduate of Richmond College will fill his pulpit in his absence.

....Dr. W. V. Tudor, pastor of the Broad Street M. E. Church, South, of Richmond, Va., recently preached a sermon on "The Golden City," which so favorably impressed his hearers that they have published it in pamphlet form for free distribution. It is good reading. If you want a copy, apply to W. F. Richardson, Richmond, Va.

....Rev. C. W. Blanchard closed a most successful eight days' meeting at Green Hill on the 30th ult. There were more than forty professions, and thirty were baptized Sunday. He writes: "The church was very much revived; indeed it is always a live church." He is with Rev. A. J. Taylor at Mt. Adar in a meeting this week.

....Mr. Dougald A. McDuffie, brother of Rev. M. V. McDuffie, died at the family home in Fayetteville, July 21st, after an illness of several weeks with rheumatism. He was a student of Wake Forest College for several sessions, and at the time of illness was employed in Greensboro, N. C. He was a faithful student and an exemplary young man.

....Rev. J. K. Fant, on last Friday night, offered his resignation as pastor of the High Point Baptist church. He will, perhaps, during the absence of Rev. R. T. Vann in August, preach for the Scotland Neck church, and then be ready for work in some other field. We gladly commend Bro. Fant as one of the best pastors and workers in the State.

....The Sunday-school Chautauqua movement is gaining impetus every day. Bro. Broughton has issued an excellent program, and other announcements of interest to Sunday-school workers in particular, and Baptists generally, and the people seem to be taking hold as they ought. If you are interested, write to Bro. J. C. Birdsong, Raleigh, N. C.

....Rev. Dr. John H. Eager of Florence, Italy, has recently visited a valley called Argentina, situated among the maritime Alps, and several towns high up among the mountains. He found that many of the people have abandoned the Catholic religion, have Bibles, and are reading them daily, and hence a wide open door for Baptist missionaries.

....I respectfully recommend that the paper be placed in charge of one person who shall be responsible for its entire management, making it the organ of the Orphanage, and paying the Treasurer one-third of the gross income, and who shall keep the office in at least its present running order, except the usual wear and tear.—J. H. Mills in his Annual Report.

....Of the ten thousand copies of "Our Board and its Work," published only a few weeks ago, designed for distribution at the Associations, the Secretary has now, the week the Associations begin, only about five hundred copies. The tract has been in great demand, and we hope will do much good. It has certainly had a wide circulation. Pastors and churches appreciate it.

....The Revs. Hugh Price Hughes and Mark Guy Pearse have been conspicuous among those who were urging an "advance movement," whatever that may mean, among the English Methodists. They have now moved on out of their places as preachers—the former goes into political life, and the latter, who is rich, quits preaching also.—Western Recorder. And we are inclined to remark that nobody's the loser thereby.

....Bro. J. G. Burrus of Rockford, moderator of the Yadkin Association, says: "I am truly glad to hear so many visiting brethren are coming to our Association. We will have conveyance for them at Burch Station on August 17th. Hope we may have a large number of brethren from Raleigh, Wake Forest and that section of the State. Come and tell others to come with you." Bro. Burrus knows how to give an invitation, and, too, how to preside over a Baptist Association to the satisfaction of his brethren.

....Working for our College is a duty that we owe the denomination. If there is a young man in your neighborhood who should be at college, it is your duty to encourage him to go; it is your duty to place him in correspondence with Dr. Taylor that he may learn how easily he can go to college. Our young men need encouragement and our College needs active working friends. Both are in the denomination.

....We were pleased to see Prof. Collier Cobb of the University in our office last week. He had just closed the first session of the summer school of geology, which did much practical work in Western North Carolina. Prof. Cobb expressed himself as much pleased with the success of the class. The University is to be congratulated on securing Prof. Cobb in its faculty.

....We have received the last issue of the University Magazine. This magazine is now placed at the forefront of college journalism, and its marked progress during the past year, under the management of Prof. Cobb, is wonderful. It is announced that a series of articles from undergraduate students of the leading universities of the world will be a feature of its next volume.

....We are very glad to announce that Mrs. Dr. Yates is gaining strength, and will take a trip to the White Mountains this week. She will be in Chicago in September. She writes: "I get very good news from Shanghai. The work seems to be prospering in Mr. and Mrs. Tatum's hands. I am very sorry that his health is not stronger; he hopes, and so do I for him, that he may be able to remain on the field ten years before coming home."

....We very deeply regret to hear of the death of Mrs. E. M. Grandy, widow of the late T. T. Grandy, in Ocala, Fla., at the age of sixty-six years. Sister Grandy was one of the Lord's most faithful soldiers, ever zealous for the upbuilding of his kingdom, ever gentle, kind and charitable. It is said that she and her mother had read the RECORDER since its first issue. We would be glad if Bro. Hardaway of Oxford would furnish us a short sketch of her life.

....The July number of the Wake Forest Student is out. This issue of the magazine should be of especial interest to the friends of the College, containing as it does several articles concerning the work of the College by the professors, and its pages throughout being devoted to the institution. Among others, we note Mr. W. E. Daniel's address, "The Duty of the College Graduate to the People," and the articles by Dr. Taylor and Prof. Carlyle as of especial worth. Any new student who desires to become better acquainted with Wake Forest should send to Dr. Taylor for a copy of this magazine.

....Among the Alphabet Societies warranted to bring in the Millennium apace is the M. C. L. which was started in England eight years ago and is said to have spread over all the world. These letters mean "Ministering Children's League," and a part of the ritual is a prayer to Jesus. In India some Hindu children wished to join the society, and the prayer was altered so that any Hindu who believed in any deity could pray it. Comment on that would be superfluous. The object of this M. C. L. is most commendable—it is to promote kindness and unselfishness and the habit of usefulness among children. Poor children! Mothers were an old-fashioned institution whose business it was to teach these things. But mothers are presumably all dead, or so wicked they no longer teach their children these things, and a Mrs. Benedict in New York City (do subscribe for the Society's organ) has risen up to do their work. Comment here would be superfluous to those who honor their mothers.—Western Recorder.

The Annual Meeting.

Trustees all here, with one exception, on Tuesday. Business transacted in harmony. The Trustees ate at all the houses with the orphans. This was best, for they saw and became acquainted with the officers and children.

Mr. Dennis Simmons was chosen Trustee in place of Dr. McManaway.

But they were so happy over their harmony that they actually forgot to make any arrangements for a collection on Wednesday. The people came not many by rail. There were acres of fine horses from a long distance. Many came twenty miles, the roads being dry and firm. The arbor was entirely too small, and this fact caused some confusion.

Rev. R. L. Patton preached on Sacrifice in Giving. The sermon was a terrible array of facts and figures and gospel truth, and delivered with great power. He is a noble preacher and the sermon will long be remembered. Rev. J. K. Fant in opening the services prayed for rain. Soon after the close of the sermon a light shower fell.

The orphans occupied an hour, and then our eloquent Bro. E. E. Hilliard of Scotland Neck, delivered an address on Sowing and Reaping. It was chaste, beautiful and impressive. He is surely gifted as an orator. He and Pastor Patton are zealous friends of the Orphanage, and are liberal in their contributions. Both of them spoke as they felt.

The collection was small, as we all expected in these hard times. Now the crowd is gone. The singing class is gone to the Mocksville picnic, and the Orphanage is unusually quiet.—Charity and Children.

MEETING OF ORPHANAGE TRUSTEES.

The Board of Trustees, eighteen in number, were all present at their meeting at Thomasville, Tuesday, July 25th, 1893, except Rev. A. G. McManaway, who has left the State, and J. D. Brevard of Asheville.

It was ordered that in publishing the list of the trustees, that their post-office be given and not simply the county in which they live or have lived; that in publishing the "charter," the charter as amended, and not simply the amendments to the charter, be published; that the services of Rev. E. J. Edwards as traveling agent for Charity and Children, be continued till Dec. 31st, 1893; that the General Manager and Treasurer be instructed not to send out their annual reports to the public till presented to the Board and approved by the same; that the Treasurer, in making his annual report, shall make it full, putting it in the best business form and without comment or explanation of things outside of his duties as Treasurer; that he be required to pay out no money except upon an itemized account made out regularly, and approved by the General Manager, and this shall be a valid voucher only when receipted by the party to whom the money is paid; and that the General Manager be instructed to keep such number of children as the means at his disposal will justify, and that the current expenses be made to correspond with the income.

RESOLUTIONS UNANIMOUSLY PASSED.

1. That the Editor, in publishing Charity and Children, shall exclude from its columns all articles which do not pertain to the family or to the cause of the Orphanage, except such unobjectionable advertising matter as may be paid for.

2. That the office of Treasurer and Editor be united in the same person.

3. That the Treasurer and Editor be charged with no other duties and responsibilities than the duties indicated by his position as Treasurer and Editor.

4. That the Board at this annual meeting provide for the election of an Editor and Treasurer, and that the brother so elected be given, if necessary, till Jan. 1st, 1894, to enter upon his duties.

On motion, R. D. Fleming, C. Durham and H. F. Schenck were appointed a committee with instructions to secure an Editor.

It was ordered that the Treasurer and Editor open an account with Charity and Children and show in his annual report all receipts for the paper, and the cost of the paper, and to pay his own salary and the other expenses of the paper out of the income from the same, and to turn over the remainder of income to the general expenses of the Orphanage.

The term of six trustees expire every two years. The term of A. G. McManaway, Thomas Carrick, T. H. Pritchard, J. Mitchell, Noah Biggs and W. T. Faircloth expired at this meeting.

Dennis Simmons of Williamston was elected to fill the place of A. G. McManaway, and the other five brethren were elected as their own successors.

J. H. Mills was re elected General Manager, and S. W. Hall was elected Treasurer to serve till his successor shall qualify. It was ordered that the Treasurer, in making his weekly acknowledgments, shall publish his estimated value of the articles in kind received, and in his annual report include the total of these items, but separate from the report of cash, that his report hereafter shall be audited, and the Auditor's certificate shall be attached to the report before it is printed.

TRUSTEE.

NOTES ON THE MEETING BY OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT.

We reached Thomasville early Wednesday morning, and by 10 o'clock it was certain that a very large crowd would be in attendance. We learned at once that the meeting on Tuesday was pleasant and successful.

The children were neatly dressed, and to all appearances have been well cared for the present year.

The beautiful shade trees are well taken care of, and we were glad to see that the interest of the General Manager and others is being shown in the cultivation of flowers of various sorts. We hope to see yet more interest expressed in this direction. Flowers cost but little, and the time devoted to their cultivation is far from being thrown away.

At 10:30 o'clock the vast audience assembled under the large arbor, which is not now large enough to accommodate the people who attend these exercises, to listen to a song service by the children. The singing was an improvement on any we have ever heard at the Orphanage.

At eleven o'clock the annual sermon was preached by Rev. R. L. Patton of Morganton from 2 Cor. 8: 9—"For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich." Subject—"Self-denial in giving." Brother Patton showed, as he always does, careful preparation of his sermon, which was delivered in great earnestness of manner. He is one of the most valuable friends the Orphanage has. He not only speaks in its behalf, but makes sacrifices himself for it, and develops his churches in the line of its support.

From twelve to one o'clock dinner, watermelons, lemonade, &c., held the attention of all present.

In the afternoon the annual address was delivered by Mr. E. E. Hilliard of Scotland Neck, who took as his subject, "Sowing and Reaping." The speaker fully sustained himself in the excellent address which he gave us. He not only showed that a harvest of anything presupposes a sowing, but that both seed-time and harvest were the legitimate outcome of honest, faithful toil. The achievements of science, the beauty of art, the perfection of teaching, the accuracy of history, the extent of discovery and the success of the farm were here to bless and benefit the world at the cost of lives spent in faithful, honest and unceasing toil. This was the first visit Mr. Hilliard had made to the Orphanage, and he seemed to be as well pleased with what he saw as the audience was at the address which he delivered.

At the close of the address, a collection was taken, the amount of which we did not learn. Money is very scarce, and many who had it in their hearts to give were forced to go away without being able to do so. If we can only get rain in time, crops will be very fine, and we hope not only the Orphanage may have an increase in its contributions, but all our work as well.

A Suggested Sample Report for the Associations this Year.

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The Southern Baptist Convention, through its Board located in Richmond, Va., has missionaries—

I. IN CHINA:

In Canton and vicinity (begun in 1845), 13 missionaries, 21 native helpers, 5 churches, with 710 members, 61 baptisms last year, 8 schools, and $1,400 of contributions by these members.

In Shanghai and vicinity, (begun in 1847), 13 missionaries, 4 native helpers, 3 churches, 113 members, 13 baptisms, 3 schools, and $315 contributions.

In Tung Chow and vicinity, (begun 1860), 12 missionaries, 3 churches, 115 members, 2 baptisms.

II. IN AFRICA:

In Lagos and interior, (begun in 1850), 11 missionaries (of whom five are at home seeking restoration of health), 7 assistants, 4 churches, 144 members, 20 baptisms, 3 schools, and $215 contributed.

III IN ITALY:

In Rome, Florence, and 14 other towns, (begun in 1870), 3 missionaries from the United States, 27 native preachers and colporters, 17 churches, 347 members, 72 baptisms, and $560 contributions.

IV. IN BRAZIL:

In Bahia and vicinity, (begun 1882), 7 missionaries, 4 native preachers, 4 churches, 256 members, 61 baptisms, and $350 contributions.

In Rio and vicinity, (begun in 1883), 10 missionaries, 4 native preachers, 8 churches, 197 members, 35 baptisms, and $994 contributions.

V. IN MEXICO:

(Begun in 1880), 25 missionaries, 10 native helpers, 30 churches, 1,014 members, 94 baptisms, 2 schools, and $1,526 contributions.

VI IN JAPAN:

(Begun in 1889), 4 missionaries, 2 native assistants, 1 church, 27 members, 26 baptisms.

Totals—missionaries 98, native helpers 79, churches 75, members 2,923, baptisms 383, schools 16, and contributions $5,360.

In the above named mission work North Carolina has in China 12 missionaries.

Africa 3 missionaries.
Brazil 3 missionaries.
Mexico 2 missionaries.

Total, 20 missionaries.

Six of North Carolina's missionaries are now in this country for recuperation and short visits to their homes, the churches and Associations. It is with much pleasure that we welcome our beloved brethren Newton from Africa and Bryan from China to North Carolina and to our Association to-day.

There are thirty three great Foreign Missionary Boards or Societies of evangelical churches in the United States. These had last year in papal and pagan lands 724 principal stations, 4,742 out-stations, 1 274 male and 1,746 female missionaries, 11,256 native preachers and helpers, 2,603 churches, 295,326 members, 50,079 additions last year, 5,692 schools, 176,765 scholars, and the natives contributed last year $803,351, and the churches of the United States, gave $4,983,516.

The evangelical missionary organizations of the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Germany and Continental Europe had last year in papal and pagan fields, 14,335 stations, 8,472 missionaries, 44 532 native preachers and helpers, and a church membership of 893,315, with an income for the work from all sources of $14,588,354.

Our duty to papal and pagan lands is plain, and our Lord's command to give them the gospel is imperative. Let us study the Scriptures to know our duty, read books and mission journals for information about the progress made and the doors of usefulness wide open to us, and pray, and give, and toil, for the uplifting love and spirit of Christ to aid us in giving the gospel to all the world.

CHAIRMAN.

This and That from Greensboro.

IS IT RIGHT?

The other day we noticed a party of good Baptist officials get off the train. Most of these men are leaders in the denomination. I watched to see where they would go. With one or two exceptions, they went to a hotel which has a bar attached. In going to that hotel, they passed another equal in almost every respect, giving as good fare for the same money, which has no bar-room. Is it right for our Baptist brethren to patronize hotels which have bar-rooms attached, when they can have equal benefits at one which has no bar?

WILL THE TRUSTEES EXPLAIN?

Why is it that the Baptist Orphanage spends over $4,000 for salaries and wages of officers and helpers, and only $2,600 for the provisions and clothing of the orphans? Why does it require five teachers and five matrons to look after 130 children? Why is not the Orphanage farm self sustaining? Why is it necessary to have cooks, washerwomen and nurses in addition to the other help employed? What is included in $763.18 miscellaneous disbursements? These questions are asked in the interest of the Orphanage, not in a spirit of criticism. Contributions to the Orphanage have fallen off.

I believe the trustees look to the Baptists of the State for support and it is due the Baptists that the Orphanage affairs should be managed with the utmost economy. These matters are being discussed in the churches, they will be discussed in the associations and the conventions. There must be some things explained to the Baptists of the State, or the contributions will fall off more this year. I think Bro. Mills will say that there are few pastors in the State whose churches and Sunday-schools have done better than mine in the support of the Orphanage. I expect to continue to help this cause, but there are many brethren and churches who will not do what they have done unless changes are made.

CAN OUR CHURCHES DO IT?

The Norfolk Landmark recently represented the Headlight as saying that the pastor of one of the Goldsboro churches said in his pulpit one Sunday morning that owing to the tardiness of some of his members, he was unable to pay promptly for what he buys. This is a sad commentary on the church referred to. We hope it was not a Baptist church, but still we know Baptist churches guilty of the same dishonest practice. There are Baptist pastors in North Carolina who are suffering in their homes and in their influence because the churches have failed to meet their obligations. I consider such conduct on the part of the churches a crime against God and man. We need a revival of honesty in our churches.

Pastors need to throw off some of the shackles of sensitiveness. Why should not a pastor talk to his church about his salary? Other men do it in other relations. I believe the pastors should make the question of salary a business one and require the churches to meet regularly and promptly their obligations. If such was the case, a new era would dawn upon our churches. It has been my good fortune for five years to serve churches which promptly met their obligations. When Monday morning comes, my check for week's salary is given. Elizabeth City paid in the same way. Old Salem, a country church with once a month preaching, did the same thing, and declared after two years' trial that it was the easiest and best system they ever had. I believe all our churches can do it. They ought to do it and give the world an example to follow.

THE S. S. CHAUTAUQUA.

May the Lord bless this movement. It can be made a medium of great good to the State. Let the Baptists rally to this undertaking. It ought to be made a splendid success. It is a matter of regret that it conflicts with the International State S. S. Convention and the Liberty Association, but it was the best time that could be selected. Let us try to arrange to be present at sometime during the session.

CHAS. A. G. THOMAS

July 29, 1893.

To the Faithful.

From this date till the middle of November, the Associations will be in session every week. It will be my duty to attend them. If letters, therefore, are written to me about the mission work, and are not promptly answered, you may know the cause of delay. I will do my best. You, I know, will be patient. All letters about Sunday-school supplies, and things of that kind, will be promptly attended to by Bro. H. L. Watson, who is the efficient clerk and book-keeper in the Supply Store and Mission Room. He will serve you gladly.

I am the servant of the Convention, and by the Lord's help I will be faithful to every department of its work. My work, as many of you know, is pressing, difficult and trying. But the heart of no true man should fail because of difficulties. These wisely met and overcome make men, erect milestones on the way of progress, and open new and wider doors of usefulness to the denomination. I begin the work of the Associations this week hopefully, "in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel," the Redeemer; and, as I believe, with the comfort and guidance of the Holy Spirit. I will be in attendance on the Associations, please remember, brethren, for four months, every week, and from one to three Associations each week and, as in the past, will have to meet difficulties constantly in the various departments of work. How I shall need strength, wisdom and patience! Never, in the same length of time, in the six years in my present position, have I had half so many letters of encouragement as I have received in the past three months. I have not had time to write to many, very many, of these brethren and thank them; but I thank the Lord that there are so many such men in North Carolina Baptist churches.

I have not and I will not worry. Worry breaks down more men than work. The faithful preacher and pastor is my highest ideal of a Baptist preacher, and I have never in the past thirty years seen the day when, left to my own preferences and feelings, I did not, above everything else, prefer to be a pastor. A Baptist preacher, a pastor of a Baptist church, whether in the city, town, or country, however obscure and weak, is in a higher position, in my estimation, than any Baptist preacher ever has been in, or ever can be in, as an officer of the State or general government, president or professor in any university, theological seminary, or college, secretary of a convention or board, editor of any paper, or manager of any denominational enterprise.

In my position I am only a helper in the work. Henceforth to the Convention I will not notice any criticisms or complaints on or about any department of the work. I will have neither time nor disposition to do it. I most earnestly ask an interest in your prayers as I go forth to the trying work of the next four months.

Notes.

My friend, Judge Winston, has shown much ability in making every-day law plain to every-day people. I have for sometime thought to express my appreciation of his "Talks" To his last week's mention of lawyers who have made our inheritance great, names might be multiplied of North Carolina lawyers, who, have illustrated the highest ideals of honor. I recall an anecdote of Ex-Governor Graham, who once received a check for five thousand dollars, with no explanation except that it was a retainer. He returned it to the sender saying he did not accept retainers without knowing for what service he was retained.

OUGHT LAWYERS PROSECUTE?

Indirectly Judge Winston touches a question of great consequence, in the proposition that "No man (lawyer) ought to undertake the prosecution except where the case is plain." If the case is plain the solicitor needs no help. Criminals often tread devious paths, and they must be traced through the labyrinths. It is in knotty cases the solicitor needs and ought to have help. I concur heartily in the idea involved, that human life and freedom are not to be lightly assailed. Mercy and justice alike demand that every safeguard be thrown around accused persons, and it occurs to me there would be a practical gain in this direction if the State would abandon its policy of "blood-money" pay to solicitors. They are now paid to convict, without conviction there is no pay. The office is worth four dollars for every negro and poor white man who can be convicted of some trifling offense. This policy naturally tends to mere colorable prosecutions and multiplication of charges. Probably every lawyer of any experience will recall instances of four to ten indictments against one man, punishment in only one case, but costs in all. Pay the solicitor a salary, relieve him of personal considerations, make him judge of the propriety of prosecutions as well as of the possibility of conviction, and there will be a sensible gain in the one administration of law. Only the high character of the gentlemen who usually fill the solicitor's office in this State, has saved the people from oppression under the present policy. The fees turned into the public treasury would probably prove insufficient to pay the salaries, but the saving in court costs would more than pay the difference.

FLINGERS AND KICKERS

This is not a dignified caption, but the words are becoming rather familiar in our denominational print. If the children of this world are wiser in this generation than the children of light, it is with difficulty they maintain their lead. The trickery and scheming, the reproach and bitterness, even the vulgar language of slang and depreciation current among the ungodly, are all too readily appropriated by some who profess to have put away unclean things. It is much to be regretted that those who do not agree with us, are, from that fact made worthy of offensive epithets. It may be that some past sowing to the wind has something to do with the present whirlwind. However that may be, there is some disquietude, and if the brethren are allowed to "blow off" a little it will relieve them. Apply the Scriptures to this emergency—as to all others. Let those who are strong help the weak. Let those who are wise instruct the ignorant. The brethren at the head of affairs are strong men without doubt. They know the work committed to their hands. It is not their work. It is not merely the work of the Convention. It is the work of the great Baptist brotherhood. Its power and support comes from them, and one does not constitute himself a "boss" merely by asking information, and even if he be intent upon mischief, let him have the information. Lay bare the work. Bring to light every fact. Let them born into the hearts of the people, and stir them as they have never been stirred before, and through it all the Holy Spirit will guide the people into the truth. These are matters the Convention cannot deal with. Time will not permit and the people will not be there. They must know and themselves weigh the facts. With deference I submit the following suggestions to brethren who have something to say:

There are greater interests involved than gratifying personal resentments and settling personal disagreements. They are our great denominational interests, and the immortal interests of immortal souls.

The dignity of our denominational character is involved. Some may regard this lightly. But one said "Let no man despise thy youth;" he could not have regarded with pleasure contemptuous levity of deportment in mature age. Denominational life and teaching must affect the character of its people, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

The best contribution yet made to this discussion, will, I think be found in Dr. Pritchard's letters in the North Carolina Baptist and Charity and Children last week.

HOME AFFAIRS.

Our work moves along quietly. Brother Archibald Cree, Jr., a licentiate of this church, hopes to enter Wake Forest this fall. He gives promise of zeal and ability.

As usual, the sisters are active and full of good works. The Ladies Aid Society presented a most enjoyable concert last week under the direction of Sisters M. Parham and C. M. Cooper. In addition to home talent of a high order, quite a number of visiting ladies contributed to its success. Miss Shepherd of Suffolk, Va., teacher of vocal music in Oxford Female Seminary, gave great pleasure by her singing. Her cultured voice, charming person, engaging manners and obliging disposition, quickly won from her audience the same high regard already accorded her in the social circle. Misses L. and M. Currin and Hobgood of Oxford, Edwards of Goldsboro, and Coghill of Rocky Mount, were accorded the recognition due their courtesy and excellent performance. There were many attractive features, but none more pleasing than the appearance of Miss L. Currin, daughter of Bro. J. M. Currin of Oxford.

Help Asked For.

Dear Bro. Editor:—I want to say to your readers that we are struggling to build us a Baptist church, which we have not yet named, near the Hendren grave yard in Wilkes county. There are a goodly number of our faith in this community; but we are poor and sorely in need of help.

If any of the brethren will help us, let them send the amounts they give to Bro. T. B. Campbell, Glass, N. C., and it will be gratefully received.

Fraternally yours,

W. R. HENDREN.

An Opportunity to Get a Pastor.

Rev. J. B. Harrell of Elizabeth City will doubtless be open for a pastoral engagement very soon. He has been serving a group of fine churches hereabouts for more than two years. Some church that wants a splendidly equipped preacher and a good pastor, now has an opportunity of securing the right man. He is a young man of decided ability, of blameless life, of considerable experience, with an accomplished wife and two children. He grows daily in favor with all who know how to appreciate a good man and a fine preacher. I know him. He is my neighbor, and I love him, and deeply regret his contemplated departure.

Citizens National Bank Statement.

In another column will be found the statement of the above named bank, which shows it to be in a most gratifying condition. It is a matter of which we may well be proud, that throughout the condition of affairs which has threatened so many banks, the Citizens National Bank of Raleigh has stood without danger, and is able to make such an excellent showing. Under the careful and efficient management of its excellent corps of experienced officers, this bank has acquired a public confidence which cannot be shaken. Although it does not pay interest on deposits, its statement shows $322,788.42 entrusted to its care by individuals.

We call attention to the advertisement of Ryland Institute in another column. This institution is in charge of able and experienced educators, and bids fair to become a most popular school for young ladies.

A Few Thoughts.

BY SCATTERHEAD.

PAUL AND SILAS FROM A RIVER-SIDE TO A DUNGEON.

We find Paul and Silas, first missionaries to Europe, down in a deep, loathsome dungeon, their feet made fast in the stocks and their backs bleeding, bruised and wounded from the "many stripes" causelessly laid upon them. These servants of the Lord, in company with some devout women, had been holding for some days a little prayer-meeting by a river-side. Some of the number who had attended these meetings were enabled to trust the Lord Jesus and rejoice in his love. These faithful and consecrated men of God had been bothered for several days by a poor, demented, fortune-telling girl, and Paul through the power of his Lord cast out the wicked spirit that possessed her. These Philippians did not pay any attention to "these servants of the Most High God" until the soothsaying damsel was healed, was no longer controlled by Satan's power, and her wicked masters were conscious from the great change that had taken place with the girl that the "hope of their gains was gone." They then howled terribly and brought charges against Paul and Silas as disturbers of the peace. Strangers and friendless these men of God stood before the rulers without an opportunity to refute the false charges brought against them. They were cruelly whipped and cast into prison. "And at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God, and the prisoners heard them."

1. Persons engaged in the iniquitous liquor traffic and other crooked ways of money-making are all right with Christians as long as they fail to denounce their wicked business, but as soon as their devilish schemes and hellish occupations are spoken against by God's faithful and fearless servants, their excessive stock of spleen is stirred to the bottom and manifests itself by their many infamous deeds.

2. Paul and Silas, constrained by love to God and men to tell of the "unsearchable riches of Christ," received from the world no tokens of love or consolation, nothing but "midnight" darkness. For doing the work of their Lord and Master, they were cruelly beaten by men of the world and shut up in a dismal prison. No friends near to cheer and comfort them, but forsaken and friendless in a foreign country, confined in a horrible dungeon, their feet made fast in the stocks, they had no chance to ease their bleeding, lacerated backs by shifting from side to side, but in this miserable place where darkness was almost "visible," a reminder of their comfortless surroundings and the cheerless outside world, and midst all their suffering at midnight, songs were heard in the prison.

3. Paul and Silas, though in this miserable plight outwardly, with bruised and torn bodies, smarting with pain, were the happiest men in that city, though world-forsaken and the surroundings of the gloomy and joyless "midnight" darkness, the Lord their God, true to his promise, had not forsaken them, but filled their souls with heavenly light and sweet consolation, so that their cups of joy ran over in praise to his blessed and adorable name and rejoiced that they were "counted worthy to suffer shame for his name." Outward circumstances cannot hinder the heavenly joy from reaching the hearts of God's people. God alone can comfort his people during their darkest hours. The "little ones" who have had the most of heaven on earth were the ones who suffered most for the Lord Jesus. Many martyrs midst the awful and cruel tortures devised and inflicted by fiendish and heartless tyrants, were filled with joy "unspeakable and full of glory," and their minds were not upon their sufferings, but were lifted to their blessed Saviour. A dungeon can be a heaven to the soul rejoicing in God's love. It is the happy privilege of God's people to have the abiding and comforting presence of their Lord on this scene of suffering.

4. Trials will come, brother pilgrim. All may seem bright and lovely to you now, but as sure as you are "not of the world," the dark hours of trial will overtake you, but which will only purify you so as to better reflect the Master's image. "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trials which are to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you; but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy." If we live near the Lord Jesus, we shall be hated of the world, and if we live godly we shall suffer persecution. But we should be willing to "endure hardness as good soldiers." Though we may be borne high upon the dark waves of life's tempestuous sea, yet every bound brings us nearer our desired haven, and soon earth's trials will be over, and we shall behold him who alone is heaven here to sinners saved by grace and thirsting after righteousness, and who only is heaven to the redeemed through all eternity. "There shall be no night there."

Ordination.

The following ministers—C. S. Blackwell, D. D., R. R. Overby, D. D., J. B. Ferebee, P. S. C. Davis, and the writer—met at Shiloh, Camden county, July 18th, by request of Shiloh church, to examine Bro. C. S. Burgess, and if approved, to ordain him as a minister of the gospel.

The presbytery organized by electing Dr. Blackwell, Chairman, and the writer, Secretary. Bro. Burgess was asked the usual questions and satisfactory answers returned, and unanimously agreed to ordain him as a minister.

The crowd assembled in the church to witness the ordination. Dr. Blackwell preached the sermon, J. B Ferebee offered the prayer, Dr. Overby gave the charge, the writer presented the Bible, and P. S. C. Davis gave the hand of fellowship.

Bro. Burgess goes to Pamlico county to preach and teach school. May the Lord bless him is our earnest prayer.

The World's Fair.

It does not cost a small fortune, as many suppose, to visit the Fair. On the contrary, living expenses in Chicago are as reasonable as in any other large American city. Rooms for two, within a few squares of the Fair grounds, may be had at $7 to $12 per week. Two persons, by ordering together, can make a good meal at first-class restaurants without the grounds for thirty-five cents each, and within the grounds for fifty cents each. Board and lodging need not cost more than $1.75 per day. Twenty five dollars per week for all necessary expenses is a liberal allowance.

The Columbian Exposition is the greatest object lesson the world has ever had. There one has unfolded before him the world's progress in every department of human endeavor from the period of the pyramid builders to the present time. It is impossible to fully realize its immensity. Its site is four times as large as that of the Paris Exposition, and its buildings cover twice the area, and cost more than twice as much as those of any previous fair. Five million dollars were expended in laying out and beautifying the grounds, and the buildings cost double that sum. The total outlay for the Paris Exposition was less than $10,000,000, while that of the Columbian has been more than $30,000,000.

The grounds are adorned with magnificent sculptural pieces, one of them, the Columbian fountain, costing more than $50,000. In this most beautiful fountain a young American artist, Frederick MacMonnies, has embodied his idea of the apotheosis of modern liberty. There are thirteen main exposition buildings, besides the numerous State and foreign government buildings and the Midway Plaisance attractions. The smallest of these main buildings cost $435,000, while the largest cost $1,500,000, contains forty-four acres of floor space, and would hold one thousand cottages 25 by 50 feet.

The nations of the earth have vied with each other in the variety and magnificence of their exhibits, and it would be difficult to tell to which belongs the palm. Probably to France, of all foreign countries, is due the credit of having made the most complete, beautiful, and harmonious exhibit. Of the State exhibits, that of North Carolina is the least satisfactory to one who is acquainted with her magnificent resources. However, this State makes fairly creditable displays in the departments of mines, forestry and agriculture.

If one is looking for the new and marvelous he should spend some time in the electricity building. Here he will see in operation Professor Gray's telautograph, which is destined to take the place of the telegraph, and, in large measure, of the telephone. As one writes his message at the transmitting instrument a duplicate copy is written at the receiving instrument. Both messages are in the sender's own handwriting, thus making him responsible for any error. In this building are shown all of Edison's wonderful inventions.

The Columbus relics are shown in the monastery of La Rabida. Here one sees letters from Columbus, Ferdinand and Isabella, the original commission given to Columbus upon his departure for the first voyage, the first church bell brought to America, the famous bull of Pope Alexander VI, portraits of noted discoverers, and hundreds of other priceless historical relics.

In the Art building are found the noblest creations of the most famous painters and sculptors. France, Germany and the United States make interesting and instructive educational exhibits in the Manufactures and Liberal Arts building. Mr. Vanderbilt's display in the Forestry building of woods from his estate near Asheville attracts much attention, and is a lesson in scientific forest culture. The farm implements shown in the Agricultural building are a revelation to many. One of the most interesting is a sulky-like machine, on which the driver rides, which plants and waters tobacco, tomato and cabbage plants, etc. But it would require columns to enumerate the novel things seen in the different buildings, so I must desist.

Every visitor to the Fair should spend at least one or two days in visiting the attractions on Midway Plaisance. Here in their different villages are represented more than a score of nations. It will greatly profit one to spend a week at the Fair, but, if able, he should devote at least a fortnight to this the greatest of shows.

If after seeing the Fair one wishes to make a trip to the Rocky Mountains, he can do so at little expense by taking the Santa Fe route. He should return to North Carolina by taking the "Memphis Route" at Kansas City. This is unquestionably the best route between the South and West. The Richmond and Danville and the Kansas City, Fort Scott and Memphis railroads now run trains from Washington to Kansas City via Greensboro, Charlotte, Atlanta, Birmingham and Memphis in fifty-five hours. This route makes the best time and gives the lowest rates. The chair and sleeping cars are handsomely furnished, and the traveller enjoys every possible luxury. I am glad that so much of the travel between the North and the West is being diverted over this route. The South needs only to be seen to be appreciated. It has a good soil, a delightful climate, and rich mineral deposits. Its only need is capital, and that is being rapidly secured.

Jealousy.

The most disgusting of the many forms in which the infirmity of good people manifests itself is jealousy. It is not coarse and vulgar and brutal; it is just small. In religious and social circles this petty vice has peculiar scope. Men who would shrink from open violence or even incivility, do most impolite and silly things by indirection, the explanation of which is jealousy; both are utterly unmanly and absurd. To a large and noble nature, or one penetrated by Christian grace, they are impossible.—Christian Leader.

The Gift of the Knees.

All men and women of power are men and women of prayer. They have the gift of the knees. "Waiting on the Lord" by prayer has the same effect on them that it has on an empty bucket to set it under a rain-spout. They get filled. The time spent in waiting upon God is not wasted time. "I have so much to do," said Martin Luther, "that I cannot get on with less than two hours a day in praying." When I have heard Spurgeon pray, I have not been so astonished at some of his discourses. He had fed his lamp with oil from the King's vessels, and his sermons were full of light.—Dr. Cuyler.

A Rheumatic Victim.

A PROMINENT NORTH CAROLINA MERCHANT RENDERED HELPLESS—WEIGHT REDUCED SEVENTY POUNDS—HIS DEATH REGARDED AS ONLY A MATTER OF TIME—OPIATES NECESSARY TO ALLOW HIM A MOMENT'S EASE FROM PAIN.

J. J. ROGERS & Co.,
Grocers and General Merchants,
APEX, N. C., June 6th, 1893.

ATLANTIC ELECTROPOISE COMPANY,
Washington, D. C.

Gentlemen:—When I purchased an Electropoise from you last January, you wrote me that you hoped to hear from me as to results. I have waited till now that I might satisfy myself that the cure was permanent and not a mere "patch up."

Early in the fall of 1892 I was taken with rheumatism, which soon took possession of my limbs. For several months I was confined to my bed and room, suffering more than I can tell. I had the best medical skill. I then employed the remedies of a specialist, all to no avail. I grew worse daily until for several weeks I did not sleep only under the influence of opiates. I could eat but little. I was reduced in flesh from 170 to 100 pounds. I regarded my life only as a matter of a few weeks. The Electropoise was applied at 9 o'clock p. m., Jan. 10th. The first effect was relief from pain, followed by refreshing sleep. My improvement commenced from that very moment.

As recommended, I stopped all medicines. On Jan. 25th I walked without aid and weighed 113 pounds with overcoat on. One week from that day I weighed 124 pounds. One week more, 133. I now weigh my usual weight and am as well, so far as I know, as I ever was in my life. I feel sure that my general health has also been greatly benefitted.

I have used it on other members of my family with great satisfaction. I would not sell mine for $10,000 if I could not get another. Very truly yours,

J. J. ROGERS

Personal Responsibility.

There is no lesson that needs emphasizing more earnestly in our own time than that of personal responsibility. One of the fruits of our tendency to congregate in cities, and to do business in corporations, is the loss of the sense of personal, individual accountability to God. The director or trustee will do a deed of selfishness or cruelty in his corporate capacity which as a man and a neighbor he would scorn. How many characters are ruined that way! But when God keeps accounts with us, it is not as firms or trusts, but as individuals. God does not regard us in the mass but as individuals. God not only chisels out mountains, but he paints flowers and butterflies, and cheers the hearts of mountain squirrels, and tunes the voices of tiny warblers. We are not the creatures of circumstances over which we have no control. There is never a sin we fall into that we could not have escaped. There is never a temptation into which we fall but that we see afterwards how we might have resisted it. It has been our own fault, and no plea of the power of circumstances will avail us with God who sees us as individuals. We have a will given us, strong and indomitable, which, if sustained by prayer to God, will override the most adverse circumstances and make them stepping-stones in the heavenly race. No adult person is in any sense a creature of chance; we are rather, each of us, the sum total of causes we ourselves have set in motion. When a man against great obstacles forces his way to become an orator, or a great general, or a renowned financier, we say he is a self-made man; but it is just as true that the great drunkard, the great liar, the great libertine, the great fool, are all self-made men. Let us not deceive ourselves. We, and not some one else, are responsible to Almighty God for our conduct, and we will have to give an account for it.—Dr. L. A. Banks, in "Common Folks' Religion."

Good and Bad Mothers.

On this subject Amelia E. Barr writes in the North American Review:

"The difference between good and bad mothers is so vast and so far-reaching that it is no exaggeration to say that the good mothers of this generation are building the homes of the next generation, and that the bad mothers are building the prisons. For out of families nations are made; and if the father be head or the hands of a family, the mother is the heart. No office in the world is so honorable as hers, no priesthood so holy, no influence so sweet and strong and lasting.

"How to manage young children, how to strengthen them physically; how best to awaken their intellects, engage their affections and win their confidence; how to make home the sweetest spot on earth, a place of love, order and repose, a temple of purity where innocence is respected, and where no one is permitted to talk of indecent subjects or to read indecent books; these are the duties of a good mother; and her position, if so filled, is one of dignity and grave importance. For it is on the hearthstone she gives fine healthy initial touch to her sons and daughters that is not effaced through life, and that makes them blessed in their generation."

In Japan a physician never thinks of asking a fee from a poor patient. A proverb among the medical fraternity of that land runs thus: "When the twin enemies, poverty and disease, invade a home, he who takes aught from that home, even though it be given to him, is a robber."—Standard.

His Grace Sufficient.

"I told my people the other morning, when preaching from the text, 'My grace is sufficient for thee,' that for the first time in my life I experienced what Abraham felt when he fell upon his face and laughed. I was riding home, very weary with a long week's work, when there came to my mind this text: 'My grace is sufficient for thee'; but it came with the emphasis laid upon two words: 'My grace is sufficient for thee.' My soul said: 'Doubtless it is. Surely the grace of the infinite God is more than sufficient for such a mere insect as I am,' and I laughed and laughed again to think how far the supply exceeded all my needs. It seemed to me as though I were a little fish in the sea, and in my thirst I had said: 'Alas! I shall drink up the ocean.' Then the Father of the waters lifted up his head sublime, and smilingly replied: 'Little fish, the boundless main is sufficient for thee.' The thought made unbelief appear supremely ridiculous, as indeed it is."—Spurgeon.

Destitution in Texas.

Texas is one of the widest and most hopeful mission fields in America. Bro. J. M. Carroll, Corresponding Secretary of the State Mission Board, furnishes the following facts: There are seventy-two counties, one-third of the State's territory, without a resident Baptist minister, and some parts of this territory are among the most populous in Texas. There are fifty-one counties without a Baptist church, and some large associations have not even one self-sustaining church in them. At this time the State Board has seventy-seven missionaries actively engaged, and sometimes during the year there are more than these, and yet at least one hundred other destitute fields are appealing for help. He thinks that there is probably more destitution—where help is now needed—in Texas than in all the other parts of the Southern Baptist Convention combined. Of the 2,400 Baptist churches in the State, over 1,500 are without houses of worship, and there can be but little hope of mission and Sunday school work until these churches can secure houses of worship of their own. Not more than one in twenty-five of these have Sunday schools.—Religious Herald.

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that we can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Brazil.

The name given to this country at first was Terra Santa Cruz (Land of the Holy Cross.) The cross is worshipped but not the Christ. When shall the true doctrine of the cross be preached all over Brazil? It is a land where God has done much and man very little. God gave it beautiful scenery, a pleasant climate and abundant productions. Man made it a priest-ridden country, and sunk its people in such ignorance that they had not the knowledge required to call forth the productions of a land "waiting to be gracious."

Rio de Janeiro, the capital of Brazil, is situated on a large bay, which is justly said to rival the Bay of Naples in beauty. It has a population of 400,000, and is in many respects like a European city, with a large class of cultivated, intelligent, liberal men, who are friends of education and progress.

Stationed here are S. L. Ginsburg, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Taylor. Mr. T. T. Martin is under appointment and will sail soon. Miss Emma Morton is in this country at present, as are also Mr. and Mrs. Bagby.

BAHIA.

Bahia is on the sea coast, 700 miles northeast of Rio de Janerio, on a bluff overlooking a bay which forms one of the finest harbors in South America. It is the oldest city of Brazil, and the second in size. It has a population of over 200,000. Mr. and Mrs. Z. C. Taylor and Miss S. E. Johnson are our missionaries here. Miss Johnson has rendered valiant service since the first day of her arrival. She immediately took charge of the music, and shortly afterwards began teaching the children's class in Sunday-school.

MINAS GERAES.

It is one of the largest provinces of Brazil, being nearly equal in size to France. It has a clear, bracing climate, and boasts a people among the most energetic and intelligent of all Brazil. It embraces the gold and diamond districts, and has much undeveloped wealth.

Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Soper and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Downing are in charge of this station, with native assistants.

PERNAMBUCO.

The beautiful city of Pernambuco is called the "Venice of Brazil." It has 175,000 inhabitants. Bro. Entzminger and wife are already meeting with much success there, with a native helper.

NEEDS OF OTHER STATIONS.

Campos and Nictheroy each needs a worker. More men to occupy prominent places in the great interior of Bahia and Minas Geraes, several chapels are needed in Rio, Campos, Pernambuco, Maceio, Valenca, Alongonitos, Juiz de Fora, etc. Another larger press to make our printing office self-sustaining, a school in each of the three missions, medical missionaries and dispensaries, and trained lady missionaries, are also needed.

AREA OF BRAZIL.

The area of Brazil is 261,906 square miles larger than the United States. It comprises one-half of South America, one fifteenth part of the terrestrial globe. It has a seaboard of 4,000 miles. There are twenty States, all of which border on the Atlantic, except four; these last four are nearly twice the size of all the other sixteen. Brazil is wide at the North, diminishing irregularly to a point at the South, and is naturally divided into three characteristic districts, viz: the Amazon, the Plata, and the Eastern.

THE FAMILY.

The family—the fountain of the social and public weal—is at a low ebb. One-half of the population is born out of wedlock. The marriage vow is little respected. Girls who have property, as a rule, marry early; among the poor, marriage is the exception. Young men and ladies are not allowed vis-a-vis conversations, marriage being effected through parents and others. The priests, having had a monopoly of celebrating marriage, were so exorbitant in their charges as to force the poor to live together unmarried, and so have brought marriage into disrepute, they themselves often living in open concubinage. Under the Republic the priests will not have a monopoly of marriage fees, as marriage is now a civil contract which may be entered into without the aid of a priest.

Wine and rum drinking, smoking, snuff-taking and gambling are general. The laws are tolerably good, but there is not moral force enough to execute them. Lotteries are carried on to a fearful extent; thousands expecting to get rich by their tickets live in idleness and want.

In the United States the father regards it as a happy occurrence when he meets a minister of the gospel, or a gentlemen friend, who happens to be taking the same train for the same town or city to which his daughter is going. He places his daughter in the hands or care of such with the fullest confidence. Not so in Brazil. The minister of the church of Rome is the last man a father would choose as the escort and protector of his daughter. The whole of society in Brazil is corrupt.

CONTRIBUTIONS OF NATIVE CHURCHES.

Rev. John R. Sampey says: "The contributions of the native churches for the support of the gospel among themselves have been liberal, and they have also done much for the spread of the gospel throughout the world. Both in Bahia and Rio Janerio the figures show that the members have given as much as eight dollars per capita in one year. This is remarkable giving for poor people, and most of the early converts came from the middle and lower classes.

"We cannot now plead that the country is closed against missionaries. The door to every State in the Republic is wide open. The revolution of 1889 broke the political power of the Roman Catholic church. The arm of the civil power is no longer subject to the call of a fanatical priesthood. The Liberal party looks upon Protestants as friends of liberty. Baptists have never before had such a favorable opportunity for pushing their work in Brazil. Who will go?"

A PERSONAL THOUGHT.

In Brazil, as in almost every country on the face of his earth, God has opened the way for his gospel. "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things."

Are we shod all right? Are we going, or sending, or giving, or praying? Let us look to our feet, if we are not shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, we have not the whole armor. And if we have not the whole armor, can we pray that our missionaries may be able to open their mouths boldly to "make known the mysteries of the gospel?"

A Strong Endorsement.

The St. Louis Trade Review and Export Journal in its issue of February 7th, 1893, has this to say:

EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.

One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Caroline, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1858. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches, and carry in stock a fine line of stationery, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, posters, circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

Words of Aporeciation.

Dear Recorder:—On the eve of leaving the noble-hearted people of Goldsboro for the new field of labor to which I feel that the Lord has called me, I want to say a word in appreciation of the faithfulness with which they have aided me in the work of this important field. Through joys and sorrows they have stood by me, and largely through their prayers and labors, I look back upon the past several years as the most fruitful period of my ministry. It has been my privilege to receive and baptize several persons recently, and it is a cause for grateful praise that an ever brightening future lies before the church.

I urged the membership to proceed at once to the choice of a new pastor, so that the interval might be as short as possible. A unanimous call was recently extended to Rev. C. A. Jenkens of Oxford, and he has signified his acceptance. It is a joy to me to feel that in going away, I can see the work already committed to one of our most gifted and consecrated men, in every way qualified to carry it forward. May the Lord abundantly bless him in the new relation upon which he enters.

May the Lord keep this dear people in the hollow of his hand, and gather us one and all at last to the general assembly and church of the first born, whose names are written in heaven.

France and Siam are about to engage in a war that threatens all Europe. The French government has demanded a large indemnity and a cession of territory from Siam, which is the cause of the hostilities. Later: The Siamese government has accepted the full terms of the French ultimatum, and it is now anticipated that an early settlement of the troubles will be effected.

A New York Miracle.

A REMARKABLE AFFIDAVIT MADE BY A WELL-KNOWN BUSINESS MAN.

AFFLICTED WITH LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA FOR FIFTEEN YEARS—DID NOT WALK A STEP FOR FIVE YEARS—WAS GIVEN UP BY THE LEADING PHYSICIANS OF NEW YORK CITY AND DISCHARGED FROM THE MANHATTEN HOSPITAL AS INCURABLE.

(From the New York Tribune.)

For some time there has been an increasing number of stories published in the newspapers of New York City, telling of marvelous cures of various diseases that have been made by different medicines and treatments. It has long been the intention of the Tribune to investigate one of the most interesting cases that could be found and give the truth to the world as a matter of news. Happening on the case of Geo. L'Hommedieu, the other day an investigation was made with the following very happy result:

When the reporter called on Mr. L'Hommedieu at the residence of his cousin, Mr. Edward Houghtaling, 271 W. 134th St., he said: "I am fifty one years of age and was born in Hudson, N. Y. I served my time in the army, being corporal of Company A, twenty first N. J. Volunteers. It has been about fifteen years since I noticed the first symptoms of my disease. I consulted Dr. Allen of Yorkville, and also Dr. Pratt, since deceased. "Dr. Pratt exhausted his powers in my behalf and finally told me that he could do nothing more for me.

"Finally I was advised by Dr. Gill to go to the well known scientist, Dr. Hamilton. He gave me a most thorough examination and did me no good. I felt I was growing weaker every day, and went to the Manhattan Hospital, at 41st St. and Park Avenue, and was under treatment by Dr. Seguin. He treated me for about three months, and then, told me that I had locomotor ataxia and was beyond the aid of medical science. I was now a complete physical wreck; all power, feeling and color had left my legs, and it was impossible for me to feel the most severe pinch or even the thrust of a needle.

"If my skin was scratched there would be no flow of blood whatever, and it would take it full six weeks to heal up. In the night I would have to feel around to find my legs. My pains were excruciating and at times almost unbearable. I would take large doses of morphine to deaden the pains. About five years ago Dr. Lewis A. Sayre of 285 5th Avenue, made a trial of the French method of stretching the spine. Although I received no benefit from this treatment I shall always feel grateful to Dr. Sayre for his great interest and kindness.

"So severe had my case become by this time that I could not walk without assistance, and was almost ready to give up life.

"I began the use of Pink Pills for Pale People in September last. I took them rather irregularly at first with the cold water treatment. In a very short time I was convinced that I was getting better and I began the use of the pills in earnest, taking about one box every five days.

"The first sign of improvement was in November 1892, when I had a rush of blood to the head and feet causing a stinging and prickling sensation. February 22d, 1893, was the first time in five years I had ever seen any sign of blood in my feet. From this time on I began to improve. My strength and appetite have gradually returned; I now have perfect control of my bowels, and the pains have gradually left me. I can sit and write by the hour and walk up stairs by balancing myself with my hands. Without doubt I am a new man from the ground up, and I have every reason to believe that I will be hale and hearty in less than six months. I have taken about twelve boxes of pills."

Sworn to before me this eleventh day of March, 1893. H. E. MELVILLE,
Commissioner of Deeds,
[SEAL.] New York City.

The reporter next called on Mr. Robert W. Smith, a member of the firm of Marchal & Smith, who said:

"I have known Mr. Geo. L'Hommedieu for twenty years. He became connected with our firm as secretary in 1879, and attended strictly to his office duties until 1881, when he was stricken down with his trouble. As the disease advanced he was obliged to succumb and reluctantly gave up his office work. I know that he tried various physicians and their treatments without the least success, and, as he states, he was finally discharged from the Manhattan Hospital, and told that he was in the last stages of locomotor ataxia and was beyond the hope of human aid. About six months ago, or so, he was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, with the cold water-treatment. The last time I saw Mr. L'Hommedieu he had gained the use of his limbs to such an extent that he could walk up stairs with the help of his wife, and is now doing much important work for us at his home.

ROBERT W. SMITH."

Sworn to and subscribed before me this eleventh day of March, 1893.
[SEAL.] W. H. WOODHULL,
Notary Public, New York County.

An analysis of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills show that they contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, and all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., or Brockville, Ontario.

DIED.

BAKER—Minnie Baker, daughter of Bro. T. M. and Sister F. Baker, died July 18th, 1893, in the twenty-first year of her age. She was a member of the Friendship Baptist church, and was a helper in all the work of the church. She died happy in the Lord, and asked all present to meet her in heaven. Her gentleness of disposition made all who knew her her friends. R. W. CREWS.
Germanton, N. C.

PARRISH—Mrs. Emily Parrish, wife of Woodson Parrish, died in Nash county, near Nashville, July 23d, of typhoid fever. She was a member of Cedar Rock Baptist church. She had been married forty-one years, and was the mother of sixteen children, thirteen of whom are now living. She was sixty years of age. She was a good mother. Her place cannot be filled in the hearts of her children and husband who survive her. F. P.

HICKS—Miss Eliza Hicks of Wake Forest died suddenly on July 14th, at 9 p. m. The deceased was a consistent member of the church. With a heart full of sympathy she was always ready to relieve the suffering and to comfort the sorrowing. She had charity for all, and a kind word for every one. Her spotless life has been, and will ever be, a benediction to all who knew her. For a long time she had been expecting the summons, and often said she was only waiting the Lord's time, and was ready to go whenever he might call. How peaceful the close of such a beautiful life. She will be greatly missed by every one on the Hill. But all know that it is well with her. W. R. G.

FARMER—Died, at Rich Square, on June 3d, Bro. Henry Farmer, in his sixty-second year. He had been a great sufferer for years from rheumatism, but died from a severe attack of dysentery. He was a man of sterling integrity, of simple and devout faith and an attached member of the Baptist church. He leaves a wife and two little daughters to mourn their loss—a loss which is felt by the whole community, and not least by the little church in which he was a willing helper. His funeral was preached on June 4th by his pastor, Rev. A. Cree, in the Baptist church, to a deeply sympathetic congregation. A brave soldier in the civil war, he appeared to us being also a good and devout soldier of Jesus Christ, and having fought the good fight our trust is that he has now received the crown.

SMITH—Sister Bettie E. Smith, beloved wife of Wallace Smith, departed this life at the home of her mother in Vance county, N. C., on July 10th, 1893, in the eighteenth year of her age. Sister Smith professed faith in Christ when thirteen years old, and joined Sulphur Spring Baptist church, and has been a faithful member ever since, and died rejoicing in a Saviour's love. Sister Smith's illness was long and very severe, but God saw fit within his infinite mercy to relieve her suffering. She will be greatly missed by her church, and especially by her family and friends. She leaves a mother, one brother, eight sisters, and a young husband, to mourn their loss. May God comfort the bereaved family, and especially the bereaved husband, and may he feel and realize that his loss is her eternal gain; and may he so live that when he is called to die he can say that he is going to join his fair young wife in heaven, where parting is no more. God help him in his sore bereavement, and may he look to the Lord in his troubles and feel that separation here is only for a short time, and that union in heaven means union forever. A. E. M.

ROGERS—On July 5th, 1893, sister Elizabeth Ann Rogers, widow of Bro. Frank Rogers, in the seventy-fifth year of her age. In early life she professed faith in Christ, and through her long life was an earnest, zealous Christian. She was a member of Middle Swamp Baptist church, Gates county, N. C. When, a few years ago, sister Fannie Knight went to China, I heard Sister Rogers say, "If I were only young, I, too, would be a missionary."

Last September she had a fall, from the effects of which she never recovered, having to go on crutches the remainder of life. But amid all her trials she seemed to manifest a beautiful spirit of resignation. In a letter to the writer of this notice, written the day before her death, she said, "Yes, my dear brother, my affliction has been a great teacher to me. I thank God for it, and for all his afflictions." And again, "I feel as if I haven't very much longer to stay here, and I do want to see you before I am called away to rest. Come and spend a long evening with me. I want to talk about heavenly things. . . Don't let it be very long before you come. You know death is sudden sometimes."

That very evening she had something like a stroke of paralysis, and the next morning passed away to rest. The summons, though sudden, was, we see, not unexpected, but found her waiting and watching for her Lord, ready to depart and be with Christ.

W. B. WAFF.

VANN—Miss Lula Vann departed this life at Rich Square, Northampton county, on July 7th, in the twentieth year of her age. In the full bloom of youth and beauty, her education just lately finished, and universally beloved as she was, her death was most touching. In the words of the poet, "Death lay on her like an untimely frost upon the sweetest flower in all the field." The Master had another and higher sphere of duty for her. Amiable and beautiful in person, she was still more beautiful in character. She was about twelve years of age when she professed religion, and was baptized by Rev. Joshua Fleetwood. Her illness was brief—some ten days—and she died in the blessed assurance of the nearness and fullness of the heavenly life through Christ, bidding her family and friends loving farewell in the expressed prospect of meeting them again in the heavenly home. Her character is thus drawn by Prof. Stallings of High Point in a letter to her bereaved father, "We have had some excellent girls in our family as pupils, but have never had one to surpass in gentleness, goodness, unselfishness and devotion to principle and duty your sweet-sainted Lula. O how great the loss to you, to us, to the world, but how great her gain!" Her funeral was preached by her pastor, Rev. A. Cree, in the Baptist church, on July 8th, amidst every manifestation of sorrow and loss by a large circle.

The Home Circle.

The Angel of Patience.

To weary hearts, to mourning homes,
God's meekest angel gently comes;
No power has he to banish pain,
Or give us back our lost again.
And yet in tenderest love our dear
And heavenly Father sends him here.

There's quiet in that angel's glance,
There's rest in his still countenance!
He mocks no grief with idle cheer,
Nor wounds with words the mourner's ear;
But fills and woes he may not cure
He kindly trains us to endure.

Angel of Patience! sent to calm
Our feverish brows with cooling palm;
To lay the storms of hope and fear,
And reconcile life's smile and tear;
The throbs of wounded pride to still,
And make our own our Father's will.

Oh, thou who mournest on thy way,
With longings for the close of day;
He walks with thee, that angel kind,
And gently whispers, "Be resigned;
Bear up, bear on, the end shall tell
The dear Lord ordereth all things well."

—John Greenleaf Whittier.

All Good Work has Place.

"Oh, dear!" sighed Hester Bland. "I feel so discouraged. It isn't worth while to try; one can't accomplish anything, anyway, that's worth anybody's notice."

"If one could only do something that would seem worth while," she persued. "See what Florence Nightingale and Elizabeth Prentiss accomplished! Their praises are being rung even now, after they are dead and gone. If one could do important work like that, work that would attract notice and that somebody would care for, it would seem worth while to try. Oh, I wish I could found a great school, or write a popular book, or do something of that kind! But here I am, compelled to live in this small cockleshell of a house, with nothing but humdrum work to do from morning till night; and—and, worst of all, I'm afraid I'm not capable of doing anything better. Oh, oh, it's too disheartening!" And the poor girl laid her head on the stand before her and wept the bitterest tears of her life.

As Hester sat brooding over her troubles, the dusk deepend into darkness. Suddenly, the silence was broken by a familiar voice calling her from the foot of the stairs:

"Hester, are you ready? It is almost time to go to the missionary meeting."

"I don't believe I'll go to-night, mother," Hester replied.

"Why not, daughter?" asked her mother, hurrying up the stairway to Hester's room. "Why, you have been crying, dear! What has gone wrong?"

"Oh, nothing especially, only I feel so discouraged, mother," the girl returned, gloomily. And then, after some persuasion, she told her mother frankly what was the cause of her depression, and how she felt that she was handicapped by her narrow surroundings, and, more than all, by her inability to do something greater.

"It isn't always the work that seems greatest in men's eyes that is really greatest in the eyes of God," said Mrs. Bland, after listening to Hester's complaint. "Remember that he often chooses the weak things of this world to confound the mighty. Come with me to the meeting, dear; you may hear something that will lift this burden from your mind."

Sure enough, the mother's prophesy came true. Hester went to the meeting, though a little reluctantly. She listened to a number of addresses, which, however good in themselves, failed to buoy her despondency, and she was just beginning to feel that there was not much of a tonic in missionary meetings, when a young lady of nearly her own age was called forward to recite a poem. She spoke modestly, but every tone was clear and ringing, and the sentiment went to Hester's heart.

The poem told in beautiful lines the legend of a king in the East who planned to build a temple like the temple of Solomon. The temple was built in a very costly manner, and adorned with gold and gems, but there was one lack—no painted windows could be found that pleased the monarch's eye. So he sent forth a proclamation far and wide, offering a great reward to the artist who should make the most artistic window for the temple.

The most skillful artists from all parts of his wide dominions came to compete for the prize. They wrought with unrelaxing care until, as they thought, every window was done and lifted to its place. But they had miscalculated, for there was still a vacant space in which no window had been set. There was no time either to make or to purchase one; the king would soon be here. What was to be done? There was intense excitement among all the artists.

Suddenly, some one remembered a poor workman who had timidly begged the broken pieces of glass that had been thrown away, and had, by patient cutting of these fragments, made a patchwork window, composed of many hued figures, of all shapes and sizes. It had often been jeered at by the other workmen, while the artists smiled at it in a superior way. But now, as the king was so near at hand, it must be used; and so it was placed in its carved frame, the artists hoping that, quaint and uncouth though it was, it would pass unnoticed.

Then the king came. He entered the temple amid the shouts of the people, and looked about him. Then he suddenly paused before the patchwork window. The setting sun was just shining upon it; its beams were caught and refracted by the criss-cross tracing and the parti-hued crystals, throwing "a hundred brilliant rainbows on the tasselated floor." The whole temple was filled with [illegible], and all the people bowed in silence, [illegible] seemed that the Lord himself was [illegible] by.

The poem closed with a few beautiful lines of encouragement to the humble worker:

"For we know that in God's temple, all our Work shall find a place,
Though we mourn because our neighbors
Build with greater power and grace."

When the speaker had finished her recitation, Hester Bland's face had become radiant; the clouds had all disappeared from her brow, and the glad tears glistened in her eyes. The poem contained the precise lesson she had needed to learn.

"Mother," she whispered, on the way home, "I am so glad I went to the meeting. The beautiful poem has taught me to be content, even if my life seems to be nothing but patchwork."

"God will help you to make it beautiful, dear," her mother replied.—Leander S Keyser, in Our Young People.

Some Familiar Phrases.

There are numerous phrases which one hears every day that have been handed down from one generation to another for hundreds of years, and in many instances they can be traced to a quaint and curious origin.

There have been various origins assigned to the phrase "a baker's dozen," signifying thirteen, but there is only one that can be regarded as authentic. Formerly in London when a small retail dealer bought bread of the baker, for every dozen loaves purchased he was given an extra loaf as his profit, from which circumstance comes "a baker's dozen."

In a volume of essays written by an English author, in 1815, there is the story of a boy who, by the offer of liberal compensation, was induced to turn the grind-stone for a man who desired to sharpen his axe.

The promised compensation was never paid, and of one who disguises his own selfish aims, under an appearance of generosity or disinterestedness, it is remarked, "He has an axe to grind."

"Done to a turn" suggests the story of St. Lawrence, who, while suffering torture by fire, requested the attendants to turn him over, as he was thoroughly roasted on one side. Hence the phrase, "Done to a turn."

Dido, Queen of Tyre, about seven centuries before Christ, after her husband had been put to death by her brother, fled from that city and established a colony on the north coast of Africa. Having bargained with the natives for as much land as could be surrounded with a bull's hide, she cut the hide into narrow strips, tied them together, and claimed the land that could be surrounded with the line thus made. She was allowed to have her way; and now, when one plays a sharp trick, he is said to "cut a dido."

During a battle between the Russians and Tartars, a private soldier of the former cried out, "Captain, I've caught a Tartar!" "Bring him along," said the officer. "He won't let me!" was the response. Investigation proved that the captive had the captor by the arm and would not allow him to move. So "Catching a Tartar" is applicable to one who has found an antagonist too powerful for him.—The Examiner.

How to be a Good Visitor.

Many of you girls and boys have been invited to make visits among your friends during the vacation. It is quite an accomplishment to be a good visitor; by that I mean a guest who makes no unnecessary trouble or care in a house.

The first thing to do is to conform to the rules and ways of the household. If an early breakfast is the habit, be sure to have some one to call you in time, if you cannot wake up yourself. It hinders work to have guests come down to the morning meal after the family have finished, especially in farm-houses. You may not think it much trouble to keep your breakfast standing awhile, but it is, nevertheless. Always do what you can in the way of assisting about work, especially in places where the family do their own work. There are many things that you can do that are really very helpful. Picking fruit and looking it over, shelling peas, stringing beans, and such like work which takes time, when those who have a great deal to do are obliged to stop their more necessary work to do that of minor importance.

You boys can always see where you can save steps, time and strength for elders. On a farm there are a great many light "chores" to do which really are a great help to the tired men at night.—Selected.

Face and Figure
show it, if you're a healthy woman. They'll have a beauty of their own, no matter what your features. Perfect health, with its clear skin, rosy cheeks and bright eyes, is enough to make any woman attractive.
To get perfect health, use faithfully Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. That regulates and promotes all the proper functions of womanhood, improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health, flesh and strength.
For periodical pains, prolapsus and other displacements, bearing-down sensations, and "female complaints" generally, it is so effective that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back. Is anything that isn't sold in this way likely to be "just as good?"

Always make the best use of your mistakes, by learning therefrom to do better afterwards.

About Mending.

One day out of every week should be set aside for mending in every well-regulated household, and it will be surprising how little time it will take to do the work in this way, while if left over for several weeks it will accumulate until the busy housewife will find it quite an undertaking. Torn places in dresses or woollen goods should be carefully basted on paper and held together, then darned neatly with ravellings or thread the same shade as the goods. Articles that do not have to be washed may be neatly repaired by rubbing a little mucilage on a piece of the goods and pressing it down with a hot iron. While some women neglect this very useful household art, others go to the other extreme and waste much time on articles that are not worth the labor and thread spent on them; but as much depends on circumstances as to the value of the time and the needs of the household, no directions that will suit every one can be given, and the sensible housewife must decide what to mend and what not to mend for herself; but that it is best to save time by doing it in season goes without saying.—Selected.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE is in store for you when you buy Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. If you ever took the ordinary liver pill, big and bulky, nasty too, you'd appreciate a good thing, especially when it is sugar-coated, tiny as a mustard seed but very effective. Other things being equal, the smallest is the best in liver pills—hence, "Pleasant Pellets."
If you are troubled with Indigestion, Constipation, Biliousness, Bilious Headaches, and a hundred and one ills which depend upon an inactive liver,—use Dr. Pierce's Pellets. With these pills you get not only temporary relief but a positive cure; they're guaranteed to give satisfaction or your money is returned.
For fat people who suffer from indigestion, for hearty eaters and high livers—those whose livers are sluggish, this pill is what is most needed. Take a Pill after dinner.

ON THE 7th inst. Congress convened in extraordinary session, which will most probably be extended into the regular term, and not adjourn for ten months. The two momentous questions which will engage its attention for most of the time are those of finance and the tariff. Its immediate object is the relief of the present financial stringency. What will be the outcome of its legislation could easily be predicted were our political parties more compact in their organization, and the representatives of these parties more faithful to their pledges. The Democratic party has control of the two necessary departments of our government, legislative and executive, and it is only natural to expect that this party will enact legislation as promised in the Chicago platform of June, 1892, which the people so overwhelmingly endorsed in November following. That is no more and no less than the people should ask. Whether it will fulfill its promises is not our part to say, but we can state that if it proves false to the people in this trying crisis, it has commanded their support for the last time. We would not attempt to solve the problem for the legislators—too many are thus engaged already—but we have simply taken this occasion to remind them that the people are watching them, and that the people desire relief, and must have it sooner or later; and whether by means of the Democratic party, must be determined by that party within the next few months. It is an opportunity which is seldom presented to a political organization—which improved will perpetuate the party, and which disregarded cannot but result in complete and deserved annihilation of the party. This much: We must have legislation for a more substantial object than confidence.

THE universal law of the survival of the fittest was never more strikingly exemplified than in the very recent action between France and Siam. For no other reason than that she was the more powerful, and wanted certain districts of Siam, France has demanded and secured by threats of war 100,000 acres of Siam's most fertile soil, reducing the revenue of that nation one half. The question of right received no consideration; it was altogether one of greed and might. And so it was when the Roman legions drove the barbarians from Europe and effected that grand civilization; and so it was when the white man drove the Indian from his home and made our powerful Union possible. So it has always been. 'Might makes right; the fittest survive," is the universal law of nations as well as of the lower animals. There is no doubt but that this property recently acquired by France will be far more valuable in the French government's charge, and it does seem that barbarians should not own the earth when by so doing they hinder its progress; we know that the savage mind must give way before the superior light of intelligence and civilization, but there is a difference in this last case. Siam has a ruler that bids fair to increase his nation's power and his people's position—they are not savages, but on the other hand are well-governed, and there is something manly, honest, and straight forward in the King's last appeal to France, in which he recognizes his own weakness, and resolves to endure injustice and hardship rather than involve his people in hopeless war, that tells us that he knows as much of the ethics of nations as does the French ministry. Our sympathy is with the weak, and we yet hope that a jealousy may arise among the other nations that will enable Siam to take care of itself while those great "fabrics of civilization" are disputing as to which shall make the next steal from the weak or friendless nation.

WHILE our country is engaged in an all-pervading wrangle over the money question, England is having a contest no less severe in the Home Rule for Ireland discussion, lead by Gladstone for, and Chamberlain against. It has passed the committee of the whole after a three months' struggle, and will reach and pass the commons in the course of a few days. But this doesn't make it a law; it must pass a third ordeal of the Lords, which is practically impossible, and Ireland will be without home rule for many more months, possibly forever; for before the bill can become a law it must go before the people again, another general election must be held, and so many commoners, who favor its passage, must be elected, that the Lords will fear to fly in the face of so strong a popular verdict. So it must go through the process of the last year over again before Ireland can enjoy its benefits, and that it can live through such a test is extremely doubtful, in view of the fact that the Irish representatives are already sorely divided, and Gladstone's majority is threatened. More than this, Gladstone is very old, and liable to die at any time, and there is no man living who can pass the bill except the "grand old man." Ireland's sky is still dark.

THE agitation of the question of the improvement of our country roads has at last reached the people, and is fast becoming of vital interest throughout the country. In the next few weeks the National League for Good Roads will hold a congress in Chicago, where it is intended that the ways and means of improving our roads shall be discussed by the ablest engineers. Our country roads are of as much importance to our commerce as the great railway and steamship lines, and we shall rejoice to see the day when they are paid the attention by our government that they deserve. For years and years money has been appropriated to widen and dredge our water ways, and we can see no reason why equal attention should not be paid to the maintenance of our more important public roads, which are of far greater commercial worth. We were glad to see a course of instruction in road-making established at Wake Forest last June. Such practical moves cannot but redound to the credit and success of the College, and in the end are of far more worth to humanity than many of the higher and much sought-after branches.

The Young Man Absalom, or, Perils Imminent to Young Men.

PREACHED BY THE LATE REV. A. W. PRICE IN THE BAPTIST CHURCH IN WADESBORO—THE LAST SERMON OF HIS LIFE.

Text—"And they took Absalom and cast him into a great pit in the wood, and laid a very great heap of stones upon him; and all Israel fled every one to his tent. Now Absalom in his life-time had taken and reared up for himself a pillar which is in the king's dale: for he said, I have no son to keep my name in remembrance: and he called the pillar after his own name; and it is called unto this day, Absalom's place." 2 Samuel 18: 17, 18.

When a child is born into this world, who can prophecy its history or declare its destiny? Every infant is a prophecy, but a prophecy as obscure and undecipherable as an ancient oracle. It is either an embryo angel or an embryo devil; but which it is time only, and in some instances eternity only, will disclose.

How frequently parental expectation entertained so fondly at the birth and during the infancy and early years of a child are blighted by the subsequent career of that child! Thousand of years ago the glad tidings echoed through the royal palace in Jerusalem that a man child was born. Who can tell the fond hopes and expectations that thrilled the hearts of the parents when the event occurred? We only have an intimation of what their hopes were by the name they gave him. They called him "Absalom," which means "father of peace." They expected in him to have a prince of peace, but alas! how bitterly they were disappointed. He proved to be the father of discord, the author of strife and insurrection. My dear young friend, your name may not indicate the parental hopes so fondly entertained in your infancy, and yet you can imagine what those expectations were. How they expected that you would grow up an honest, thrifty, pious boy; that you would be the charm of their home and the pride of their life; that you would be successful and useful through life, and at last die in the triumphs of an holy faith. Young men, have you thus far met those expectations? O, blight not your parents' fond hopes! Bring not their gray hairs in sorrow to the grave!

But if Absalom in his career and destiny disappointed parental expectations, how much more so did he disappoint his own! "Now Absalom in his life-time had taken and reared up for himself a pillar in the king's dale; for he said, I have no son to keep my name in remembrance: and he called the pillar after his own name, and it is called unto this day, Absalom's place." This is what he expected, this what he laid out for himself—to be laid away with great honors and ceremonies beneath a magnificent monument which would tell to future generations of his achievements and fame. What did he realize? Let the record answer: "And they took Absalom and cast him into a great pit in the wood, and laid a very great heap of stones upon him."

Now, the question is, why this disparity between what this young man planned and what he realized? What was the secret of his failure? What forces conspired to work his temporal and eternal ruin. These are practical questions. These are appropriate questions. The same perils that confronted Absolom, the same forces that wrought his ruin, are the perils and forces which are confronting our young men to day. Human nature is the same in all ages. The forms of temptation may vary, the essence remains the same. And the forces which wrought the destruction of King David's handsome and gifted son are the same moral elements that are conspiring against our young men of the present generation. And allow me further to premise this: that while surroundings had a great deal to do with Absalom's unfortunate career and destiny, the essential forces that wrought his ruin were internal and self-evolved. And to-day, as much as we deplore the unwholesome surroundings of our young men, as much as we lament the impure moral atmosphere which they breathe, the real and most to-be-dreaded dangers which threaten them are internal not circumstantial. What were the causes that wrought Absalom's ruin?

I. The first element in his destruction was vanity in and misuse of his personal endowments. "But in all Israel there were none to be so much praised for his beauty as Absalom; from the sole of his foot even to the crown of his head there was no blemish in him. And when he polled his head (for it was every year's end that he polled it, because the hair was heavy on him, therefore he polled it), he weighed the hair of his head at two hundred shekels after the king's weight." This is but another way of saying that Absalom was a young man of rare personal endowments. This is but another way of saying that he was a fine specimen of physical young manhood. He had a sound body, a graceful form, a handsome face, and winsome manner. And these are no mean endowments. They are not to be despised nor depreciated. When properly directed, they are elements of successes. They made Absalom popular with the people, and that popularity he might have used as a lever to lift them up to higher lines. The power of these attractions may be seen in the way that he insinuated himself into the good graces of the people and stole their hearts from their rightful sovereign. Had these endowments been exerted to nobler ends, they might have lifted Absalom to the highest pinnacle of honorable success. But alas! they were prostituted to the base arts of the demagogue, became the instruments of treason, and the agents of impiety, so that which was his glory proved to be his everlasting shame.

Thus it is, young friends, that our noblest endowments may prove our greatest snares. This is true both of endowments of body and endowments of mind. Bodily strength is a glorious endowment. Without it, however brilliant and vigorous may be our mental power, we are to a great extent hampered all through life. The man with strong mind and frail body is like having a strong wagon with a weak horse to draw it. The Bible says: "The glory of a young man is his strength." And yet how easy it is for that which is his chief glory to become his chief snare. His strength may but furnish the fuel that feeds the fires of his carnal passions. His manhood may be prostituted to the lowest sensuality. And though, like Absalom, from the sole of his foot to the crown of his head, there is no blemish in him, yet that unblemished physique may be the medium of moral rottenness.

Even physical beauty which Absalom possessed in so marked a degree is an element of power. A well-proportioned body, a graceful carriage, a captivating voice, give us influence over our fellows, and for that reason should be appreciated and cultivated. At the same time they are susceptible to abuse and may prove a snare instead of a blessing. The winsome face and captivating voice may be used to sugar coat the demagogue's schemes and the libertine's designs as well as commend the reforms of the patriot and the entreaties of the Christian.

Our mental endowments constitute our chief distinction, yet perhaps also our chief snares. The old saying that "Knowledge is power" is true. But it may be a power for evil as well as for good. Fire is power. When rightly controlled, it cooks our food and heats our homes, and generates the steam which propels our locomotives and whirls our machinery. But when let loose on a prairie, it is a grim monster, the terror of man and beast. And so whether knowledge is power for good or evil depends entirely upon the principle that lies behind it. Hence it is that some men's greatest snares lie in their extraordinary mental capacity. They sometimes tempt to indolence upon the presumption that the man will succeed any how on the ground of their great capacity. And sometimes as in the case of Absalom, they tempt their possessor to chicanery and bold enterprises in guilt.

But personal endowments, whether physical or mental, become a snare whenever they lead to vanity in them or abuse of them. This was the case with Absalom. He was so much praised for his beauty and flattered of his endowments that it turned his head and made him giddy. They tempted him to a bold and godless enterprise which he dare not have undertaken but for the infatuation which they threw over him. He prided himself in his personal charms and especially in his luxuriant head of hair which he took so much pains to poll and to weigh, yet remarkable that by a retributive Providence that which was his greatest pride became the source of his greatest humiliation and the immediate occasion of his ignominious death. For on the day of battle when he fled for his life, these very locks which had been his charm, proved a halter which hanged him. How sad that strength and beauty should be turned to such bad account! How deplorable that God's gracious gifts should be prostituted to the purposes of godless ambition! As some one has put it, "No wonder that his hair turned traitor to him who turned traitor to his own father." That part which man uses to sin, God uses to revenge. The solemn warning in this history for young men is against vanity in and the misuse of the endowments which God has given you.

II. Another secret of Absalom's failure and destruction was the temptation to short cuts to success in life, to which he yielded. His ambition was to be king of Israel. This was a legitimate ambition. Had he waited the due course of time and nature, he would have succeeded to the throne in the honorable line of succession. If instead of for immediate kingship, his ambition had been for wise administration when he did ascend the throne, and had it, instead of prompting to usurpation, lead him to a conscientious preparation for the high and sacred functions to which he aspired, the results would not have been so disastrous. Ambition, when yoked to principle, is the lever by which we raise ourselves from the dead level of our fellowmen. And the danger, young man, is not that your ambition will be too strong, but, like Absalom's, it may be divorced from principle.

These short cuts to success are the Devil's pet schemes for destroying souls. He made this appeal to the only perfect young man that ever walked this earth. He took him up into an exceeding high mountain and showed him all the kingdoms of this world and the glory of them, and said, "All these things will I give thee if thou wilt fall down and worship me." Now that was an exceeding short-cut to success. It would dispense with all those long years of toil and suffering; it would do away with Calvary and Gethsemane and the sepulchre. But the young man resisted the appeal and plodded all along through the years of suffering, went through Gethsemane's dark solitude, went over Calvary's agonies and ignominies, went through the tomb and came out the other side with the kingdoms of the world at his feet, and standing on another mount in Galilee, he said, "All power is given to me in heaven and earth," and then ascended to the throne of universal dominion. The success was longer coming, but it was surer and more glorious. Something akin to this was what the Devil put before Absalom. The prospects were favorable to his being king at the decease of his father. But the time was too long, the process was too slow, the issues too uncertain for his restless ambition. And so he must take a short cut to his father's kingdom. He felt aggrieved at his father's treatment of him in reference to the assassination of his brother Amnon. He persuaded himself that he had been badly treated. The people were discontented with David's administration and were ripe for revolt, and he flattered himself that all he had to do was to take this tide at its flood and float to fortune and glory. So the short-cut method he pursues, but instead of success, he meets defeat; instead of honor he reaps disgrace; and instead of at last being buried under the pretentious monument, he had erected for himself in the king's dale, he is cast into a great pit in the wood and a very great heap of stones was laid upon him. And Jewish writers tell us that for centuries afterwards, every passer-by was accustomed to throw a stone on the heap which covered Absalom's remains, and, as he threw it, to say, "Cursed be the memory of rebellious Absalom, and cursed be forever all wicked children that rise up in rebellion against their parents."

Young men, the temptation to kingship does not confront you, because in this land monarchy is impracticable; but the one great temptation before young men to day is to plutocracy, which means money power. The Bible emphatically warns against being in haste to get rich. And yet money counts for so much in this land where rank and titles count for so little, that one temptation before our young men is haste to get rich. Haste to be rich is at the bottom of all the defalcations and embezzlements which startle our country and consign to disgrace families which hitherto were noted for integrity and honor. Haste to be rich is at the bottom of all the corners, combines and trusts which oppress our country and wring from the poor to increase the coffers of the already rich, or the would be rich. Short cuts to success abound in almost every department of life. There are short cuts to business success, by which a man is raised almost in an hour from comparative poverty and obscurity to a position of commanding affluence and influence. And the fact that the methods of success are so soon forgotten in the flush and glory of success itself only intensifies the temptation to these short cut methods. Riches attained by rum and ruin in a few years become as respectable as riches attained by the most respectable pursuits. When a few years have passed away and the original proprietors have died or gone into more respectable avocations, the gewgaws of rum bought and fraud-bought wealth are feted and toasted and worshipped as much as the most honorable minions of fortune.

Not only are there short cuts to business success, but there are short cuts to professional success. Plodding is no longer respectable success. The scintillating meteor that flashes and vanishes is appreciated before the settled orb which slowly but surely climbs the heavens. There are institutions calling themselves literary institutions which thrive by retailing bogus diplomas and palm off on the world as proficients in science those who are ignorant of the first principles of science. And the sad thing is that their patronage is sufficient to make them permanent institutions—standing cankers upon our body politic. And the wonderful success of some of these adepts in the short-cut methods is calculated to tempt our young men to follow their course.

The short-cut method may succeed for a time, but it is doomed to defeat at last. And dear young men, let me warn you to listen to no siren's song, be it sung never so sweetly, that would tempt you to anything which is not honest, honorable and Christly. Remember the fate of Absalom. He attempted the short cut method to the throne, but he found his throne to be a prickly oak, and his mausoleum a dishonored grave.

III. Finally now. The last factor in Absalom's temporal and eternal destruction was the fact that he entirely left God out of his aims and plans. There is not a character in the whole Bible in which God is so completely ignored as in Absalom. God was not in all his thoughts. In all his aims and plans, there was a complete ignoring of the being and claims of Jehovah. But if he ignored God, one thing is certain God did not ignore him, but allowed him to go on in his infatuation until ultimate success seemed within his very grasp, and then put a prickly oak in his way that checked him. As a historian has said of the downfall of Cardinal Wolsey, so may be said of Absalom, "There was long delay, but the hour of reckoning at length arrived. Slowly the hand had crawled along the dial plate—slowly as if the event would never come, and wrong was heaped upon wrong, and oppression cried, and it seemed as if no ear heard its voice, till the measure of wickedness was at length fulfilled. The finger touched the hour, and as the strokes of the ponderous hammer pealed above the din of the nation, in an instant the whole fabric of iniquity was shivered to ruins." So with Absalom, he had often been reproved, but had hardened his heart, and now he was suddenly destroyed and that without remedy. And in that hour of decisive battle when David in [illegible] and despair asked the messenger, "Is the young man Absalom safe?" Without [illegible]

PASTORS AND FRIENDS, TAKE NOTICE.

HELP WANTED.

Owing to the fact that several Associations are held at widely diverging points this season, it is impossible for our regular representative to meet them all. We will be personally represented at as many as possible, and want the brethren to represent us at the others. If you are a friend to the RECORDER, you cannot more strongly and more usefully demonstrate your friendship than by working for it in your church and Association. The RECORDER is of the Baptists, for the Baptists and by the Baptists, and it must rely on the Baptists to sustain it. Our delinquents must pay up, and we would be glad to get the money now, if possible, as we have never needed it so badly as at present.

We want to add one thousand subscribers to our books during the Associations, and we are trusting in the co operation of our pastors and friends to do it. Begin to work now, and bring a new subscriber to the Association, or a club of them, if possible, and may God bless you for it. You will be surprised to find out how easy it is to get a new subscriber, if you will only try. Meanwhile, brethren and sisters, pay us immediately if you are able, a part or the whole of what you are due.

LONG SERMONS.

There is a marked tendency among Christians of the day to prefer short sermons in the place of long ones. In these days, people readily see the point in the incident related of a preacher of the Old-side persuasion, who gave his congregation, after his return from Baltimore years ago, an account of his experience there in about these words:—

"Yes, my brethren, and while I was in that great city I was invited by the pastor of one of the leading Missionary Baptist churches to preach for his people. As he was a relative of mine, I consented. Ah, what a congregation, and how they were dressed! But, brethren, those people could not stand sound doctrine; because when I had preached to them only about one hour and a half I saw many of them leaving the church. No, brethren, they could not stand sound doctrine."

We give this experience also for what it is worth, and although it may appear funny to some of our readers, yet it has a moral in it, and suggests a point of some force, and that is, much of the outcry now against what are called long sermons, can be traced to those who "cannot stand," as the old brother put it, sound doctrine. We must admit that as a rule we are in favor of short sermons, and especially where people hear preaching twice each Sabbath, and at times during the week. People who attend churches in the country, at which there is service only once or twice each month, not only expect, but ought to have sermons of some greater length than those in the city. If a saint is to be nourished for two or four weeks on a spiritual feast, it ought to be a good solid one. This naturally leads us to mention an important matter concerning and that is, why should they not have some kind of service every Sabbath at their places of worship? A great many of these churches have service only once a month, including of course that on Saturday before the Sabbath on which the regular service is held. Now is there not talent enough in many or all of the churches that follow this plan to have some kind of service at their places of worship on each of the three Sabbaths that intervene between their monthly appointment? It may be readily objected by some that they have but few members that will lead in prayer, or lead especially such meeting as that referred to. And it may again be readily asked, "What kind of meeting can we hold in the absence of the pastor?" Allow us to make this suggestion, in answer to the objections that may be offered, and in answer to the question just asked:—

Let each church meet at their house of worship every Sabbath. If there is a Sunday-school, (and of course nearly all of our churches have them), let the Sunday-school exercises be closed in time to give all present a rest of ten or fifteen minutes. Then Sunday-school and church re-assemble at 11 o'clock a. m., and after singing [illegible] some brother, (young or old, with a good voice and reads well, [illegible] Spurgeon, Broadus, or [illegible] preaches doctrine that we can endorse, to the congregation. After the sermon and benediction, the people can return to their homes, feeling better paid for the labor of going to church. We are aware of the fact that this would be something new in many Baptist churches; but where is the harm of it? Some of our dear brethren have a strong aversion to a read sermon. So have most of us, if the man who stands before the congregation is a regular preacher of the gospel; but if he is only a layman, no harm can, and much good may, result from his reading a sermon.

Certainly the experiment is worth trying, and we are anxious that our country churches should test it. The churches would be greatly encouraged to adopt this, or some plan like it, if our pastors would encourage them to do so. To work the plan successfully, will of course require tact, zeal, and perseverance on the part of pastor and people. It certainly would have a tendency to keep our people together, and hence better organized for church work, and would increase, we think, the attendance at church when the pastor should be present. The pastor could of course without being obtrusive, exercise some oversight over what kind of sermons were read; and might at times supply such from his own library. Then he could be sure that his people would hear sounder doctrine than they often hear by drifting miscellaneously from church to church in his absence.

CALLING FOR CHURCH LETTERS

Why do our people for various causes often call for letters from churches near them, and where their services and means are needed, and join churches further from them, where they can possibly be of little service? Sometimes there may be good reasons for pursuing this course, but generally speaking, the reasons are not good, and sometimes they are very weak indeed. If a church member cannot give a good substantial reason for this thing, let him never do so. Let him not do so because the church is poor or weak, because the membership is not intelligent, or because "things do not go" to suit him. If your church is down, hard pressed to raise the pastor's salary, possibly torn by internal dissensions, don't do as some do, forsake her in her hour of need, and run off to one more fortunate, or in better circumstances. What would you think of a man whose mother might be in grief or trouble if he should then forsake her and leave her to shift for herself? Just in this manner, however, some people treat their mother church. Play the man, brother, and stand by your church if she is in trouble. It is then, more than at any other time, that she needs your presence and your help. But if you do leave for any reason, have the courage to give your real one, and not some petty one that lays you open to the danger of being considered deficient in a perception of the common rules of Christian duty and obligation.

If God has placed you, brother, near a weak church, he has put you there to help lift it up; but you, for some petty reason you are ashamed to mention, may attempt to dodge the Lord and to avoid duty. "The path of duty is the path of safety." Walk in it, brother; joy will come to you in it, but sorrow out of it.

INDEPENDENCE AND INTERDEPENDENCE.

In Baptist church polity, both the independence and the interdependence of the churches should be preserved. The former should not be taught, in theory or practice, as to destroy or obscure the latter, and the latter should not be so taught in words or deeds as to create doubt about the former. It is not only the duty of Baptists to hold this doctrine, but also to apply it under all the new and trying conditions of discipline and mission work. Agreement in doctrine must precede and be the basis of agreement in fellowship and work. "They continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." Acts 2: 42. Doctrine is named first. "Church independence among Baptists means independence in all local affairs, but fraternal and cordial co operation in all matters of general denominational interest."—H. H. Harris. Whenever, therefore, there is agreement in this doctrine and disagreement in the plans and methods of work, so as to produce friction or division, somebody has failed to see, or seeing, has not given the proper outward expression of one or the other of these phases of the one doctrine.

On this principle, properly understood and outwardly expressed in plans and methods of work, we have Associations, Conventions, Boards, and Colleges. These organizations illustrate and demonstrate both the independence and interdependence of Baptist churches. This makes a denomination a force, and indicates the line of denominational efficiency and growth. It is important to keep the principle in mind, and in our plans and methods of missions, work to it.

The same principle is illustrated by the individual and the local church. Here is also independence and interdependence.

There come times when reason and experience count for little, and fanaticism and fear count for much. Then the main currents, the cross currents, and the undercurrents are many. The surface man who knows nothing and claims to know everything, is ready to give an answer according to his real wishes, and jumps to conclusions which fit his interpretations. The rush of events is rapid, and the interests of men are interlinked in relationship and destiny. The situation is complex, but both wisdom and experience mark out the same way. The principle of independence and interdependence of Baptist churches properly understood and put into practical, loving, working order, is the key with which to unlock the difficulties now before us and give larger prosperity to missions in the time to come.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. R. T. Vann has returned to Scotland Neck from his vacation.

....Rev. W. M. Page has changed his address from Godwin, N. C, to Falcon, N. C.

....Dr. George B. Eager of Alabama is taking an extended trip through the Rocky Mountains.

....Rev. G. W. Fisher and F. T. Shore are engaged in a promising revival at New Hope, Caswell county.

....We were glad to see Rev. J. K. Faut of High Point in this city on the 1st inst., on his way to Scotland Neck.

....Rev. W. H. Strickland has been given a vacation by his church at Madison, Fla., and will spend it near Decatur, Ga.

....Dr. A. C. Davidson of Covington, Ky., has been unanimously elected President of Georgetown College of that State.

....Mrs. M. A. E. Tuttle writes: "The RECORDER is my ideal of a church paper," and her strengthens her words by supporting it.

....Rockfish church of Cumberland county has recently added ten members to its number as the result of a series of meetings.

....There is an opening for a young Baptist brother in Elloree, S. C. See advertisement of teacher wanted by Rev. T. P. Lide.

....Rev. G. M. Duke has recently closed a gracious series of meetings in Battleboro. There were many accessions to the church.

....Dr. J. N. Stallings, formerly of the High Point Female College, will open a school at Low Gap, Surry county, Aug. 25th.

....Dr. J. M. Frost of the First church, Nashville, Tenn., is spending a month's vacation at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia.

....We regret to learn that Bro. T. J. Taylor of Warrenton is sick as the result of overwork, and hope for him a speedy restoration.

....Rev. J. K. Howell, assisted by Rev. Mr. Hudson, is engaged in an interesting meeting at Providence church.—Caswell News.

....Bro. E. L. James, in renewing his subscription, writes: "The RECORDER gets better; last week's number was worth the subscription price."

....Rev. C. W. Blanchard was in our office a short time on Monday, as he passed through the city on his way to fill anengagement at Clayton.

....Rev. G. M. Webb of Randleman has three protracted meetings on hand for this month. We thank him for words of appreciation for the RECORDER.

....Rev. J. F. Love writes from his new field, Suffolk, Va.: "Work starts off hopefully here. Too many good things have not been reported of this church."

....Rev. J. B. Richardson preached a splendid sermon to his old charge, the church at Waughtown, during the recent session of the Pilot Mountain Association.

....In the absence of Bro. Gwaltney, who is enjoying a vacation, Rev. M. P. Davis, a promising Wake Forest student, held services at Wake Forest Sunday night.

....Rev. J. E. White preached at the Tabernacle in this city on Sunday and Sunday night. His sermons were splendid and the brethren were delighted with his visit among them.

....On Sunday night last (6th) Rev. J. H. Edwards was installed as pastor of the Fayetteville church. The Presbyterian and Methodist congregations of the city united in the services.

....Rev. J. H. Edwards was welcomed into his new field at Fayetteville on Thursday night last by appropriate services. On Sunday, Dr. L. G. Broughton preached morning and night.

....Rev. J. S. Hardaway recently assisted Dr. R. H. Marsh in a meeting at Buchanan, Granville county, with good results. He has been granted a vacation, and is with his family in Virginia.

....Rev. E. Pendleton Jones, who will go to Cuba November 1st as a missionary, and Miss Fannie S. Royall of Savannah, Ga., were married recently. We wish for them success and happiness.

....Rev. R. R. Acree, of the Calvary Baptist church, Roanoke, Va., has resigned that pastorate to accept a call to the First Baptist church of Knoxville, Tenn. The change takes place Sept. 1st.

....Rev. Dr. John Mitchell passed through the city Monday on his return from an engagement at Durham.

....Rev. W. L. Wright of Richmond, Va, and family, is spending a while at Roxboro and other points in our State. Our brethren are always glad to note the presence of Bro. Wright among them.

....Revs T. M. Leary of Clayton and W. C. Newton, both ministerial students of Wake Forest College, recently held a revival at Berea, near Durham, in which ten additions to the church were made.

....Rev. W. C. Newton, son of the missionary, was in our office last Wednesday. Bro. Newton is a promising student of Wake Forest College and preaches regularly. He has been invited to fill the pulpit of the Second church of Durham several weeks.

....Rev. H. M. Wharton, D. D., closed the series of meetings in the First church in Asheville on the 30th ult. We have seen no statement of the number of additions to the church, but judging from various reports, the meeting was productive of good results.

....The Greensboro church has increased Bro. Thomas' salary two hundred dollars for the year beginning Aug. 15th. We congratulate both church and pastor, and are glad that the Greensboro brethren and sisters know how to appreciate a "good thing."

....We want our pastors to take a more active interest in the RECORDER. We want your news for publication, and we want your co operation in extending the circulation of the paper. Bring a new subscriber to your Association. It will help mightily.

....Rev. J. H. Lamberth writes from Chatham, Va.: "It is a pleasure to be here with brethren P. H. Fontaine and F. H Jones. I am in my Master's work deeply." We are very glad to learn that Bro. Lamberth contemplates settling in North Carolina soon. He is too good to lose.

....Rev. Rufus Weaver recently conducted a series of meetings among the factory employees of East Greensboro that resulted in forty professions of faith. Bro. Weaver graduated from Wake Forest College in June last with great credit, and we are glad to hear of his successful work.

....Rev. Claude E. Gower of Lincolnton has just returned from a sixteen days' preaching at Carpenter's Grove with Rev. J. A. Rector, and at Mt. Vernon. The church at Carpenter's Grove was greatly revived and strengthened, and fourteen have been baptized into the followship of the Mt. Vernon church.

....We protest it may be in vain, but still we protest against Baptists going to either the Catholics or the Salvation Army for doctrines or for methods. Whatever Catholics have always done and Baptists refused to do is, prima facie, wrong. And new names do not alter either doctrines or practices.—Western Recorder.

....We hope to get in the RECORDER short account of the meetings of all our Associations. The number of these Associations and the frequency of their meetings will not allow a very extended account of any one, but we hope to give our readers an idea of what our brethren have done during the year.

....The pastors of our churches can do us a great kindness if they will only call the attention of their brethren to the renewal of their subscriptions to the RECORDER. We will try to have a representative at all the Associations, who will be glad to receive any amounts the pastors may bring to the Association.

....It is stated that Rev. A. C. Dixon has defeated Col. Robert G. Ingersoll again in the suit between them, in which Ingersoll sued Dixon for $5,000 for libel.—Baptist and Reflector. Our readers will rejoice to read the foregoing. It is not only a victory for Bro. Dixon, but for the cause of Christ over corruption.

....Our meeting in Yanceyvile closed last night. Twelve persons made profession of faith in Christ. Eight of them gave their names for membership in the church; and they, with probably three or four others, will unite with the church at our next meeting. The meeting was much enjoyed, and I hope it may prove a blessing to the church in several ways.—J. R. Jones.

....Rev. W. R. Cullom writes: "Bro. Lynch is spending his vacation among his country congregation for the most part. He has one of these fine Bluegrass horses and rides on horse-back a good deal. His people here are very much devoted to him, and that is no mean compliment to any man to have the sincere devotion of such people as the Baptist church in Danville."

....Dr. Selah Merrill, United States Consul at Jerusalem, declares that, having investigated the matter, in connection with the British Consul, he has reached the conclusion that the number of Jews in Jerusalem cannot be more than 25,000, and the number in Palestine is not far from 42,000. This is a much smaller number than many publications have given, but it seems to come from the most reliable source.

....The World's Fair was not closed on Sunday, July 30th, as was ordered by the directors. It seems that after the directors had agreed that the opening was a failure, a city judge held that the previous order of the court was higher than that of the directors. Of course, the directors didn't care so long as the responsibility was removed from their shoulders. But the people cared, and the attendance on that Sunday was the smallest since the Fair opened.

....Bro. Sheets is fortunate in having the meeting of two of our best Associations with his churches this year. A splendid session of the Pilot Mountain Association was held with his church at Waughtown last week, and the Liberty is soon to meet with the church at Kernersville. Brother Sheets is one of our best pastors, and will be certain to use all such good influences for the greater development of the interests which have already grown under his faithful ministry.

....We were pleased with a visit from Rev. J. E. White, who had been on a visit to his former home, Apex, N. C., on his way to Edgefield, S. C. Bro. White intends to give all his time to the ministry, in either North or South Carolina, after this fall, although he has always been very successful in the school room.

....A "hustler" said to an old preacher the other day, "You are opposed to everything new." The preacher answered, "I have not heard of anything 'new'—all the things called 'new' which I have opposed are things which are old among the Catholics and are knocking for admission among Baptists under new names. Show me something 'new' before you say that I oppose a thing merely because it is new."—Western Recorder.

....The Western Recorder of Aug. 3d has the following good news of two of our former young preachers: "Last Sunday morning it was our privilege and great pleasure to worship with the saints in Danville. The congregation was large, and the sermon by Bro. Cullom, the supply during vacation, was good. This is one of our best churches. They are strongly attached to their able pastor, Bro. Lynch. His health, while still not vigorous, is improving."

Farewell Services at the Raleigh Baptist Tabernacle.

Dr. J. J. Hall preached his farewell sermon to the Tabernacle on Sunday night, the 30th, from 2 Cor. 13: 11, his text being "Finally, brethren, farewell." His sermon was pronounced especially appropriate and very strong and touching.

The following letter was read at the conclusion of the sermon, by Deacon A. B. Forrest on behalf of the church, which had unanimously adopted it.

Rev. J. J. Hall, D. D., pastor Baptist Tabernacle church.

Dearly Beloved Pastor:—Having been called to another field of labor, and feeling that it was God's will you accepted same and tendered your resignation as pastor of our church to take effect August first.

You are now about to take your departure and we desire before you do so to express to you some words of our appreciation of your faithful ministry to us:

When you came to us about four years ago, you were a total stranger to our people, but you were known only to a few of our State. Your labors in season and out of season in behalf of every good word and work, whether for our particular church, the city or State, gives you to day a reputation far and wide and has won for you the love of thousands in North Carolina who have listened to your preaching and enjoyed your acquaintance.

We feel justified in saying on behalf of the people of Raleigh that your leaving gives general regret, and while we part with you in much sadness it is a sorce of great pleasure to us to know in this we are joined by such a large part of our citizens.

We notice that since you came to us there have been added to our membership by letters from other churches and by experience and baptism 212 persons. It was not long after your coming before the work of remodelling our house of worship was commenced. The large, commodious and beautiful rooms which we enjoy to-day are monuments to your wisdom, your good taste and faithful labor, for we feel that your own zeal and liberality in the undertaking gave an inspiration to it that contributed in a large degree to its completion.

As a faithful preacher of the Word you have given the highest satisfaction and the uniformly large audiences that have attended upon the same, and the active condition of our church at this time are the best evidences of the success attending your ministry.

The relation existing between us as pastor and people are all that you or ourselves could desire. Day in and day out often times through the hours of the night you have as a faithful shepherd come to our homes to the sick bed, ministered consolation and comfort to the languishing, feeble ones, and when all human help had failed and death shadowed the home, with loving tender care you have stood with us around earth's last resting place.

And what shall we say of your most excellent companion and wife? To all of our work she has always given most hearty, sympathetic and untiring support. She has been more than a help-meet. Indeed there is no word that so expresses it as "mother," for to many and many a one of our people she has been to them all that is meant by that sweet word. She too has ministered to all throughout the city whom in her constant rounds she found in distress of any kind. We shall never forget and never cease to love her.

Our Sunday school joins us in this letter to you, and says that from the day of your coming to us you and your wife have been of greatest help in its work and most earnestly and cordially have given that department your warmest sympathy. Surely, our children rise up and call you blessed.

Now, dear pastor, as you go from us, be assured that you carry with you the love, confidence and devotion of a grateful people. We shall follow you with our prayers and very best wishes. May you and your wife long live to do the will of our Heavenly Father, and may all the blessings of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ which you have unfolded to us be yours in richest abundance; may that hidden manna that you have feasted us upon be given you in every hour of need.

May grace, mercy and peace from our Heavenly Father rest upon you and all your household, now and evermore.

Adopted in special conference of the Tabernacle Baptist church, Wednesday evening, July 26, 1893.

Chairman Board of Deacons.

This and That From Greensboro.

IS IT RIGHT?

The other day we noticed a party of good Baptist officials get off the train. Most of these men are leaders in the denomination. I watched to see where they would go. With one or two exceptions, they went to a hotel which has a bar attached. In going to that hotel, they passed another equal in almost every respect, giving as good fare for the same money, which has no bar-room. Is it right for our Baptist brethren to patronize hotels which have bar-rooms attached, when they can have equal benefits at one which has no bar?

WILL THE TRUSTEES EXPLAIN?

Why is it that the Baptist Orphanage spends $4,000 for salaries and wages of officers and helpers, and only $2,600 for the provisions and clothing of the orphans? Why does it require five teachers and matrons to look after 130 children? Why is not the Orphanage farm self sustaining? Why is it necessary to have cooks, washerwomen and nurses in addition to the other help employed? What is included in $763 18 miscellaneous disbursements? These questions are asked in the interest of the Orphanage, not in a spirit of criticism. Contributions to the Orphanage have fallen off.

I believe the trustees look to the Baptists of the State for support, and it is due the Baptists that the Orphanage affairs should be managed with the utmost economy. These matters are being discussed in the churches; they will be discussed in the associations and the conventions. There must be some things explained to the Baptists of the State, or the contributions will fall off more this year. I think Bro. Mills will say that there are few pastors in the State whose churches and Sunday-schools have done better than mine in the support of the Orphanage. I expect to continue to help this cause, but there are many brethren and churches who will not do what they have done unless changes are made.—Rev. C. A. G. Thomas, in Biblical Recorder.

The writer of the foregoing is a highly esteemed pastor, and a very attractive preacher. We feel for him nothing but the most affectionate admiration. But it is our duty to answer his questions, and we purpose to do so in plain English and Christian kindness. Now let no one cry "peace, peace, peace," when there is not even a speck of war on the horizon. Remember that courteous discussion is totally different from vulgar dispute.

1. Rev. W. R. Gwaltney, J. H. Lassiter, J. B. Brewer, F. P. Hobgood, and others, came through Greensboro, hurried to a hotel for supper, and then pursued their journey. They knew nothing of any bar-room attachments, and the writer of the foregoing article, who shook hands with them as they started to the hotel, gave no warning. There was nothing wrong in their conduct, and if there had been, a private and brotherly admonition would have been in accordance with the Savior's advice. Why should a good man rush into print to undermine the confidence which other people feel in these good men? Baptists have to carry all the odium of the doctrine of election and all the odium of close communion, and why should they put on each other the odium of insinuated preference for hotels having bar-room attachments? We believe that when our gifted brother shall reflect on this paragraph, he will go to the mourner's bench and seek forgiveness for his unkind insinuations.

2. "Why is it necessary to have cooks, washerwomen and nurses?"

We have an Infirmary, a house built for the sick, and sometimes a dozen children are sick at one time. Some one should give the needed medicine, prepare suitable food and give due attention to their clothes and bed clothes. So the sick need nurses. Wonder if our hale and healthy brother was ever sick? The larger boys and girls of the Watson, Durham, Mitchell and Biggs families do their own cooking, washing and ironing. But the twenty-nine little children in the Nursery, from three to eight years old, need instruction and help. So we have sometimes hired cooks. We have also hired a widow to come one day in each week and help them wash. For this in a whole year the Treasurer has paid out $29 03. Any extravagance in that? Our people send us little helpless orphans. Is it possible that we will not be allowed any help about keeping them clean and comfortable? How can we civilize them and train them to be useful men and women?

3. "Why does it require five teachers and five matrons to look after 130 children." This is an average of twenty-six children in each family. Each teacher has charge of the school-room, the cow and the garden. Each matron is responsible for the food and clothing for twenty-six children. Most people think this is work enough for them. Did you ever see a hen competent to scratch for more than twenty-six chickens? Our teachers and matrons have all the work that they can do. If you doubt this, come and see.

4. "Why is not the Orphanage farm self-sustaining?" Because the farm is run to help sustain the Orphanage. The farm produces hay on which we feed the mules and cows during winter. The mules haul the wood and the cows furnish milk for the orphans. We put up last spring a barn worth about $400—a great improvement to the farm. We made good crops of corn, wheat and vegetables. These helped to support the children. The farm greatly reduces the sum required to be spent on the children. If we could spend more on the farm, it would furnish more to the orphans.

5. "Why is it that the Baptist Orphanage spends over $4000 on salaries and wages of officers and helpers?" The Trustees are of age and can speak for themselves. They fix salaries. But this sum pays officers, agent for Charity and Children, a head carpenter, foreman of the printing office, foreman of the crop, etc., etc. How would our brother like to bring his salary down to the highest salary paid at the Orphanage?

6. "What is included in the $763.18, miscellaneous disbursements?"

Medicine, plow points, a one-horse wagon, combs, needles, etc., etc. Come and see the books.

7. "Contributions will fall off more this year."

So they will, if pastors stay away from the Orphanage, and write such letters to the organ of the denomination. You accuse us of extravagance. Come and show us how it is possible to be more economical. Come and point out the expense that ought to be cut off.

8. "There must be some things explained to the Baptists of the State."

All right. We have nothing to conceal. We are ready to show every book, answer every question and explain everything, so far as we can. And all this in a good humor.

Now we will ask our dear brother only two questions:

1. Why do you not come and preach to the children and see the Orphanage for yourself? These little orphans are the children of your dead brethren and sisters. You are their uncle in the gospel. The Superintendent of a Presbyterian Sunday-school came and spent the day with us. He talked and prayed with the orphans in our chapel. He went into the Library, with a few at a time, and prayed with them. He left some money when he went away. He lives further from the Orphanage than you do. "Exemplum docet."

2. Did the Devil (who hates every Orphanage) send a tattler to poison your mind against our Orphanage? Have you listened to any venomous slanderer of those who have charge of the Orphanage? If so, require him to prove his statements, or shut his mouth.

J. H. MILLS.

Central Association.

This Association met last Wednesday at Flat Rock church near Youngsville. The church is well situated in a populous neighborhood, and is a strong body, with Rev. I. T. Newton as pastor.

The introductory sermon was preached by Dr. J. W. Carter of Raleigh, from Romans 8:9—"If a man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." It was a model introductory sermon, tender and touching. It pleased the Association greatly, and started the body off with a glow of kindly, Christian feeling.

Prof. W. B. Royall was elected Moderator, and Prof. C. E. Brewer, Clerk. The church letters showed full representation and fair spiritual prosperity among the churches.

The report on State Missions was read by Dr. Carter, and discussed by himself and Dr. Durham during the afternoon session on Wednesday. No collection was asked by Dr. Durham, the Corresponding Secretary. He stated that the churches in this Association generally did their duty.

The question of the union of the Central and Raleigh Associations was discussed. Some of the brethren thought the union of the two Associations would make the territory covered by the new Association too large and thereby make it difficult for some brethren to attend. It was deemed best not to attempt the union at least for the present.

Thursday morning the Foreign Mission report was read. Rev. R. T. Bryan, missionary to China now in the State, and who will visit many of the Associations in the next few months, addressed the Association. His address was very fine. It made an excellent impression. He spoke two hours and had the unflagging attention of the Association throughout. One statement especially impressed us. He said he was one of those who adopted the native dress, and asked the Board for a reduction of his salary. He now thought he was wrong as to both of those matters. Wherever the brethren can, we advise them to hear Bro. Bryan.

After the discussion on Foreign Missions, the subject of Education was considered. Dr. W. R. Gwaltney presented the claims of the Education Board in a strong speech, and took a collection in behalf of the work of the Board.

Dr. Taylor addressed the Association on general education, and presented the claims of Wake Forest College for the patronage of the people. Dr. Taylor, as he always does, made a wise and impressive speech. Dr. J. B. Powers closed the discussion. He urged the brethren to send their sons to Wake Forest as the best place to educate them. He added a little spice here and there as he went along, and made an interesting speech.

We noticed Profs. Hobgood of Oxford, and Brewer of Murfreesboro, present at the Association, representing their excellent schools.

Professor F. P. Hobgood and Superintendent J. H. Mills presented the claims of the Orphanage at Thomasville to the Association. They gave an account of this great charity of our people. It needs now especially the attention of the denomination. A collection was asked and given to Brother Mills for his work.

Rev. R. Van Deventer of Henderson delighted the Association by being present and speaking to them on Home Missions.

Friday morning the Sunday-school work was discussed before the Association by Prof. C. E. Brewer, Rev. I. T. Newton and Bro. Pippen of Stanhope.

The report on periodicals was read and the necessity of reading the literature of the denomination was urged by Dr. Carter.

Hon. C. M. Cooke of the Tar River Association favored the brethren with his presence on Friday, and spoke to the report on the state of the churches, dwelling with force and tenderness on the life and character of Dr. Wm. Royall, who died during the past Associational year. Dr. Carter spoke also on the report.

This session of the Association was the largest that has been held for years. An unusual number of our wisest and strongest brethren were present and gave interest to the deliberations. A splendid spirit was maintained throughout and the Association was splendidly entertained by the Flat Rock church. The Association will meet with Hopkin's Chapel next year, Dr. W. R. Gwaltney to preach the introductory sermon.

The Sunday-school Chautauqua.

FAVORING THE MOVEMENT.

Rev. Jno. E. White, who is now tarrying at Cary, and who goes to Edenton first of September, says: "I will be able to attend the Chautaugua at Mt. Vernon Springs and this delights me."

Rev. Dr. N. B. Cobb says he thinks the movement a good one and it is his purpose to attend the meeting.

Rev. Baylus Cade says: "I expect to go to the Chautauqua and will do all in my power to aid the movement."

Bro. J. S. Kilby, Trap Hill, says: "I am so glad the Sunday-school workers have been called together in a Summer School. I hope that I can attend."

Rev. W. B. Morton, Louisburg, writes: "I am pleased at the prospect of the Sunday school Chautauqua. I hope and believe it will result in great good to the Sunday-school cause. May the Lord so order it."

Bro. Archibald Johnson of Laurinburg, says: "Am delighted with the idea and want to be on hand."

Rev. W. B. Oliver, Wilmington, says: "I am heartily in favor of the Chautauqua. Any reasonable movement looking to unifying, solidifying and pushing on Sunday-school work among the Baptists of this State has sympathy and shall have my earnest co-operation."

ARRANGING WITH RAILROADS.

Reduced rates have been granted us over all the railroads. We will be able to go from Raleigh by Sanford over the Raleigh and Augusta Air Line, and make close connection with train of Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley R. R.

Two Protracted Meetings.

Dear Recorder:—I have just closed my second protracted meeting—first, at Ashpole church, beginning July 15th, and continued nine days. Rev. R. A. Hedgpeth was with me five days, and rendered valuable assistance, preaching alternately with me. Seventeen were baptized, three were restored, and one awaits baptism.

My second meeting began the 24th ult. at Saddle Tree church, and continued ten days. Rev. J. A. Hursey did half the preaching with satisfaction and profit to the congregation. Eighteen were baptized on the last day of the meeting.

The Spirit of the Lord was with us in each of these meetings from the beginning. The churches had been praying and setting themselves in order for the blessing of the Lord, and they realized all they anticipated. I can truly say the Spirit of the Lord came upon us with great power and glory. The churches are greatly strengthened, and at each church numbers of awakened souls were inquiring the way of life to know at the close of the services. I can say of a truth, "The Lord has done great things for us, whereof we are glad."

Cumberland Union Church.

Dear Recorder:—We have just closed a series of meetings at Cumberland Union church in the Little River Association. Rev. O. Churchill aided me in the work during the entire week. He is now seventy-four years of age, and says that he is living on borrowed time. However, he is using it to a great advantage, although he is not very strong, and much of the time unwell. There were about twenty-four conversions, and sixteen were added to the church. Nearly all of them were members of the Sunday-school.

God bless the Sunday-school work and prosper it. May the Chautauqua be a success. With such leaders as brethren Broughton and Rominger, it can but do good.

Resolutions of Respect.

In a meeting of the Missionary Society of the Second Baptist church of Durham, N. C., July 9, 1893, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, Our beloved brother and pastor for the past two years, Rev. A. A. Butler, has expressed his intention of going to China as a missionary; and whereas, he has been so faithful in all his work here; be it therefore Resolved 1. That we, the Missionary Society of the Second Baptist church, Durham, do hereby pledge ourselves to assist him all we can by praying for him.

Resolved 2. We tender him our thanks for his faithful work while a member of our Society.

Resolved 3. That we give him, on his departure for China, one hundred dollars, as a token of our interest in him and his work.

Resolved 4. That these resolutions be entered on the minutes of the Society, and copies be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER and N. C. Baptist for publication.

May God's richest blessings rest upon our brother and his family.

Letter from High Point.

Dear Recorder:—Our church is again without a pastor and our flock without a shepherd. Bro. Fant notified us last Thursday night that he would not be a candidate for re-election as pastor of our church for another year. He has been with us two years and has done a great work here for Christ and for the Baptist cause.

I have never seen one who more truly deserves the appellation of "a worker for Christ" than Bro. Fant. He has been out into the highways and hedges of High Point and gathered in many who would have been overlooked by a less diligent man, and he has given that attention to the sick and poor of his flock and of the town, that has shown to the world that Christ's work has been his work. In fact, he has by his work and by his life among us given us a hold upon the people here that we did not have before he came among us, and has raised the Baptist work to the level of that of the other denominations of our town.

I have heard it said that High Point was a hard field for a Baptist preacher. Perhaps that is true, but I don't believe it will ever be nearly so hard again as it was when Bro. Fant came here. His labor has taught us how to work, his example has shown us how to live, and under his charge the church has steadily increased its contributions to every good work until now it gives nearly twice as much as it did before he came here. This shows progress. For a man will not go down into his pocket-book to aid any work unless he is interested in that work. We don't give as much as we ought by half, but we have made remarkable progress along that line in the past two years. Brother Fant's work will live after him. He will reap the benefit of it in this life; he will reap his reward hereafter.

Our church extended Bro. Fant a vacation for the month of August for rest, and he is spending it with the brethren at Scotland Neck. He leaves behind him many friends whose best wishes go with him. There are those here who will always respect, and honor, and love him. Our prayers go with him.

Our prayer for our church is that she may get another pastor who will be as faithful to her and as zealous in the cause of Christ as Bro. Fant has been.

French Broad Union Meeting.

This Union assembled in session with Mars Hill church, July 29th and 30th, 1893. At eleven o'clock on the 29th, the introductory sermon was preached by Rev. S. J. Morgan, after which adjourned till one o'clock p. m.

At one o'clock p. m., the house was called together by Rev. T. M. Honeycutt.

Bro. A. B. Bryan was elected Chairman, and A. E. C. Pittman, Secretary.

Visiting brethren were invited to seats.

The following subjects were discussed:

1st. "Should the French Broad Association unite with the Baptist State Convention?" Discussed by Revs. J. A. Wallin, T. M. Honeycutt, John Ammons, S. J. Morgan, J. R. Sams, W. T. Bradley, J. W. Briggs and Bro. W. P. Jervis

The following resolution was then offered by Rev. T. M. Honeycutt: "Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that the French Broad Association should unite with the Baptist State Convention." The resolution was unanimously adopted.

2nd. "The relation of pastors to the development of the mission spirit." Discussed by Bro. W. P. Jervis

Adjourned till eight o'clock p. m., when the discussion of the same subject will be continued.

Eight o'clock p. m.—Services opened by song. Prayer by Rev. W. T. Bradley. The discussion of "The relation of pastors to the development of the mission spirit" was continued by Rev. J. R. Sams, Bro. J. F. Tilson, and Rev. T. M. Honeycutt.

The Chair appointed Revs. T. M. Honeycutt, John Ammons and L. W. Sams a committee to arrange a program for next meeting. Adjourned till 10 o'clock to-morrow.

Ten o'clock Sunday a. m.—Devotional exercises conducted by Rev. L. W. Sams.

On motion, the subject, "Deaconship and its duties" was taken up and discussed by Revs. L. W. Sams, John Ammons, J. M. Ammons, Bro. W. P. Jervis, and Rev. J. R. Sams.

The committee on program for next meeting made the following report: Place of meeting—Middle Fork church. Time—fifth Sunday in October.

PROGRAM.

1st. "Elements of church growth," by Rev. J. R. Sams.

2nd. "What does church membership involve?" by Bro. W. P. Jervis.

3rd. "Sabbath observance," by Bro. J. F. Tilson.

By motion of Rev. John Ammons, the Secretary was requested to send a copy of the proceedings of this meeting to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

Adjourned to meet with Middle Fork church on Saturday before the fifth Sunday in October.

A Mistake Pointed Out.

Dear Recorder:—I see in a late issue of the RECORDER, that in the S. S. Association the brethren should have made the appointment for the Union Meeting with New Hope church.

Now, brethren, this is a mistake, as I had the honor of presiding over that body. I feel it my duty to state in behalf of the Association that there was nothing said publicly in regard to where the next Union would be. I will further state I am sorry that I could not attend the Union Meeting.

Rev. J. H. Edwards.

WHEREAS, Rev. J. H. Edwards has felt it his duty to accept a call to another field of labor, and has tendered his resignation as pastor of the Goldsboro Baptist church; therefore, be it

1. Resolved, That we part regretfully with a pastor who, by his consecration, fidelity and zeal has deserved and won our love and confidence.

2. That we shall miss him and his family in our social circles and in every branch of our church work.

3. That the desire of our hearts is that his labors in his new field may be crowned with abundant success, that the richest blessings of God may be upon him and his, and that the sweet peace which passeth all understanding may rest upon, and abide with, them forever.

4. That we commend him and his family to the love and confidence of our Fayetteville brethren.

5. That these resolutions be spread upon the pages of our church record, and that copies of them be furnished the BIBLICAL RECORDER, the North Carolina Baptist, and the Goldsboro papers for publication.

A Free Trip to Washington City.

Travellers say the most beautiful city in the world is Washington City—the Capital of the United States. Perhaps at no other city in the New World is there so much of interest to be seen. The magnificent Capitol, the White House—the home of the President, the Patent Office, Treasury Department, the renowned Smithsonian Institute, the great Art Gallery, the lofty Washington Monument, the Navy Yard, and the various departments of the government. Some time ago, the Cadets of Davis Military School attended the great State Exposition at Richmond, Virginia. Among the pleasant events of the visit was the Review of the Cadet Battalion by Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, Governor of Virginia. The Review took place on the famous grounds surrounding the historic Capital of the Old Dominion. The entire visit was full of enjoyment for the soldier boys. During the coming session of the Davis Military School the cadets will visit Washington City, where they will spend a few days. Congress will be in session at the time of the visit. This will be not only an occasion of great enjoyment for the cadets, but one of great profit. The cadets will go on a special train from Winston to Washington City. The entire expenses will be paid by the Davis Military School. The cadets will be at no expense whatever. The next session of Davis Military School will begin September 7th. Register containing full particulars will be mailed on application. Address Davis Military School, Winston, N. C.

The Merchants and Investors' Union of Raleigh, N. C., a State Building and Loan Association, with insurance features for all members, offers, during the next sixty days, to donate to the Baptist Orphanage at Thomasville, one half of the entrance fee, of any applicant for stock who sends this notice, with his application, and fee to the home office. Read ad. in this paper and write to the Secretary.

ing for the messenger's reply, any man in Israel might have replied "No. No young man is safe who has abused the endowments which God has given him. No young man is safe who has adopted the short-cut method of success in life. No young man is safe for time or eternity who wilfully and persistently leaves God out of his aims and plans." Are our young men safe? No, only as they are regenerated by God's word and upheld by God's grace.

The Newbern Persecution.

I wish to state a few facts concerning the persecution of 1741.

About ten years ago I stated, in a public address, that Baptists had been whipped and imprisoned in Craven county because they had asked the privilege of building a church. Dr. Roby, of the Methodist Advance, called in question the truth of the statement. Whereupon I wrote to the Newbern Journal, requesting that the editor examine the records, and write to me the result or publish it in the Journal. He promptly published in the Journal of Sept. 6th, 1883, the following: —

"In looking over the old dusty records in the Register's office, we find an entry in the minute docket of the county court in 1741, noting the application by Baptists to be allowed to build a church in Newbern. Instead of granting the application, these applicants were all publicly whipped, bound over to keep the peace, and required to give bond for their good behavior, and also to take the test oath."

Dr. Roby saw the editorial, referred to it in his paper, and seemed to be satisfied as to the truthfulness of the facts of the entry. I thought everybody else was, or ought to have been, satisfied.

Dr. S. B. Weeks has made strenuous effort to get the records relating to the persecution, or affidavits from those who had seen the records. He states in his valuable work, "Church and State in North Carolina," that he failed to get either, and adds, "Dr. Vass, who was on the ground, looked the matter up very carefully not long after the time the Journal did, and could find no indication of whipping," p. 50.

As to the affidavits, the Journal editor of 1883 was dead at the time Dr. Weeks was seeking evidence of the persecution, else he surely could have gotten an affidavit from him. As to other parties who, I have been told, could furnish affidavits, and yet have declined to do so, I am in perplexity.

During the year 1890, while I was carrying through the BIBLICAL RECORDER a series of articles on the Primitive Baptists of Eastern Carolina, I wrote to Dr. Battle, pastor of the Newbern Baptist church, asking him to examine the records of Craven county, and send me a full account of the persecution of 1741. In his reply he stated that the records were reported as destroyed by fire along with Dr. Hawks' library; he stated, also, that if I desired it, a distinguished citizen of Newbern would furnish affidavit that he had seen the record. Subsequently, I wrote to the gentleman, enclosing a stamped envelope. But he has never replied. Dr. Weeks wrote to the same gentleman with the same success.

As to Dr. Vass's failure to find the whipping, one of two things is evident—either that the entry of 1741 was on the book he examined, but escaped his eye, or that it was in another book which he did not examine. The book he examined shows that the Baptists made application to build in 1730 and 1740, while the application to build which the editor of the Journal saw was made in 1741.

Of course, no sane man who knew the editor of the Journal would question, for a moment, the fact that the latter examined the records in the Register's office and saw therein what he published in his paper of Sept. 6th, 1883.

Dr. Weeks should retract or modify the sentence, "The advocates of persecution content themselves with vague assertions." There is no vagueness about the Journal editorial of Sept. 6th, 1883. That editorial states what the editor saw and read with his own eyes.

There are some things that are inexplicable to me in connection with the persecution of 1741.

1. The reported burning of the records and their subsequent recovery. Where were they? Why and when were they removed from the custody of their rightful keeper?

2. How is it, that when Dr. Vass examined the records they had not been mutilated; but when Dr. Durham and others examined them at a later date, they had been mutilated, in some places, a half page, in others from two to four pages having been cut or torn out? Why this mutilation?

3. Why do not some of the able Baptists of Craven county take up the matter and thoroughly investigate it?

Dr. Weeks's Statement Corroborated by the Public Records.

The statement made by Dr. Stephen B. Weeks that at one period in our Colonial history, no one but a Church of England could be master of a public school is fully corroborated by the law records of these [illegible].

On page 69 of Martin's "Collection of the Private Acts of the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina, from the year 1715 to the year 1790 inclusive, now in [illegible] and Use"—a collection of statutes [illegible] by Francois Xavier Martin in [illegible] the General Assembly—[illegible] (a copy from the original [illegible] in my possession):

[illegible] Sec. 4. Provided always, [illegible] shall be admitted to be master [illegible] but who is of the established [illegible] England; and who, at the [illegible] Quarter Sessions, or a majority of them, be duly licensed by the Governor, or Commander-in Chief for the time being."

This section is taken from the act incorporating the Academy in Edenton passed in XI. George III. 1770.

This school and the one in Newbern, chartered in 1756, were the only academies in the State incorporated by the General Assembly prior to the beginning of the Revolution in 1776, and both were to be controlled by head-masters of the Church of England. Liberty Hall in Mecklenburg was chartered in 1777; Granville Hall in Granville county and Science Hall in Hillsboro in 1779, while the war for independence was progressing. In 1783, the same year that England acknowledged our independence, three other academies were chartered, viz., Morgan Academy in Burke county, Martin Academy in Washington, and Richland Academy in Onslow at Swansboro; and nine others were chartered during the next seven years, making in all fifteen academies chartered under a free government in thirteen years against only two chartered under Colonial and Episcopal government in the twenty preceding years.

Mr. Ashe would do well to read up a little more from the old North Carolina lawbooks before he attacks the conclusions of men who have for years been making the early history of the State a special study.

North Carolina has a grand history, but she does not owe it to the Establishment. It has been made in spite of it.

Sunday-school Work in the Little River Association.

In January, 1888, was held our first Sunday-school Convention. At our Association in November of the same year, the writer offered a resolution asking for the appointment of a Sunday school Board, consisting of three brethren, which was granted. At that time there were only three churches in our Association with schools all the year.

The Board decided to call for a Sunday-school Convention in March, 1889, and since then the second fifth Sunday in each year has been given to our Convention. Before the Convention met, the churches of the Association were divided into sections, each brother agreeing to visit certain churches. The Board now consists of six brethren, supposed to be our best workers in Sunday-schools, and some member tries to visit each church at least once a year, encouraging the work, suggesting improvements, and organizing new schools wherever they can. They have done a great work in uniting our forces, and more than one half our churches have schools all the year. Only two churches have no schools, and several churches have branch schools

Two or three remarks about this work:

1. The Board, with one exception, is composed of lay brethren. It has given them something to do, and is developing them into useful men, efficient helpers for pastors.

2. The brethren have done their work without any pay. This has caused some people to hear them, who would not hear the preacher, perhaps.

3 Our Conventions are almost as largely attended and almost as profitable as our annual Associations, and gives us now a meeting in April or May.

4. It has greatly improved our singing, and aids us in having uniformity of books in our Association. This greatly improves our singing in our meetings.

5. It has greatly helped the pastors and built up churches and Sunday-schools.

6. Most of the territory within our bounds is mission work, or has, within the last few years, been occupied. This work helps to reach this destitution. We believe many people will yet praise God for the work of these sacrificing men.

This has been said with no desire to boast of what our Association is doing, but to encourage some others to try our plan or something better.

With all my heart I desire to endorse what Bro. Kesler says about the "flingers" in the RECORDER and Dr. Pritchard in the Baptist.

Before and After Adam's Fall.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Sunday before last the Sunday-school of which I am superintendent was requested to give written answers to the question, "What was the difference between Adam before and after he fell?" The enclosed, by a scholar, was decided to be the best, and I was instructed to request you to publish it to encourage and stimulate such efforts.

Please, therefore, as a favor to the school, if you deem it proper, insert it in the RECORDER. Fraternally,

J. B. HOLLAND, Supt.

Newbern, N. C., July 31, 1893.

Adam, before he fell, was Godlike in all his attributes. Created by God in his own image, his life breathed into him directly from his Maker, he was perfectly holy, consequently happy, and fitted, by a divine relationship, to be the companion of God, his Father, with whom he walked and talked in the most intimate communion.

Adam, by his fall, lost his divine relationship, and became an alien and an outcast from God. He sank mentally, morally, physically, and socially, to the level of the devil, and from a holy and happy, he became a sinful and remorseful man, having ever present with him the regretful memory of the great height from which he had fallen, coupled with a bitter loathing for the depth to which he had sunk. Around on every side upon the face of nature was the visible evidence of the blight. Standing at the threshold of Time, looking down the coming ages, seeing the sin, misery and degradation of his posterity, and knowing that countless numbers of them must go down to perdition, and the awful sacrifice of the second Adam to redeem a lost and ruined world—Adam, with all this before him, as the result of his fall, was a stranger to peace and happiness, a wretched man in the extremest sense.

Gentlemanliness.

Kindly feelings, quick sympathies, and gentle manners, joined with true self respect, form the basis of that gentlemanliness which is so naturally admired and coveted. Vulgarity, which is so much dreaded and so much misunderstood, consists in the absence of one or all of these qualities. It is not vulgar to wear a coarse coat or a cheap gown; but it is essentially so to dress in fine cloth or costly silk at the expense of one's creditors or one's peace of mind. It is not vulgar to make a mistake in the laws of etiquette, but it is so to sneer at the one who makes it, to ridicule ignorance, to be rude to the aged, to scorn honest frugality. A true gentleman may be poor or rich, but will be neither a miser nor a squanderer; he may be slenderly or thoroughly educated, but he will be neither envious nor supercilious; he may speak a provincial dialect, but he will not use slang; he may be reserved, but will not be cunning; he may be known or unknown to fame, but will be neither obsequious nor contemptuous.—*N. In Memoriam—William Hartwell Pace.

The life of every successful man whose career is ended is, in a true sense, a public possession. Biography, as well as history, is philosophy teaching by example. Divine revelation consists largely of the record of human lives as object lessons of good and evil conduct, and we do well to mark the lives of our own contemporaries, that we may discover, by close analysis, the causes of their success or failure.

Not merely, therefore, because of the esteem in which he was held by the writer—not as a matter of empty sentiment, but with the hope of educing lessons which may be valuable to the young and aspiring, and with the desire of stimulating a worthy ambition, it is proposed to notice some of the relations in which the writer has personally known the late William H. Pace of Raleigh, N. C.

My first meeting with him was in one of the old Society Halls on the fourth story of the Dormitory Building of the College. I was a young professor, who had recently taken a Chair in his Alma Mater, from which he had graduated about eighteen months before. He was a law student in Raleigh. The interview was brief, but I remember it with the greatest distinctness and pleasure, not only because it was the beginning of a friendship which was only terminated by his death, but because of the impression which he made upon me at the time. There was in his manner a vivacity, a geniality and a friendliness which charmed me then, and which was never wanting in any of our subsequent interviews.

It was not long before, as pastor of Wake Cross Roads church, I came to know him better. Though he lived in Raleigh, some miles away, he was rarely absent from the monthly meeting of the old church which he had attended from his earliest infancy; and he came, not as a matter of social enjoyment, but in order that he might be useful. He took an active part in the Sunday-school, never failed to respond when he was called upon to take public part in the devotional exercises, and contributed to every worthy object that appealed to the beneficence of the church. Dr. Pritchard, who was at that time pastor of the Baptist church in Raleigh, has stated since the death of Mr. Pace that he declined for some time to remove his membership to Raleigh, on the ground that he could be more useful in his old church. His example in retaining membership in a country church instead of joining one in the city in which he lived is not presented as one to be universally followed—he himself would have condemned such a policy—but it is certain that his presence and influence in the Cross Roads church were exceedingly stimulating and helpful.

It was during this period that I spent several days with him at his father's home in Wake county. In long walks together, in hours spent fishing on his father's pond, in the communings of long twilight hours, protracted under the starlight of summer skies, I came to know him well and to enter sympathetically—for we were nearly the same age—into his plans and ambitions, his struggles and hopes.

It was about this time that he had some political aspirations, and, having been nominated for the Legislature, made a brilliant canvass of his county. He probably came as near succeeding as any man of his party could have done at the time. I think that while he ever after valued the lessons which his experience had taught him, he never regretted his defeat. Henceforth, though always an interested and active servant of his party as a patriotic citizen, he would never allow himself to be brought forward again as a candidate for office.

During the twenty years of his career as a lawyer in Raleigh I had frequent occasions of observing his assiduity and faithfulness in many relations. His capacity for work was marvelous. It was no lucky turn of fortune's wheel, but ceaseless industry and unremitting energy that brought him his unusual success as a business lawyer. He was not satisfied until he had mastered the details and the legal principles of every case committed to him. No matter of business placed in his hands was too trivial to claim his careful, conscientious attention. He was prompt in his correspondence and engagements. He had no tolerance for needless procrastination. I cannot remember an instance in which any one of my hundreds of business letters to him was not answered by the next mail, unless he was absent from home; and in correspondence and interview he knew how to go right to the heart of a question. Sometimes I have sat in his office, waiting for an interview with him, while a score of clients, from country and city, came in to consult him; and it was marvelous to witness the clear and straightforward way in which he would sift out the essential points from confused statements, and then indicate the course to be pursued. And not only in his legal practice and his business transactions did this practical tendency manifest itself; he was always plain and outspoken in the expression of his opinions. No one was ever left in uncertainty as to his views, if he undertook to express them at all. He always struck straight out from the shoulder. Yet there were very few cases in which his candor and honesty of dealing wounded the feelings of others. He commanded the respect even of his opponents, by the sincerity of his purpose.

During all these years of unremitted work in his profession, Mr. Pace was equally active as a Christian layman. Few lives have more strikingly illustrated the inspired ideal, "Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." For the service of the church, of which he was a consistent and useful member, and of the Sunday-school, of which, as scholar, teacher or superintendent, he was a never-failing attendant, he gave freely his time, labor and money. As a member of important boards, and as a member of the Baptist State Convention, over which he for two years presided, he exerted a wide and salutary influence. He willingly represented various departments of Christian work at the District Associations, and, though welcomed in the highest social circles, he never hesitated to mingle and co operate with the humblest of his brethren.

No alumnus of Wake Forest College has ever been more thoroughly loyal to it. No friend of the College has been more practically helpful. He took a genuine interest in everything pertaining to its interests, and gave much thought to the ways and means by which it could be made a great and useful institution, and his judgment, whether in matters of general policy or of minor detail, with scarcely an exception, proved unerring in its wisdom. And it may be doubted whether in any of the numerous public enterprises, secular and religious, with which he was identified he will be more missed than in the counsels of the Trustees of the College.

Such a life, full, as it was, of manifold activity in Christian work, was the natural outcome of a vigorous intellect and imperious will, moulded and shaped under the influence of the Gospel of the Grace of God. He believed the Bible, and sought to be guided by its teachings. He had little patience with new theologies. His convictions as a Baptist and his tolerance as a Christian were equally intelligent and decided. There was a manliness and an absence of religious affectations in his religion which compelled all men to respect it. The profession to which Mr. Pace belonged is not unfrequently spoken of as unfriendly to the development of any high type of piety or usefulness. But such characters and careers as his prove that, even in the legal profession, there is no essential incompatibility between business and devotion.—C. E. Taylor, in Wake Forest Student.

The New York Evening Post has this to say concerning the World's Fair: "Comparisons are not easily made when we have such an object before us as this unparalleled exhibition. It is safe to say, however, that it exceeds the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia by as much as that one exceeded an ordinary State Fair. The superiority applies not merely to the size and grandeur of the buildings and grounds, but to the dazzling splendor and endless variety of the exhibits. No human being can see all the things that are well worth seeing at Jackson Park in thirty days' time, however diligent and strong of limb he may be. It would be worth a journey to Chicago to see the exterior of the Fair alone, and the crowd in attendance on every pleasant day. To see the contents would be worth a journey around the world if it could not be had on cheaper terms. Indeed, it may fairly be said that one takes a journey around the world when he goes there."

Paying Your Small Bills.

It would be impossible to so disturb credit and confidence as to bring on conditions of stagnation and panic if every man and woman owing small bills to the grocer, the doctor, the milliner, the baker, the butcher, the carpenter, and the hundreds of persons in other callings who minister to our daily wants, should make prompt payment. If the ten-dollar debt owing to the grocer should be paid to him he could settle his debt with the doctor, and the doctor's wife could settle with the milliner, and the milliner the baker, and so on.

The ten dollars once started on its errand of liquidation might satisfy hundreds of dollars of indebtedness as fast as it could be passed from debtor to creditor. The man who thrusts it in his pocket and lets his creditor wait, contributes his share toward augmenting business distress. When thousands of men, actuated by fear or careless disregard of obvious duty, begin to hoard money, instead of paying their debts, distress must result. When millions lose confidence and only pay as they are forced to do it, further business is impossible. All the wealth of the millionaires thrust into breach could not make good popular default.—Philadelphia Record.

Before and Behind.

The tender light of home behind,
Dark heathen gloom before,
The servants of the Lord go forth
To many a foreign shore;
But the true light that cannot pale
Streams on them from above,
A light divine, that shall not fail,
The smile of him they love.

The sheltering nest of home behind,
The battlefield before,
They gird their heavenly armor on,
And seek the foreign shore;
But Christ, their Captain, with them goes,
He leads them in the way;
With him they face the mightiest foes,
With him they win the day.

The peaceful joys of home behind,
Danger and death before,
Right cheerfully they set their face
To seek the foreign shore;
For Christ has called, and his dear word
Brings bliss, whate'er betide;
'Tis not alone—'tis with their Lord
They seek the "other side."

A wealth of love and prayer behind,
Far reaching prayer before,
The servants of the Lord go forth
To seek the foreign shore;
And wheresoe'er their footsteps move
That hope makes sweet the air,
And all the path is paved with love,
And canopied with prayer.

Christ in the fondly-loved "behind,"
Christ in the bright "before;"
O! blest are they who start with him
To seek the foreign shore!
Christ is their fair, unfading Light,
Christ is their Shield and Sword,
Christ is their Keeper, day and night,
And Christ their rich reward.

Language of the Indian.

The difficulties of the language of the Indian tribes have prevented many of our missionaries from mastering it. English is rapidly becoming the national language. But they have left the impress of their poetic tongue on our hills and waters.

"Their name is on your waters,
Ye may not wash it out,
'Tis where Ontario's billow
Like ocean's surge is curled,
Where strong Niagara's thunders wake
The echoes of the world,
Where red Missouri brings us
Rich tribute from the West,
And Rappahannock sweetly sleeps
On green Virginia's breast.

Your everlasting rivers speak
Their dialect of yore,
Their memory liveth on your hills,
Their baptism on your shore."

Christ is the Hope of the Indian.

How are we to bring the Indian to Christ? We must make this responsibility personal. God has placed upon each one of his disciples part of this responsibility and to refuse to meet it faithfully is to be guilty of the betrayal of a most sacred trust.

The Indian has come to the wall in his advance towards civilization under the present 'ward' policy. To keep him a dependent on the government for food and clothes is to keep him a loafer, and to encourage him to prefer the strolling life of a gypsy to that of a citizen. Out of this lazy uselessness he must be lifted to the plain of industrious usefulness. But how? By being fitted for it. How can this be done? By making him conscious of a personal worth that demands the crown of an enfranchised manhood. Yes, but how can this be done? I answer, give him to Christ, and the freedom Christ gives. What does this require? Competent teachers and missionaries—consecrated to the work. To ask those who are qualified for this work to do it for mere philanthropic motives, with a beggar's pay, is as fanatical and unchristian as it is unjust. As a rule, admitting exceptions, poor pay is the path to poor work. People who can't afford to work for nothing and yet do so, as a rule do work worth nothing. Missionaries here, as elsewhere, should be placed in their work above the drawbacks of want.

The work in Cuba had continued to prosper greatly—the wisdom of the purchase of the superb theatre in Havana had been fully vindicated—and the establishment of a girls' high school was regarded as the highest value in promoting the work of evangelizing the island.—Home Field.

There is no better argument for Christianity than a congregation of Indians, repeating in their own tongue the Lord's prayer.—Selected.

EPILEPSY OR FITS

Can this disease be cured? Most physicians say No—I say, Yes; all forms and the worst cases. After 30 years study and experiment I have found the remedy.—Epilepsy is cured by it; cured, not subdued by opiates—the old, treacherous, quack treatment. Do not despair. Forget past impositions on your purse, past outrages on your confidence, past failures. Look forward, not backward. My remedy is of to-day. A Strong Endorsement.

The St. Louis Trade Review and Export Journal in its issue of February 7th, 1893, has this to say:

EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.

One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B. Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Carolina, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1858. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches, and carry in stock a fine line of stationery, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, posters, circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

A Missionary Day.

The Sunday school Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, in its last annual report, said: "At one time your Board, after careful consideration, decided to undertake a distinctly Missionary Day for each quarter in all the Sunday schools, but as an agency for education rather than for the collection of funds. The plan, however, was not put into operation." Meantime the Home and Foreign Boards had seized upon the idea, amended by substituting one day a year, instead of one every three months, and, as was natural to those Boards, by putting more stress on the collection, though still retaining the educational feature as the principal aim. They accordingly recommended to the Woman's Missionary Union meeting in Nashville the inauguration of an annual "Missionary Day," to be observed with appropriate exercises at such time as may be selected in October or November.

The design of this movement is, first and chiefly, to disseminate information; to sow in the virgin soil of young hearts the seeds of an enlightened interest in the spread of the gospel at home and abroad; to make Christian missions no longer a vague, indefinite idea, but one closely connected with living men and women, and above all with the once crucified and forever living Lord, who laid upon his people the duty of discipling the nations. Secondly, and not much subordinate, to raise funds which shall go, with the prayers of the donors, into the work of telling the good news of salvation. Interest not manifested by acts is, like "faith without works," dead. Admirable provision has been made to encourage even the smallest scholars to anticipate the day and gather their mites as the apostle recommended in his great collection for the poor saints. (I Cor. 16: 2; II Cor. 8: 5; 9: 5, and many others). Many gifts, though some may be small, will make a large sum.

The observance of the day will be according to the tastes and customs of any community. A program, including a pleasing variety of readings, songs, recitations and object lessons, has been prepared and will be distributed gratuitously to all who desire. It is not a cast iron bed of Procustes, but perfectly flexible and readily adjusted to circumstances by the simple device of omitting whatever one may not like or may not have time for, and substituting at pleasure whatever may be considered more suitable. It was obviously best to print it in full and leave the different schools to cut down if necessary.

But methinks I see Bro. —— shaking his head with a mournful air and getting ready to rise and object. He will quote from Paul's letter to the "foolish Galatians," about "bondage under the elements of the world," and "turning again to the weak and beggarly elements," and "observing days, and weeks, and months, and years"—to all which we beg to respond beforehand that this is not a turning from the freedom of faith in Christ to Judaistic ceremonial as a means of salvation, and therefore the quotations are entirely inappropriate. We reply further in the language of the same apostle (Rom. 14: 4-6): "Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? * * * He that regardeth the day, regardeth it unto the Lord; and he that regardeth not the day, to the Lord he doth not regard it." Perhaps it is the objector who is in bondage.

This suggests what is most important of all in reference to the character and success of the effort. Some active man, better some good woman, in every Sunday school to take the work in hand and push it earnestly. On the streets, as I write, a number of heavily laden cars are passing to and fro, climbing steep grades, rounding short curves, speeding men to and from their business, carrying weary mothers and sick children out for a breath of invigorating country air. Tracks are laid, cars are equipped, an overhead wire is strung along, immense engines on a back street supply power. But here is a car standing stock still in the broiling sun. What is the matter? Some accumulations of dust on the track have broken the ground connection.

The Executive Committee of the Woman's Missionary Union, in Baltimore, backed by the Boards of the Convention, furnish motive power, or to be more accurate, tell how to make connection with the great motive power (II Cor. 5: 9.) The U. S. mail, like electric wires, reach every neighborhood, the programs are well equipped cars, but nothing can be done in your school unless you sweep off the track and give a good, steady ground connection. Who will do this for your fellow workers, for the Master, for the cause? Fraternally,

H. H. HARRIS,
Cor. Sec. ad. int. F. M. Board

Meeting of the Tar River Unions.

The several Unions in the Tar River Association, by agreement, met with the church at Littleton, Friday, July 28th, closing its session, Sunday night, the 30th.

Capt. N. L. Shaw of Warrenton was elected Moderator, and J. W. Allen of Warren county, Clerk.

The most of the churches were represented, Halifax and Warren having the largest number.

The meeting was a pleasant, harmonious and profitable one, and the attendance fairly good.

The subjects discussed were mostly on missionary topics, being divided between State, Home and Foreign.

The speeches made were very good, said to have been above the average; be that as it may, they were characterized by earnestness, power and eloquence, showing that those engaged in the discussions were in sympathy and full accord with the work and [illegible] of having our churches thoroughly [illegible] and systematic contributions [illegible] mission boards.

[illegible] ministers present were brethren Hufham, Powell, Mercer, Spillman, Mitchell, Willcox, Perkinson, McCloud, Pace, Harmon.

Among the prominent laymen in attendance were brethren Biggs, Dr. Johnson, Brewer, Hobgood, Bowers, Josey, Lancaster, Hilliard, Coleman, Bagley, McCraw, Browning, Shaw of Littleton, Judge White of Warrenton, and Pittman of Henderson.

Professors Brewer and Hobgood were here in the interest of their respective schools, and spoke with profit and effect on general education and Wake Forest College.

The Orphanage was not overlooked, but after a statement made by Bro. Biggs of Scotland Neck as to the condition of the Orphanage and the great importance of raising at once enough money to pay off present indebtedness, followed by a strong and eloquent appeal from Bro. Hilliard, a collection of cash and pledges was made, amounting to some seventy five dollars, which was further increased at the Sunday school mass-meeting on Sunday, in money $75 or $80, making the total over $150, all to be sent up by Sept. 1st.

Dr. Hufham preached Sunday morning, and Bro. Van Deventer at night. Both sermons were good and very much enjoyed by the large and appreciative audience.

A collection, amounting to some ten or twelve dollars, was taken Sunday morning to assist Bro. Pace on a new church he is building in Edgecombe county.

The cordial reception given to the Union by the church and the citizens of Littleton was in keeping with their enviable and far-famed reputation of kind, liberal and unbounded hospitality.

The church under the pastorate of Doctor Mitchell has wonderfully improved, both as to material and spiritual efficiency. A baptistery, with two Sunday school rooms, have been added, pulpit altered and furnished with a handsome set of furniture and the inside of the entire building neatly and tastefully painted. Too much in the way of praise cannot be said of the good sisters of this church, for it is the general opinion of those who know of their devotion and sacrifice for the cause, that but few if any churches in the State have such a loyal and consecrated band of sisters. We know it can hardly be considered good taste where all are so efficient, loyal and self sacrificing, to make comparisons, yet we cannot refrain from adding that our observation, with some experience, impresses us that Sister Bagley is the leading spirit, and to her is largely due the improvements and progress attained. She is beyond question one of the grandest women in North Carolina, and it is a real benediction to be thrown with her in home and social life as well as in the work of the church.

Regrets were expressed at the absence of Bro. Taylor of Warrenton and Bro. Durham, the former kept away by overwork and some nervous prostration, which, we are pleased to state at this writing, he has improved from. They were much missed, as their presence, counsel and deliberations are quite an acquisition to any of our meetings.

Bro. Caddell, the popular Agent and Correspondent of the RECORDER, put in an appearance Saturday evening, and all were delighted to welcome him. The Union gave him an opportunity to present the claims of this, the greatest, most powerful as well as efficient agent in the great work, plans and increased usefulness of the Baptist cause.

Littleton is a delightful, healthy town; it is quite a health resort, and is gaining well-deserved reputation in this respect every year. The celebrated Panacea Springs some few miles off, and Shaw's Healing Springs in town, are well patronized, and the beneficial results to those who have tried these waters, are too well and extensively known to require comment. All that is required is capital to make Littleton one of the leading towns in North Carolina, and Baptist people having money to invest, could not do so to better profit to themselves and greater usefulness to the denomination than by spending some at this fast developing health and educational resort. S.

Dear Recorder:—We have just closed a most glorious revival at this place, carried on under the auspices of Rev. T. B. Hill. Bro. Hill is an excellent preacher and a noble young man. May God bless him wherever he goes. There were eight professions and several renewals. The church was thoroughly awakened by his first sermon, and we enjoyed every word he said. We gave him a unanimous call as pastor, Bro. Horner having resigned. We are awaiting his decision.

Your Family Physician
should possess your confidence to a larger extent than any one else, not even your minister excepted; for he has preserved your health, and has doubtless saved your life at different times. However, there are limits to the best endeavors of our dearest friends, and especially is this true of physicians.
There are many troubles (chronic Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Nervousness, &c.,) that are constantly proving incurable to the most learned and skilful practitioner—cases that are beyond the reach of medicine. It is in just such cases that the greatest value of the Electropoise is demonstrated. It cures these cases SURELY, QUICKLY, PERMANENTLY. You "don't believe it," and your doctor says "it is a faith cure." Do you know enough of it to have an opinion? Is your doctor speaking from experience or prejudice? It has cured innumerable cases in Virginia and other States. Shall we send you the expressions of a few of the grateful people who give their experience? Information free. Correspondence is invited.

Dear Recorder:—It is a great pleasure to me to read your pages. Very much that is of great benefit to us is found in your pages, and especially in the Bible sermons, and we pray that you may be able to uphold the Word of God to and for sinners so simple, so plain, that it may cause them to see their sins and depart from them and return to Jesus, for he is able to save them from their sins and make them faithful servants on earth and saints in heaven. O, pray, call the sinners, and tell them to go to Jesus, who came on earth to seek and save them, and who is the only power that can save us from eternal death.

Sinner, trust in and obey Jesus, and be saved from eternal punishment.

You would like the lamp-chimneys that do not amuse themselves by popping at inconvenient times, wouldn't you?

A chimney ought not to break any more than a tumbler. A tumbler breaks when it tumbles.

DIED.

BERRYMAN—John F. Berryman died July 20th, 1893, at his residence near Gliden, N. C. He was a member of Warwick Baptist church. He had been confined to his bed about four months. He leaves a widow, two daughters and two sons to mourn their loss. He was a very obliging neighbor. Rev. Dr. C. P. Bogart of Edenton, N. C., being in the neighborhood, preached his funeral to a large crowd. A. J. WARD.

MURDEN—Died in Edenton, N. C., July 26th, 1893, after a protracted spell of feeble health, continuing through several years, Mrs. Helen L. Murden, wife of C. M. Murden, Esq., in the forty-seventh year of her age. Again has death invaded our church and taken for his victim one of our most estimable ladies. Sister Murden was converted under the ministration of Rev. Trezevant Harrison, formerly pastor of our church, by whom she was soon baptized into full fellowship. On May 4th, 1870, she was united in marriage to C. M. Murden, Esq. Ever since she has been a member of our church she has exemplified in her walk and demeanor as a Baptist, a wife, a mother, and neighbor, the quiet virtues of a sincere woman, even though suffering most of the time with the pangs and pains of ill health.

She leaves a large circle of friends and relatives, besides her husband, a son and daughter, to mourn her untimely death. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them." W. E. B.

SMITH—At his home in Canetuck, Pender county, July 6th, 1893, in the forty-fourth year of his age, the soul of deacon T. A. Smith, a devoted Christian, faithful husband, watchful father, and kind neighbor, passed away to meet its reward in the beautiful far beyond. He was a man of warm and tender heart, broad charity, and took great delight in the work of Christ. He was a teacher in my Sunday-school at Canetuck chapel, of which church he was a member punctual in his attendance, and always ready to impart what he knew of Christ and his love. His walk before man was correct.

His remains were buried in Canetuck chapel church-yard, the service being conducted by our pastor, Rev. S. D. Swaim, who spoke timely, earnest and impressive words of comfort to the bereaved, and of admonition to the living, pleading watchfulness for the summons, be it at midnight or noon, to be ready as was Bro. Smith, remarking to a friend just before his death, "'Tis sweet to have a Saviour in whom we can trust."

To Sister Smith and the dear children whom he left behind, we say his name will linger as a sweet fragrance, not only in the hearts of his own family, but our entire Sunday-school and church, and all those who knew him. May God bless you, and may your dear husband's and father's death be the gateway of eternal joy to all his loved ones.

SUPERINTENDENT.

MEMORY—Bro. Bryce Memory of Whiteville, N. C., died at the residence of his father, Col. T. S. Memory, June 6th, 1893. His death was a terrible shock to his family and friends and to the whole community in which he lived, where he was greatly beloved by all who knew him. Our dear Bro. Bryce was a good business man, and also an earnest Christian, a devoted husband, a dutiful son, a faithful brother, and a true and tried friend. He was the youngest son of Col. T. S. Memory, so well and favorably known to the brethren of the State. The training of his Christian father and godly mother had its effects upon the heart and mind of our departed brother, for in the morning of life he gave himself to the Lord. He was born March 20th, 1870, and was baptised the latter part of 1884, at Spring Hill Baptist church, Richmond county. Bro. Thomas of South Carolina was conducting a meeting at the time of our brother's conversion, but leaving before the close of the meeting, Bro. Bryce was baptized by Rev. Rufus Ford, now of Newbern. The aged and beloved pastor, Rev. John Monroe, was still living, but was too infirm to administer the ordinance of baptism.

Our brother was married a little over a year ago to Miss Maggie Hall of Albany, Ga., and leaves a young wife and child, with a large host of friends, to mourn their loss. A few weeks ago his beloved wife united with the Baptist church in Whiteville. This was a source of great joy to our dear brother, although he never lived to see her baptized. He often talked with his pastor about the progress and prosperity of the church, and he greatly lamented the lukewarmness and indifference of church members. Our brother showed his faith by his works, and he gave regularly of his means to support the gospel. Every month he paid promptly his portion of the pastor's salary, and if all the church members would imitate his example there would not be a suffering pastor in North Carolina. Our dear brother will be greatly missed, but we feel that our loss is his eternal gain. We have lost a noble young worker from the Master's cause; but the will of God be done. "Blessed is the memory of the just."

PASTOR.

Tributes of Respect.

WHEREAS, God in his wisdom has seen fit to transfer from his vineyard on earth to his immediate presence our beloved pastor, R. R. Day. Be it

Resolved, That we submit to the dispensation of our Great Shepherd, knowing that he worketh all things well, and that we lay before him the work of this church in prayer and beseech his unerring counsel in carrying on the work to his honor and glory on earth; and that while we deeply feel the loss to us, we remember that his dear mother feels the sorrow more keenly than we in being deprived of a noble and generous hearted son, one commanding the esteem and respect of all with whom he came into contact. We tender to her our heartfelt sympathy and direct her to his God as the Healer of all wounds, the Comforter in hours of sorrow, and the One who can make the darkest hours bright and of untold benefit to those who lay their sorrows at his feet.

Resolved, That we endeavor to follow the exemplary life of our brother, that when the Master summons us, we may be found faithfully performing the duties imposed upon us by God, that we, too, may receive a welcome into the Master's presence.

Resolved, That we send a copy of these resolutions to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication, and also one to the mother of Bro. Day.

W. S. TERRELL,
T. R. WALKER,
Com. for Warren Plains Bap. Church.

WHEREAS, On May 11th, 1893, it did please an Allwise Providence to remove from our midst and the church at this place, Sister Annie E. Parker; and whereas, we deem it a duty and privilege to pay this last tribute of respect to the memory of our departed sister; therefore be it

Resolved, That in her death her family has sustained an irreparable loss, and the church been deprived of one of its most useful and devoted members.

Resolved, That while we quietly acquiesce in the dispensations of him to whom the wisdom of the world is folly, yet we deplore the departure of our sister.

Resolved, That we tender to her bereaved family our heartfelt and sincere sympathy.

W. T. CROSS,
JOHN M. OUTLAND,
W. R. HAYES.

Tribute of respect adopted by Garner Baptist church on the death of its pastor, Rev. R. R. Day:—

In the death of Rev. R. R. Day, July 18th, 1893, we as a church have received the saddest blow in our existence. Our pastor was much attached to the individual members of the church, and was ever zealous for our welfare, ever mindful of our spiritual interest. His labor among us had drawn the love and reverence which he deserved. While we mourn our loss, we recognize the power and goodness of God, and thank him for the life of Bro. Day. To the family our warmest sympathy is extended.

A Legend.

There has come to my mind a legend,
A thing that I had half forgot,
And whether I read it or dreamed it,
Ah, well, it mattered not.
It is said that in heaven at twilight
A great bell softly swings,
And man may listen and hearken
To the wonderful music that rings.
If he puts from his heart's inner chamber,
All the passion, pain and strife,
Heartache and weary longing,
That throb in the pulses of life—
If he thrusts from his soul all hatred,
All thoughts of wicked things,
He can hear in the holy twilight
How the bell of the angels rings.
And I think there is in this legend,
If we open our eyes to see,
Somewhat of an inner meaning,
My friend, to you and me.
Let us look in our hearts and question,
Can pure thoughts enter in
To a soul if it be already
The dwelling of thoughts of sin?
So then let us ponder a little;
Let us look in our hearts and see
If the twilight bells of the angels
Could ring for us—you and me.
—Somerville Journal.

Work for the Master.

It was at the close of a sermon in which I had been pressing home to the hearts of my hearers the duty of personal work for the Master in efforts to win souls into his kingdom. My own heart was full of the subject, and I had spoken earnestly in the desire to impress those who listened with a sense of personal responsibility. Several came to me with a renewal of their pledge to be more diligent in the Master's service; but one good sister among them said:

"Yes, all you have told us is true, and probably you think I ought to give my pledge with these to work for the Master, but I can't; and I may as well confess it. I have faults enough without adding hypocrisy. I would gladly work for him if I could, but I can't."

"How do you know until you have tried?" I asked.

"I have tried, and met with utter failure," she replied.

"Well you remember the old refrain we used to sing 'If at first you don't succeed, try, try again,' and that is precisely what you ought to do. Apparent failure often attends our efforts, but if we persevere in the name of the Master we will surely win in the end."

"Good in theory, but practically good for nothing in my case," she insisted. "The fact is that I have no gift for that kind of work, and never will have unless the good Lord makes me all over again."

"We will ask him to 'make you all over again,' then," I said smilingly.

She saw plainly that I did not take any stock in her plea of lack of ability, and with redoubled earnestness she continued: "I am telling you the plain truth, what I feel and know to be true. I have no desire to shirk any duty, nor any feeling of unwillingness to work for the Master in any way that he may lead me; but I have no gift to talk with others about their souls, not even to my nearest and dearest friends; and then, too, my own Christian life is so imperfect they would be saying to me 'Physician, heal thyself,' or else look quizzingly at me as one who preached what she did not practice."

Having long before learned that argument in such cases accomplishes nothing, I replied: "Well, if you can't win souls for Christ by talking, then win them in some other way."

"What other way?"

"By teaching them how to live rightly."

"O dear! I don't know how to live rightly myself, how then can I teach others?"

I looked at her steadily for a moment, and then said "Mrs. Lightbread, you know how to cook."

Now cooking was the one thing above all others upon which she prided herself, and justly, too—for she was acknowledged to be the best cook in all that region. Cooking to her was a fine art; she studied it as a science; found out ways of making the most savory and yet healthful dishes of food at the least expense; ascertained how the raw material could be most economically and profitably used; and of course was neighborhood authority on this subject.

Mrs. Lightbread made no reply, but abashed, blushing with the innate modesty of true womanhood, stood embarrassed and perplexed. After a moment's pause I proceeded, "Use this gift of cooking for the Master."

She looked at me in utter amazement. Her very eyes were full of surprised questioning. Use her knowledge of cooking for the Master! "How?" was the only word that came to her lips.

"Among your neighbors," I said.

"Do you mean that I ought to set up a cooking school for my neighbors?"

"No; and yet I think a good cooking-school, if the women would attend it, would be a means of grace in many a household. Thousands of men—and of women too—are worse sinners than they would be if they had better cooked food to eat. But I shall not send you into a public cooking-school. What I want you to do is to be done in private homes. For instance, there is the Petersen family, poor, lily clad, and consequently unable to attend church. What is the trouble with them? Mr. Petersen is sober, industrious, and earns good wages. Why don't they get along better?"

I looked at her for a reply. She thought a moment, and then said, "I think the fault is with Mrs. Petersen. Her husband provides enough, but she don't seem to know how to use it economically. You know the saying that 'the wife can throw out of the window with a teaspoon more than the husband can throw into the door with a [illegible] and I think that is the case in the [illegible] family."

"You have stated the case exactly. Go then in the name of Christ and remedy it."

"Would that be work for the Master?"

"Certainly it would. Anything that betters the condition of any human life is work for him. And then, if in this way you should lead them to believe in him, your work would culminate in the grandest success."

"But I don't see any connection between teaching people how to cook and leading souls to Christ," she said doubtingly.

"You will if you try it," I replied.

"Well, suppose there is, I could never find it. I don't see how to begin, nor how to proceed. Indeed, the very idea looks to me absurd. Winning souls for Christ through cooking!" She laughed half-derisively at the very thought of it.

"I am in earnest, deeply in earnest about this matter," I said; "I am extremely anxious to have you make the trial."

Instantly a deep sense of willingness came into her eyes, and she said "Tell me where to begin, and how to proceed, and I will make the trial."

"I cannot give specific details of direction," I answered. "In all such efforts much depends upon the circumstances which arise. To meet these requires tact. You must depend upon your own judgment under divine guidance. At any point I will give you such counsel as I may be able to, but now I can only suggest general directions."

"I understand," said she.

"Well, I would say first gain Mrs. Petersen's confidence, for without that you will fail. Then casually introduce the subject of cooking by telling her of some new ways of preparing food which you have learned; of the expense and the economy; of the methods you have found most profitable; and of what you have learned by actual experience. Do all this in such a way as not to suggest the least hint that you have any special purpose in it, and if she is like the rest of humanity she will ask you to instruct her in your methods of cooking, and thus put herself under your leadership. Well, by the time you have taught Mrs. Petersen how to cook well and economically, the way will be open for you to lead her still higher—perhaps into the fold of Christ."

Mrs. Lightbread listened thoughtfully, and finally said "I will try it," and she did try it.

It will not be necessary to follow Mrs. Lightbread through the details of her work in the Petersen family. She won Mrs. Petersen's confidence completely, and through her that of Mr. Peterson also; she taught Mrs. Petersen how to cook royally and economically, and at the end of three months the husband was unbounded in praise of his wife's culinary skill, while both husband and wife rejoice in living as they never had lived before, on food fit for a king, and yet had a surplus of the week's wages left over. Soon better clothing was purchased, a better appearance made among their neighbors, and the tone of their personal character seemed elevated. They began to feel a desire to rise, and it was an easy thing for Mrs. Lightbread to induce them to attend church. They listened appreciatingly, and in the midst of a revival a few weeks after both were converted and received into the church.

At the close of the service in which Mr. and Mrs. Petersen had united with the people of God, Mrs. Lightbread came to me with a radiant face, tears of joy in her eyes, and taking me by the hand said "I thank you."

"For what?"

"For showing me how I could do something for the Master."

Every earnest, willing soul may find that the ordinary work of life may be made work for the Master, and effective in winning souls into his kingdom.—M. E. Dunham, D. D., LL. D., in The Christian at Work.

How do you do when you buy shoes or clothing? Don't you go to the place (if you can find it) where they tell you that you may wear the articles out, and then, if you're not satisfied, they'll refund the money? Why not do the same when you buy medicine?

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is sold on that plan. It's the only blood-purifier so certain and effective that it can be guaranteed to benefit or cure, in every case, or you have your money back.

It's not like the ordinary spring medicines or sarsaparillas. All the year round, it cleanses, builds up, and invigorates the system. If you're bilious, run-down, or dyspeptic, or have any blood-taint, nothing can equal it as a remedy.

Purity of Thought.

Boys and girls as they grow will learn the ins and outs of this wicked world. If their parents do not give them this knowledge, somebody else will, and the manner in which this information is given is, in all moral respects, vastly more important than the matter. The parent should instruct the child in everything it should know, satisfy its curiosity within proper limits, and thus pre-occupy the ground that would otherwise be sown by chance cultivators and more with the tares of vice than with the wheat of knowledge.

It is simply astonishing how soon young children pick up slang words, vile words, profane words, and attach to them meaning. Objectionable words and phrases seem armed with hooked burrs and cling tenaciously to the mind they catch hold of. It is equally surprising how instinctively they conceal all this knowledge from their parents. It is not possible for the mother to cultivate too great intimacy with her child. She should have the juvenile heart spread out before her as a mirror, reflecting every thought, every feeling, every passion of the child. Thus she will be able judiciously to administer antidotes to vice and build up safeguards to virtue. When there is a perfect understanding between parents and children; when the daughter feels that she can carry every thought and desire to her mother, and the son is in full sympathy and counsel with his father, there is little danger that the happiness of Christian parents will be wrecked by profligacy of their children, little danger that the children will wander far from approved lines of conduct.—Christian Advocate.

Mother at Prayer.

Once, says a writer, I suddenly opened the door of my mother's room and saw her on her knees beside her chair, and heard her speak my name in prayer. I quickly and quietly withdrew with a feeling of awe and reverence in my heart. Soon I went away from home to school, then to college, then into life's sterner duties. But I never forgot that one glimpse of my mother at prayer, nor the one word—my own name—which I heard her utter. Well did I know that what I had seen that day was but a glimpse of what was going on every day in that sacred closet of prayer, and the consciousness strengthened me a thousand times in duty, in danger, and in struggle. When death came at last and sealed those lips, the sorest sense of loss I felt was the knowledge that no more would my mother be praying for me.—Selected.

IT'S A SIGN OF DANGER,

when pimples, blotches and eruptions appear on the skin, no matter how slight. It warns you that your blood isn't pure. Heed the warning while there is yet time; clear up your system and purify the blood by taking Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It rouses every organ into natural action, purifies and enriches the blood and through it cleanses and invigorates the whole system. It attacks all scrofulous, skin and scalp diseases in the right way—by purifying the blood.

The diseases that it cures come from a torpid liver, or from impure blood. For everything of this nature, it is the only guaranteed remedy.

In Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Biliousness; all Bronchial, Throat, and Lung Affections, even Consumption (or Lung-scrofula) in its earlier stages—if it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

IT HAS not been very many years since men, surveying our vast extent of territory and forming a small estimate of its inexhaustible resources, were visionary enough to suppose that this new western government of ours might escape the many painful evils which had so sorely afflicted the nations of the eastern hemisphere. Surely, thought they, we can profit by the sad experience of falling and fallen empires, and build a government whose highest end shall be the welfare of its citizens; surely this youngest and most promising of peoples would be spared the discipline of poverty and misery. But sadly they have never realized their dreams. We know now that it is not, and has not been, and the promise of the future is waning. We are not howling calamity, but it cannot be denied that our nation has endured and is enduring as much, if not more, than those by the fate of which we should have profited. There is something vitally wrong somewhere. We know that the spirit of Christian interest has not pervaded our legislative assemblies; we know that many of our laws have been enacted for other ends than those of "Liberty, Equality and Fraternity;" and we believe that in the neglect of these matters lay many of the causes of the present widespread discontent. As we are situated now the rich are too rich and the poor are too poor; and the divergence increases with the years. God will never smile on a nation which neglects his laws. We must turn about. As long as our people look only to the laws of human existence with earthly eyes, the struggle for existence will be the same old struggle of the older civilizations. We must re-organize slowly on sounder principles, and there is no time like the present to begin. The duty of the hour is to bring man nearer to man, to bridge the widening gulf that divides the rich from the poor. When man's sense of duty to his fellow-man is aroused and awakened, we may expect to see many of the present iniquitous statues replaced with legislation that shall voice the conscience of the people. Until such statues are enacted, until the security of our government rests on the brotherhood of its citizens, this will be a land of strife and hatred, corrupt politics and a favored and unfavored class. This is the work of the church. She alone can reveal to men the only true foundation of progress and prosperity—an impregnable belief and hope in an allwise, loving and just Father, and an unalterable love, respect, and compassion for his children.

THE editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate seems unusually, and, in our opinion, unduly aroused at the present prospect of the negro race, aided and abetted by Northerners, superseding the white race in America. We simply desire to re assure our brother that there is absolutely no danger. The whites have the advantage of centuries of civilization over the negroes, which the latter can never overcome. We want to have them educated; they are indisputably and irrevocably citizens of the United States, and none will deny that they may inherit eternal life. Where there is one educational institution endowed for negroes, we can name ten that are better for whites, and if a negro gains the ascendency over a white by honest effort, we don't believe he should be blamed. But this is not by any means the case. The Advocate has fallen into the very common error of deducing general conclusions from specific instances. That twenty negroes have become of wealth and influence is no reason that the whole race is rivalling the white man's attainments; that a few whites have fallen below the negro is not the negroe's fault, and is no reason why we should fear that such will be the fate of our sons; that some few are high headed and insolent after acquiring an ordinary education, is no less than can be said of some young students of the white race, and is no reason why the rest of the race should be consigned to a life of poverty and intellectual darkness; that "the son of a dead minister once honoring city pulpits is found as a servitor in the kitchen of a negro magnate," is not the fault of the negro, but of the son who threw away good opportunities, and is no reason why the negro should be hindered in his efforts to secure a broader field of labor, and should not "arouse the conscience of the church." Handicapped by centuries of utter darkness, the negro can never hope to more than keep within hearing distance of the quickening strides of the white man. We need have no fears. The race question has been quietly resting of late, and we hope it may never become active again, but if it should there is but one way to settle it, and that is by education in negro schools. The more the negro knows, the better citizen he is, and the greater are his advantages for serving God. The same is true of every human being.

THE discussion of the "Home Rule" bill in the English Parliament during the past three months has excited an almost universal interest in the country for the welfare of which it was framed, as well as in the bill itself. The bill is quite lengthy and exhaustive, but the substance of it can be found in any of our State constitutions, though the provisions for Irish legislations are considerably more restrictive. But the country itself presents a far more interesting study. From statistics compiled by James G. Blaine we gather the following: Ireland has a population of more than 5,000,000 souls on an acreage not quite equal to that of the State of Maine. On this small territory she produced in one year 4,000,000 bushels of wheat, 8,000,000 of barley, 70,000,000 of oats, 110,000,000 of potatoes, 185,000,000 of turnips and mangels—greater in weight than the best cotton crop of the United States; in the same year she produced 60,000,000 pounds of flax, 350,000,000 pounds of cabbages, and 3,800,000 tons of hay. Moreover, in that year she fed within her territory 4,000,000 head of cattle, 3,500,000 of sheep, 560,000 horses and 200,000 mules—all in a country of less territory than Maine, a single State of our 48. How can poverty pervade a land so productive? And yet it does; and the reason is the grasping oppression of English land-owners deprives the laborer of his reward. In rental to English land-owners, and in taxes, most of which go to England, these 5,000,000 people pay annually $15,000,000.

Our Board and the "Gospel Mission."

Numerous requests have come for information in regard to the withdrawal of brethren Crawford, Herring, Bostick and League from connection with the Foreign Mission Board. In response to these requests, the following statement has been prepared. It does not undertake, of course, to bring out all the facts contained in over a hundred letters and papers now on file. Indeed, the differences below indicated soon become complicated with personal and pecuniary questions into which I am unwilling to enter. One of the brethren withdrew informally, we hardly know when or how, two voluntarily tendered their resignations, and one was requested to resign. Sharp things have been said about the tyranny and lavish expenditures of the Board, but we trust to the common sense of the average Baptist not to be misled by statements that are obviously extravagant, and in all controversies with our brethren we deem it better to endure in silence rather than to retort unkindly. What I now write may seem to lack the spice of personality. It will probably be unsatisfactory to the advocates of the "Gospel Mission;" perhaps equally unsatisfactory to the most ardent supporters of the Board. Extremists have a great advantage in any public discussion—they see only one side and can state that clearly and forcibly. But the interests of truth are better subserved by trying honestly to look at both sides, and thus comparing schemes though both be faulty, in so far as they are human.

There are, as it seems to me, two radical differences in principle and several resultant differences in policy, between the brethren above named and the Board.

DIFFERENCES IN PRINCIPLE.

1. Church Independence.—They hold that a local church or group of churches ought to select, appoint and sustain its own missionary, and that he should be responsible and should report his work only to the appointing body. We also believe in the complete independence of the churches in all local matters, but claim that, according to the New Testament teaching, there should be fraternal co-operation between them in all matters of wider concern. Hence arise Councils, Presbyteries, District and General Associations, and the Southern Baptist Convention. If the Convention, through its Board, should accept the ideas advanced in Dr. Crawford's tract entitled "Churches to the Front," it would simply commit suicide. Indeed, the good Doctor's common sense has saved him from a rigid application of his own theory and compelled him to give it up by saying "church, or group of churches." The group of churches, with a committee to represent them, differs in size but is precisely the same in principle as the Convention with its Board. Moreover, we believe that in the divine economy there is a special provision made for "diversities of gifts," and that often it becomes the duty of a church in one locality to sustain a man from another and distant place, one whom it has never seen and could not appoint. Herein lies the utility of a central board to select men. It is also obviously more economical.

2. Aim of Missions.—On this there are two diverse views. One set of learned and very pious interpreters emphasize the work of evangelizing and proclaiming as a herald. They regard Matt. 24: 14 as prophetic of a time now near at hand, and propose to prepare for the coming of the Lord by heralding the gospel among the nations. They do not expect to gain many converts, but to evangelize the world in preparation for the millenium. These are the Premillenarians, and furnish not a few of the most zealous laborers for missions, including such men as Drs. Gordon and Pierson. Another set of expositors are chary about attempting exact interpretation of prophecy until it has been fulfilled, but stand firmly upon the plain terms of the Great Command (Matt. 28: 10, 20) and its practical exemplification in Acts and in the Epistles, in which preaching and teaching are regularly combined. These labor to save souls, to train converts, to establish churches as centres of influence—candle-sticks in the midst of darkness. Now it seems to me that our brethren above named, without being fully committed, lean strongly towards the former theory, while we adhere rather to the latter. This may explain in part the paucity of apparent results in North China, for the rule is "according to your faith be it unto you."

DIFFERENCES OF POLICY.

Out of these different views on matters of principle necessarily arise differences in practice, of which I may mention:—

1. They claim the fullest personal liberty as servants of the Lord and of his churches (a) to do their own work in their own way, which we fully and freely concede and have always conceded; (b) to remove from place to place or to return to this country at pleasure, which we hold to be inconsistent with reasonable rules to which they have personally subscribed, and (c) to criticise publicly the work of our missionaries in other fields, which seems to us unbrotherly. On this last point, they maintain that the good of the cause and the interests of the truth must over-ride all personal considerations. We think differently. Let me illustrate our position by my own case as a member of the Faculty of Richmond College. I may sometimes see in the management of the institution or in the instruction of the classes what seems to me injurious and wrong. I have a perfect right to talk of it kindly with my colleagues, or to ask the attention of the Board of Trustees, but to ventilate my views in the newspapers or with students and patrons, would, in my view, be good reason for the Trustees to sever my connection, on the ground that I was hacking at the taproot of the tree that supported me.

2. They are entirely opposed to the appropriation of any mission money for schools. This Board has never gone so far in school work as some other denominations, nor so far as our brethren of the Missionary Union. Our fundamental rule is in these words: "The oral communication of the gospel, the formation of churches, the training and ordination of a native ministry, the translation and circulation of the Scriptures, and the extension of missionary work by the aid of native laborers, supported, as far as practicable, by the natives themselves, shall be regarded as the chief business of our missionaries." (Art. I, Sec. 1); but it seems to us that schools for the instruction of promising young men and women in the doctrines of the Bible, and even for secular instruction of the children of converts from heathenism or Romanism are almost essential to the establishment of self-supporting, self-propagating churches. The girls in Mexico must either grow up without education, or get the semblance of it in an atmosphere of superstition, or we must provide schools for them. The case is even worse in China and in Africa. If Christian and denominational schools are needed in America, how much more in heathen lands?

The amount of money devoted to schools is very much less than is usually supposed. The schools in Shanghai are supported, as I am informed, entirely from the private means of Mrs. Yates, her daughter, and other missionaries. Dr. Graves' class in Canton is nothing more than a Bible class, meeting several hours every day, instead of one hour on Sunday, or a class in theology designed for the better instruction of those who give promise of usefulness in the churches. The appropriation asked for the seven schools in Canton this year is $1,277. A large proportion of this comes to us specifically designated for that purpose. Bro. Z. C. Taylor, at Bahia, one of our most economical and devoted missionaries, has been so much impressed with the dangers besetting the children of his church members that, when last in this country, he insisted upon taking back with him a young lady to establish a school for these children. The Madero Institute in Mexico was purchased and is sustained by contributions given for this specific purpose. The sum asked and appropriated for this year to its current expenses is $1,100, nearly, if not quite, all of which comes to us so designated from Girls' Societies throughout the country. The principal contribution to the support of the Institute from mission funds is in the salaries of three or four ladies who teach in the school and at the same time do missionary work in connection with the church and in house-to-house visitation in the city of Saltillo. The appropriation asked and given for schools in Africa this year is just $200. So it appears (and I have carefully examined all the estimates) that the cost to our treasury, of the schools in mission stations, is just $2,577 a year, and that a large proportion of this we could not honestly appropriate to any other object.

3. They hold that it is wrong to pay natives for any religious work, claiming that such payment subsidizes them and leads them to profess Christianity for the sake of gain. It seems to us that the troubles of which they complain have existed in all countries and at all times since the days of Christ and his apostles, (Matt. 7: 22; Phil. 3: 18, 19) and that the proper way to avoid them is to observe the utmost care in the selection of native helpers. It is manifestly unfair to class Pagengouth, Paschetto, Ferraris, Bellondi, and others of our Italian evangelists, or some we could name in Mexico, with the native assistants in China or Africa. But China also must eventually be converted, if at all, by Chinese. America cannot spare preachers enough to reach her four hundred millions. To hold that all natives who are willing to preach have been subsidized, is not only to distrust them, but to distrust the grace of God. If we show utter want of confidence in converts from heathenism, they will hardly deserve confidence. We hold, therefore, that self-sustaining churches will be established earlier by giving such help as may be needed to men who seem most worthy and most consecrated and who give evidence of being called of God, and by gradually diminishing this help as the churches thus formed become able to support their own preachers. This is the plan pursued by our State Mission Boards. This is the plan which has already borne good fruit in and around Canton, our oldest and in many respects most successful mission field.

4. Bro. Herring, as I understand him, though I am unable to say that the other brethren agree, thinks that the missionaries sent out by a church or group of churches should be allowed to endure hardship, and even death, when their supporters fail to furnish means in due time. One of them argues, "of course the money will come; it is perfectly natural, for the people know they are depending on God and on them for support," but Bro. Herring fears that some precious lives may have to be sacrificed in order to teach the churches at home this lesson. We hold that men whom God has called to this great work deserve such support as will enable them to do it most effectively, that this support should be regularly furnished, so that they may give their strength to the work, and that, for this purpose, it is wiser to enlist a large number of churches, so that any deficiency or failure in one quarter may be made up in another, according to the principle laid down in 2 Cor. 8: 14. There is unquestionably more of romance, more of what is commonly called heroism, in the new plan than in the old, but we believe that as "faith without works is dead," so a bare trust in God without the use of means suggested by sound common sense, is fanaticism. The shores of the Dark Continent, north, west and east, are strewed with the wrecks of independent efforts, and, for want of wisdom, more missionaries have been buried in Africa than are now laboring there. The China Inland Mission is constantly held up as a model; its measure of success is largely due to the immense personal magnetism of its founder, and even with this it has been obliged to establish a Council or Board of Control at Shanghai. Paul was the prince of foreign missionaries—no man ever had a firmer trust in God, no man ever more wisely availed himself of all advantages.

5. The brethren insist on the economy of wearing native dress, living in native houses, subsisting on native food. We say, very well, where it can be done without injury to influence or to health. The plan works satisfactorily in Italy, fairly in Japan, Brazil and Mexico, but how would it do among the naked denizens of mud huts in Africa? Cheap, certainly, in money, but at terrible cost of health and life. As to China, we judge that there are some sections of the vast empire in which it is wise to adopt partly or fully the native mode of living, others in which it would be unwise. On these matters each of our missionaries is allowed the fullest liberty. Several of our most honored brethren have tried the cheaper style of living and we gladly accepted the relief to an always burdened treasury, and then when they have found that their influence was weakened or their health undermined, we have cheerfully supplied larger means.

Let me say in passing that there seems to be a very general impression that the Board, like a great corporation, pays certain fixed salaries, which employees have a right to draw whether they need it or not. Such is not at all the case. We undertake to furnish a comfortable support and name $50 a month as a "general rule," with deviation, more or less, "for good and sufficient reasons." A wise economy in the administration of mission funds is unquestionably a duty of the highest importance, but the sacrifice of health or life to save dollars is not wise economy.

Pardon the length into which I have been betrayed. Much more tingles on the tip of my pen, but I must close with a brief response to one specific question about Bro. Bostick's statement "that 59 per cent of all money raised for foreign missions by Southern Baptists (in 1890 91) was expended otherwise than in sending out and sustaining missionaries on the field." He gets this by a manipulation of our published facts and figures according to the requirements of his own theory. There is a proverb that "nothing is more false than figures, unless it be facts." To show the utter worthlessness of his arithmetic, I may mention that the calculation by which he reaches this result takes no account whatever of designated funds. Bro. Bostick no doubt thinks that money ought not to be designated for Permanent Work, or for Schools, or for support of native helpers. But as a matter of fact 25 to 30 per cent of all our receipts are so designated, and we cannot honestly appropriate them except according to the instructions of the donors. Again, he excludes from the roll of missionaries all except those sent out from this country. In Paul's second journey, he would have counted the apostle and possibly Silas, but not Timothy or Luke. Such calculations are manifestly unfair.

Nehemiah.

In an age when shingles rot, and shoes are made of paper soles, and ground pease becomes ground coffee, and cotton parades as wool, and paint is thinner than water, and every tradesman and public officer and religious institution needs a periodic overhauling, it is refreshing to read of a man who restored an immense wall solidly and systematically, scorned assistance from local croakers, compelled each mason to do his own and not his neighbors' work, gave every laborer a sword and a trowel, feed 150 at his table each day, thought more of public duty than of private comfort, did away with financial pawn-brokers, abolished slavery without blood, refused any salary as governor, compiled an accurate census of the people, instituted a genuine worship and reading of the law, ordained a revival without evangelists and a general penitence without rant, provided an equitable system of representation, separated the people on a basis of character, cleansed the temple with care, forbade Sunday labor, interdicted such marriages as Solomon sanctioned, and marvellously governed as many people as the State of New York contains without the aid of a party organ or machine. What is civilization anyway?—The Watchman.

It is a good thing for the peace and prosperity of the soul to be alone in some places.

Don't forget that what people will say will be wrong.

THE SATURDAY MEETING.

It is the custom of the large majority of our country churches to have preaching on Saturday before their regular Sabbath for service, followed at once after preaching by a church conference. We know enough of the trials and worries of our pastors in charge of country churches, and also enough of the worries of many of our most faithful church members, to venture the remark that the Saturday meeting is often a dull affair, and sometimes, even in large churches, the attendance is so slim as to give the pastor the "ministerial blues," and cause no little worry to the faithful few that do attend. It is a well known fact that at these Saturday meetings attempts are made to regulate the business affairs of the church. Committees are appointed to attend to various matters that may need attention. Collections to meet running expenses, and often to pay a balance on the pastor's salary, are called for; plans are set on foot to meet present and future obligations toward mission, Sunday-school work, &c. All this has often to be done by a small fraction of the church, or a corporal's guard of its membership. Brethren are always complaining of those who are absent, and who fail to bear their part of church expenses; and these complaints are often just. The members propose various remedies to right this state of things. Among the most common is that of calling the church roll and marking absentees, with the understanding that if a member is absent two or three consecutive meetings that he be required to appear at the next and give his reason for being absent. This plan may be worked for a while, but it is almost sure to break down because of the worry in enforcing it. Then the church may appoint a general roll-call, and require that all the members be present and answer to their names, and failing in this, they pass under church censure. The pastor often leaves such a meeting discouraged, and the next day may make an earnest appeal to the membership to meet him at the next regular conference. Under this fresh stimulant the attendance at the next conference may slightly increase; but things again soon settle into their normal channel. Those that neglect the Saturday meeting often claim that they are too busy to come, or it is too hot, or too cold, or "it was raining," etc., etc.

Ah, the Saturday meetings! How many pastors dream about them, and almost have nightmares over them! How hard it is to preach with hope and spirit to those that do come, when he knows that two thirds of the church are at their homes, on their farms, or "gone to town," etc. If a few good pastors who ride through cold or heat, five, ten or fifteen miles to meet their churches would suddenly resign at their Saturday meeting and give as their reason the non-attendance of the members, it would have a fine effect on some of our churches. But such conduct on the part of the pastor would be considered the result of hasty temper, and a good man hesitates to lay himself open to such a charge. Yet some of our churches sadly need a few such lessons. Really a church member has no more right to fail to meet his pastor on Saturday than the pastor has to fail to meet him. Would that we could say something here to comfort our troubled pastors and the veterans who stand by them in regard to this thing. We think we know one sovereign remedy. It is rather heroic in its nature, but we verily believe it would help to solve the difficulties of the situation, and that is if nothing else will do, turn the stay-at-home do-nothing member out of the church. This, however, should be a last resort, and should not be used until proper effort is made to work the careless member up to duty. The pastor ought to get a list of these stay-at home people, visit them at their homes, show them that he loves them, and thus win them to the church and to duty. He can be greatly aided in this by the deacons and other older members of the church.

Sometimes, again, under the influence of a good meeting it is wise for the pastor to preach directly to the whole church, and get the members to promise, before God, and in one another's presence, that they will be more faithful in attending the Saturday meetings.

All this may appear rather common place to our city pastors who may have little trouble in the line indicated, and who do not find the Saturday meeting question to grapple with. But we know we have struck a responsive chord in the hearts" of many of our brethren, and those who aid them. Perhaps two or three well written articles from some of our more experienced pastors living in the country would be timely and throw some light on this rather trying question. In the meantime let us assure these dear brethren of our hearty sympathy with them in this and the other trials through which they have to pass. Verily, many of them have learned by experience how to "endure hardness as good soldiers of Christ." They are among our best friends and also among the staunchest supporters of the paper of which, in the providence of God, we have had charge a goodly number of years.

And now, to show our good-will for these faithful laborers in the Lord's great harvest-field, let us say a few words to the very brethren and sisters to whom this paper is devoted, and who may be the cause of much worry to the pastor. We will not attempt to scold you; that may not be the best way to reach you. Many of you do not mean to worry your pastor, but you are doing that very thing. Do quit that miserable halting way you have, brother; go to all the meetings of your church. Many of you are faithful to your lodge or your Alliance. Why should you make an exception of your church? And don't whine, and say you can pay nothing to help your church. You can and do spend a great deal through the year on yourself and your family; can't you spend something on Jesus Christ and his work? Any one who can live from one year's end to another ought to be ashamed to say or think that he or she can pay nothing to his or her church. "Where there is a will, there is a way," will certainly apply in this case. We dismiss this by saying, about in the words in which we closed a recent editorial, brother, be something or nothing.

THE CHOICE OF A NEW SECRETARY.

It has transpired that Dr. Robert J. Willingham was elected to succeed Dr. H. A. Tupper as Corresponding Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board three weeks ago, but the announcement of his election was withheld until he could consider the matter. It is now stated that he has decided to accept, and will enter on the duties of the office in the coming fall.

Dr. Willingham was born in South Carolina, reared in Macon, Ga., and has for the past six years resided in Tennessee, where he is pastor of the First Baptist church of Memphis. He belongs to an old and distinguished Southern family, and has had the advantage of being raised in a Christian home. He was educated at the University of Georgia, where he received the degree of M. A. His career is both creditable and interesting. After leaving college, he spent some years in successful pursuit of teaching and the mercantile business, intending eventually to adopt the law as his profession. When on the verge of coming to the Bar, he felt a call to preach the gospel, and after several months of struggling against his convictions, threw aside his bright prospects in the law, and took a one year's course at the Louisville Theological Seminary, after which he entered on the work as a pastor in Georgia. He had charge of the Talbotton and Barnesville churches of Georgia successively, and then was called to Chattanooga, Tenn., and then to his present pastorate in Memphis, which he has occupied to the glory of God for the past two years. His ministry has been peculiarly blessed in all of his pastorates, and to-day he is among the foremost men of his State. He is only thirty-nine years of age, blessed with a splendid physique, has an eloquent tongue, and is of untiring energy. In him the Board will have a Secretary in whom is combined the consecration of a successful minister with the training of the excellent man of business. A better selection could hardly have been made, and we hope that the prayers of God's people will ascend that the brother may be greatly blessed in his new position for which he is so well qualified.

Dr. H. H. Harris, who has so nobly conducted the affairs of the Board since the resignation of Dr. Tupper, cannot be praised too much for the sacrifice that he made to sustain it in this trying position. He has clearly demonstrated that as President of the Board, the Baptists have a man who is always ready and willing to sustain its work.

VIRGINIA AND NORTH CAROLINA.

Every now and then some brother, with only a partial knowledge of the facts, seems to think it would be better for the Baptists of this State to adopt the Virginia plan of work in State Missions. Let us see the facts. At the Dan River Association in Virginia last week, Wm. Ellyson the Corresponding Secretary of their State Mission Board said: "There has been no practical advance in State Missions in Virginia within three years."—Religious Herald.

In ten years our North Carolina plan of working in State Missions has gained more than fourfold, has been enlarged every year, and was never more successful than this year. The Virginia plan requires four men to do what our Corresponding Secretary does in this State. The Treasurer's report to our Convention shows the amounts given

To State Missions for	1882.....	$ 3,000.77
" " "	1892.....	14,272.95

Here is a "practical advance" for State Missions in North Carolina in ten years of $11,272 18. There is, we think, no place in the world where Baptists have grown more rapidly in the past ten years than in North Carolina. Much of our growth has come through the wise, vigorous and united prosecution of this department of missions. It has multiplied many fold our numbers, our ability, our mission spirit, and our enthusiasm. During September, October and November, State Missions should be in our thoughts, on our hearts, in our prayers, and before our churches.

The people, all of our Baptist people in the State, should know the large and gracious results of this work, and its pressing needs now upon us. Here is real foundation work, which we cannot afford to neglect.

The last Convention unanimously and wisely passed the following:

"Resolved, That State Missions is a work of vital and transcendent importance, and should be wisely and vigorously prosecuted by our Board till a self-sustaining Baptist church shall be established in easy reach of every person in North Carolina.

Resolved 2d, That in order to carry out the above resolution as speedily as possible, every association, church and individual member be urged to aid liberally in the work by their prayers and contributions."

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

PILOT MOUNTAIN ASSOCIATION.

This Association met with the church at Waughtown. Rev. L. G. Broughton preached the introductory. We only heard the last part of the discourse, but could see that the sermon was just such an one as suited the occasion. The first day there was a fine gathering. Nearly all the churches were represented.

The refreshing rain came in time to encourage the brethren, and this did much to give a hopeful aspect to the meeting.

The reading of the church letters which is always tedious, was welcomed by the fact that all the churches had paid their pledges for last year, notwithstanding the unprecedented hard times which have pressed specially hard upon some of the churches of this section of the State.

Just as everybody expected, Bro. D. F. King and J. T. Valentine were again elected Moderator and Clerk of the Association. The organization was completed on Wednesday.

Quite a number of visiting brethren were in attendance, and the session gave promise to be one of the very best this body ever had.

Wednesday at 10 o'clock the report on Periodicals was read by Rev. H. A. Brown, who made a speech, the results of which were felt especially by the representative of the RECORDER in the large amount of subscriptions and renewals which he received. Brethren Lindsay and Smith also made good talks on this subject, to which the Association listened with delight.

The report on Education was read by Rev. L. G. Broughton. The report itself was full of substance, and contained some valuable suggestions. The reader of the report followed in a speech which was strong, stirring and eminently practical. Broughton is nothing if not progressive, and in his effort on this subject he fully sustained himself.

Home Missions was discussed by Rev. W. H. Wilson and Dr. C. Durham. It is only once in a while we see two such voices geared together as these two brethren possess. No one, however, can doubt the interest these brethren created who know them, and especially when it is added that Bro. Bryan, returned missionary from China, took part in the discussion.

The report on State Missions was read by Bro. T. S. Sprinkle. This is an interest highly favored by this Association, and the discussion of it is always interesting and profitable.

Brethren Bryan and Herring, returned missionaries from China, discussed the subject of Foreign Missions. These brethren were listened to with much interest by the Association.

Bro. Bryan told in a most interesting manner where he had been, and taking the example of the great Apostle, related particularly the things which the Lord had wrought through him.

Bro. Herring's address was in special reference to the new methods of doing mission work which he and other brethren are advocating.

We left Saturday, and thus missed a share in the interesting program for Sunday.

The meeting was a great success. No body was ever better entertained than was this by the brethren and citizens of Waughtown.

THE BEULAH ASSOCIATION

met with the church in Greensboro. Like it generally is when our Associations meet in towns, there were very few present. The question of changing the boundaries of the Association has been discussed for several years. This was effected at the late session. It is now arranged so that Greensboro becomes the center of the territory, making all the churches much more accessible than before. The churches on the boundary lines are invited to join the Association. Some have already signified their intention to come into this Association, and others will no doubt do so when they see the best interest of the churches will be promoted by this new arrangement.

Dr. C. A. Rominger, who has so long and so well served the body as Moderator, declined to be re elected, and Rev. J. R. Jones was made Moderator, and Dr. F. P. Tucker was re-elected Clerk.

The churches were all represented and the pledges, we think, had been generally paid for the past year.

The various objects of the Convention were discussed with the usual interest. On Wednesday we had a fine discussion of general education by Dr. Taylor of Wake Forest and Rev. W. L. Wright of Richmond, Va. These addresses were listened to with unusual interest by all present.

The introductory sermon was preached by Rev. J. A. Howard of Reidsville. Bro. Howard always prepares his sermons well, and on this occasion his theme, "Simplicity," was most appropriate, and aptly applied to all the relations of life as well as to religious service.

The subject of Foreign Missions was discussed by Rev. F. M. Royall, Rev. C. C. Newton, returned missionary from Africa, and brethren Bryan and Herring, returned missionaries from China. At the close of the discussion on this subject the Association declined to adopt the report which was read, and in which reference was made to the new departure in doing Foreign Mission work. And instead of this, a substitute was offered by Rev. C. A. G. Thomas, pastor of the church in Greensboro, endorsing as an Association the methods heretofore used in carrying on this department of our work.

Bro. Bryan is making a fine impression on the Associations in the clear, lucid and comprehensive account he gives of the work in China. Bro. Herring says he has been greatly encouraged by the support he is getting from different sources to carry on the work on the new plan which he proposes to work.

The good people of Greensboro entertained the body handsomely, and the disappointment was that there were so few present to enjoy the liberal hospitality which had awaited the coming of the representatives of the different churches.

We were sorry to have to leave before the session closed on Thursday. The discussion on Sunday schools promised to be of decided interest. The church at Greensboro is thoroughly interested in the Sunday school work, and we have no doubt of the interest which was shown in the discussion.

Now that the boundaries of the Association have been changed so as to afford better facilities to get to the Associations, and which too will be a revival of the Union Meetings, we look for more life and interest in the old Beulah which, as statistics show, so far as work and contributions go, stands along with the best of our Associations in the State.

....The workmen have commenced putting Wake Forest College in order for the next term. It will be ready to give a hearty welcome to 300 students September 1st. Meanwhile, brethren, say a good word for it wherever you go.

....Rev. C. S. Cashwell has resigned the pastorate of the church at Mocksville, and will take charge of the church at Hickory after Sept. 1st. Bro. Cashwell was highly esteemed at Mocksville, and we wish him abundant success at Hickory.

....The Baptist Echo is a new North Carolina publication. We read its first issue with interest. We will say this much by way of encouragement: if the Echo can survive the hard times in which it was born, we are assured that it will never die.

....Rev. J. E. White preached in the Raleigh Tabernacle again on Sunday last. His sermons were pronounced excellent. Rev. A. M. Simms of Texas, recently called to this church is resting at his former home in Virginia, preparatory to taking charge of it on September 1st.

....Rev. T. T. Speight, D. D., of Windsor, was in the city for a short time on Friday, the 11th, on his return from Greensboro, where he was elected chaplain of the Farmers' State Alliance. We regret that we were not in our office when he called.

....We have received the announcement of Mars Hill College for 1893–'94, giving an outline of the courses for next year's work. Prof. Thos. M. Hufham, who has successfully conducted this institution, has resigned, and is succeeded by Prof. J. M. Cheek.

....Rev. W. R. Gwaltney was in the city recently on his return from the Beulah Association. Bro. Gwaltney is absorbed in the work of ministerial education, and is prosecuting it with great zeal. He needs the co-operation and the prayers of the people in his efforts.

....Rev. W. E. Wilkins of Greenville, S. C., will occupy the pulpit of the Baptist church next Sunday morning and night. It is the regular day for services at this church, and Mr. Wilkins will supply regularly during the month of August.—Gastonia Gazette, Aug. 3.

....The Baptist church at Edgefield, S. C., has called Dr. L. R. Gwaltney of the First church of Athens, Ga., to become its pastor September 1st. Dr. Gwaltney was pastor of the Edgefield church twenty-five years ago, and should be congratulated that after so long a time his people have not forgotten him.

....The Baptist Home Mission Monthly for August is a special educational number. It contains interesting sketches of Southern negro institutions maintained by Northern philanthropy. We note with pleasure interesting sketches of Shaw University and its president, Rev. H. M. Tupper, D. D., of this city.

....Our subscribers should read with interest the excellent article in this issue, "Our Board and the 'Gospel Mission,'" by Dr. H. H. Harris, Secretary of the Board ad interim. He gives us a particularly clean exposition of the whole matter in a style that is at once earnest, attractive and convincing.

....Rev. C. A. Woodson, late of Durham, N. C., has succeeded Bro. Fitcher in the care of three churches in Campbell. He is pleasing the people very much. He will make Lynchburg his home. We welcome you, Bro. Woodson, and wish for you many years of useful labor in the old State.—Religious Herald.

....Rev. A. C. Dixon supplied the North Orange pulpit Sunday and left Monday for Keuka Lake, where he will spend the balance of the month with his family. During September he will be in Chicago preaching every Sunday, under the direction of Mr. Moody. During his absence his brother, Rev. Frank Dixon, will occupy the Hanson Place pulpit.—Christian Enquirer, N. Y.

....Many of our readers will learn with genuine sorrow of the death of Rev. Benj. Lanier at Level Plains, August 4th. He died at the extreme age of eighty six years, strong in faith and triumphing to the last. His ministry throughout his pastoral life was full of gracious love and divine blessing. May God keep and comfort his bereaved family.

....There is, perchance, a lesson here. The minister who can lodge one good, sound idea, or thought, in the minds of his people during half an hour's discourse, and can nail it there, has done a great work, a good deal better than if he were to try to develop a dozen points. It has been justly said that the minister who has too many heads to his discourse cannot find ears for them.—National Baptist.

....Rev. A. E Owen, D. D., says: "I am going to write an article for the Religious Herald in which I shall propose that the Home Board in Atlanta appoint a paid assistant secretary for every State in the South. The same reasons which cause the Board to appoint one would call for the appointment of a dozen; and if it is wise to appoint one, it is equally wise to appoint a dozen The logic of the situation demands it."—Religious Herald.

....Rev. C. J. Woodson of Gatesville, N. C., a most worthy citizen and devout minister, had the misfortune to lose his valuable horse last week. Kind and appreciative friends are at work getting subscriptions to purchase another horse for Mr. Woodson. Capt. Geo. T. Parker, the furniture dealer, will be glad to forward any donations to such a worthy cause.—Suffolk Herald, Aug. 11.

....Rev. W. H. Edwards of Wake Forest writes: "I commenced a meeting at Merry Oaks, Chatham county, on the fourth Sunday in July, which continued ten days. The brethren and sisters were greatly revived. Sixteen were added by baptism. Brethren and sisters of other denominations united heartily with us in the work, and all seemed to enjoy the precious manifestations of the Lord. Their hospitality was all that could be desired. They will ever live in my memory as a very dear and lovable people."

....The annual statistics of the Presbyterian church (North) show that a membership of 855,089 made contributions last year to the amount of $14,916,311, which far exceeds the gifts of any similar body. This is a great showing for this church, and we hope that they may be an inspiration to us poorer Baptist brethren. As the Examiner remarks, "Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works," is an apostolic injunction to which these figures lend emphasis.

....Dr. J. William Jones of Atlanta, Ga., has this to say about Wake Forest in the July number of the Home Field: Wake Forest College, North Carolina, the Baptist College of the State, has made more real progress than almost any college we know, and under the able management of President Chas E. Taylor and his scholarly corps of professors is beyond all question one of the very best colleges we have. We heartily, and without reserve, commend it, and advise those seeking a college for their sons to look well into its claims before sending elsewhere.

... We learn with pleasure of the great tabernacle meeting at Teachey's, near Wilmington. A correspondent of the Star says under date of the 10th inst.: "Our tabernacle, which already held at least seven hundred people, was so crowded Tuesday night and again yesterday morning, that the good people were obliged to make room for more yesterday. They increased the capacity about three hundred, making room for one thousand, and last night it was just packed. * * * All the churches in this section have consolidated and are making this one glorious time. We have visitors here from a distance. * * * Last night when the invitation was given, the young men and women came from all over the crowd. You could see fathers coming with their sons, young men with their friends from every direction. The crowd completely caught fire as the great work of the Lord was going on among them. The pure and unadulterated gospel of Jesus Christ always cuts as a two-edged sword, dividing sin from righteousness. It has not fallen short of its common results in this meeting. Preachers present are: Walton, Jenkins, Carroll, Savage, and Rouse. Things must move before this host of soldiers."

....Prof. J. B. Carlyle has sufficiently recovered from his recent illness to go to Carson Springs, Tenn., where he will remain until his strength is restored. His many friends over the State will rejoice to hear of his recovery. His address at present is Carson Springs, Tenn., via Newport, Tenn.

....The Ensign, a Baptist paper of Minneapolis has been compelled to suspend publication. An exchange says its failure was not due to lack of subscribers, but to too many of the kind who don't pay their debts. Thus one by one faithful papers are sent to the boards by sheer negligence of Christian people. Brethren, whatever you do in the way of paying debts, pay your subscription to your paper first, and be prompt about it. Because it's a small amount it is none the less welcome and efficient in helping the editor meet his obligations.

....The departure of Rev. Robert Ryland, D. D., at the age of eighty-eight years, to reside henceforth at Bristol, Tenn., (where he becomes chaplain of Southwest Va., Institute) is a notable event. This venerable man, now the Nestor of Southern Baptists, has been for years a striking figure in Kentucky, where he is regarded with the utmost veneration and affection. He will be followed to his new home by the prayers and solicitude of his brethren here, who sincerely wish that his bow may abide in strength for many years to come.—Examiner.

....The New Brunswick Home News of the 8th contains an interesting account of the laying of the corner stone of the new Livingstone Avenue Baptist church of that city, of which Rev. M. V. McDuffie, well known in North Carolina, is the pastor. The account is illustrated with a large cut of the church, which shows that it is a splendid edifice. During the exercises, which were attended by a large crowd, the leading pastors and the city officers being present, the pastor was presented with a silver trowel. The address by Bro. McDuffie on laying the stone was very appropriate. We are glad to note the success of our brother, and hope that God may continue to bless his work.

THANKS TO BROTHER MILLS

For sometime I have been saddened by seeing Baptists and other Christians going to a hotel where there was a bar-room. Capital has been made of that fact by the enemies of Christ. The persons named by Bro. Mills were not especially in mind. I was not aiming at persons, but a harmful habit. I thank Bro. Mills for helping to break up that habit.

ABOUT THE ORPHANAGE

I am not fighting the Orphanage. I am not fighting Bro. Mills. I am not fighting the trustees. The brethren know me, not as a kicker of any interest of the Convention, but as a friend. I wanted some questions answered by the trustees and not by Bro. Mills. These were addressed to the trustees and not to Bro. Mills. The spirit in which they were asked was kind. The spirit in which they were answered by Bro. Mills was as kind as he could answer. His answers are before the people. I believe it would have been better had they remained unanswered. But I have no desire to prolong a discussion which would be detrimental to one of the dearest institutions in North Carolina. I believe if the questions asked with a few additional ones were answered to the satisfaction of the people by the trustees, that the contributions would increase largely. I have never been to the Orphanage, but let me add that it has not been because of the lack of interest in it. The most of the money contributed comes from those who have not visited the institution. My church and Sunday-school will contribute more and more to this work, and I sincerely hope that whatever may be the differences of opinions as to management, that the brethren everywhere will contribute more liberally to the Orphanage support. The cry of extravagance (which I did not charge) will not help to feed the orphans. The questions which I asked were not whispered to me by any one; but the Annual Report will suggest them to any one who will examine the figures and statements therein. May God bless the Orphanage is my prayer.

"GAG-LAW AND THUMB-SCREWS."

This is a favorite expression with some brethren. We hear it used in connection with the "Herring movement." I feared it was true at one time. I heard it so much I almost trembled. Brethren, it is a false alarm. This cry is raised to excite sympathy. It has been raised so much that it makes one sick. This cry was raised in the Beulah, but it was the cry which could not move the brethren of the Association. I desire to give the facts in the discussion. The Foreign Mission report was read. In it was a sentence welcoming the "new department." The question was opened for discussion. Bro. Newton spoke and did not mention methods. Bro. Royal spoke and discussed the "Herring movement." Bro. Bryan spoke in behalf of the regular work. Bro. Herring replied. Several other brethren spoke on a substitute ignoring the Herring movement. The meeting was prolonged until after eleven o'clock. The next morning the discussion was resumed at ten o'clock and continued until about twelve. Brethren Bryan and Herring and others again spoke until they said all they desired. The Herring advocates spoke longer than they said they would. They had the utmost liberty of speech, yet when the vote was taken, the Association adopted the substitute by almost a unanimous vote. I am free to say that if the speeches made here on the Herring movement could be made at every Association in the State, that the movement would be killed, and killed by the arguments of its advocates. Give these brethren liberty of speech and they will have written upon the Herring mission, "Talked itself to death." CHAS. A. G. THOMAS.

The Sunday-school Chautauqua.

I do most earnestly hope that we are to have a large attendance at Mt. Vernon Springs, Aug. 22d—27th, 1893, of Sunday-school officers and teachers, for I know from long acquaintance with the work that such an interchange of views and methods, as we propose to have at our meeting, will be of great benefit.

Especially should superintendents be present. The programme has been prepared with special reference to giving the very best information to the superintendent. I am sure it is with all of them, as it is with me, a source of great pleasure to visit a well-organized Sunday-school, or to talk over the work with a well-informed brother. By bringing together those who have had good opportunities, and learning of their methods, we can do our own schools good and be helpful to others around us.

It would be quite proper and becoming for the Sunday-school to request its superintendent to attend and tender to him the expenses of the trip. A round trip ticket from Raleigh will cost $3 50. Add to this one dollar per day for board and tell him to go, and when he comes back, tell you what he saw and heard.

If the superintendent cannot go, send one of the teachers.

We shall have on exhibition a full supply of all the helps in use for the Sunday-school, and leave nothing undone that can be done to make the Chautauqua at Mt. Vernon Springs a great power for good.

IMPORTANT.

To those who propose attending the Sunday-school Chautauqua at Mt. Vernon Springs next week, August 22d-27th, it is important to know that the trains from Raleigh that connect at Sanford leave as follows: Daily through freight, leaves Johnston St. Station at 10:55 a. m., connecting with accommodation at Sanford, reaching Ore Hill at 4:20 p. m.

Local freight carrying passengers Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 7 a. m. Johnston St. Station, reaching Ore Hill at 12 m.

Passengers along the Raleigh & Gaston road should come by the freight reaching Raleigh at 8:30 a. m., so as to get off on the through freight at 10:55.

The trains at Greensboro leave that point for Ore Hill at 8 10 a. m., and 2:15 p. m.

Round trip tickets from Raleigh to Ore Hill via Sanford $3.50. From Greensboro $2 00. Reduced rates will be given from all points on all the roads.

N. B. BROUGHTON.

RAILROAD RATES

The Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley Railway will sell round trip excursion tickets from all stations on its line to Ore Hill, N. C., on account of North Carolina Baptist Sunday-school Chautauqua at Mount Vernon Springs.

Tickets on sale August 20th, 22d and 23d, good to return and including August 30, '93. For rates and schedules apply to any agent of the Company

Rev. James P. Mason.

The late Rev. J. P. Mason was for so many years a useful minister of the Baptist church, and was so widely known in this section, that a few words about him additional to Dr. Carroll's kindly notice may be expected by the many readers of the RECORDER hereabouts. I have known him for more than thirty years as a good friend and a most pleasant neighbor, and beg leave to lay a tribute of friendship on his grave.

Mr. Mason was a native of Orange county. He received his education at Wake Forest, and was ordained to the ministry in 1855 In 1854 he married Miss Mary E. Morgan, daughter of Solomon Morgan of Orange county, and settled on the fine old Morgan farm on Morgan Creek two miles south of Chapel Hill, which has been in that family since pre-Revolutionary times. Here his life was passed, attending to his duties as preacher, planter, husband and father, and master of a large family of servants. He served the churches of Pisgah, Moriah, Carmel and Cane Creek, and occasionally that at Chapel Hill, and was always an acceptable preacher to these congregations, being plain, and lively, and warm. He had naturally a sprightly and inquisitive mind, and a cheerful, amiable disposition. He took an intelligent interest in public affairs and in persons and things far outside the ordinary track of his life. This made him a lively and agreeable and shrewd companion, enlarging his ideas and sympathies. The gentlemen of the Faculty of the University were fond of going to see him, and found him even in sickness and suffering, ready for a talk, and appreciative of their conversation. Few country houses are better furnished than his was with books, papers and magazines. In the last years of his life he read constantly. He was an ardent admirer of the BIBLICAL RECORDER and of the Religious Herald, and of all Spurgeon's writings, and his small but well-chosen library showed that he had a taste for the best things.

I have never known a kinder husband and father. He was not merely indulgent, his care was judicious. He gave his daughters the best education within his means and opportunities, and was always anxiously and unselfishly devoted to their best interests. When they died in the bloom of young womanhood, leaving their fond parents childless and most desolate, he resigned them without a murmur. By his firmness and fortitude under the blow, he supported his wife and became to her in the sad years that remained more than ever a tender, considerate companion, cheering her mind and directing her thoughts to that reunion which he has first accomplished.

I left North Carolina in 1881, and when I went away, Mr. Mason was a fine-looking, hearty, genial man, as happy and as happily situated with wife and daughters as any man could desire. He was an active and successful farmer, an early riser and an energetic overseer of his affairs, keeping his farm well up on all sides. He used to say he did not believe any individual or any community could flourish that loved the bed of a morning.

On my return next year, I should hardly have known him. Both of his girls were laid in their graves, and typhoid fever had brought him to the verge of his own. He was emaciated, bent and broken, had aged ten years in appearance, and was never again to be a well man. The struggle with a broken constitution has lasted twelve sorrowful years. He travelled, visited various health resorts, spent a season in the Richmond Hospital, was constantly under the care of our best physicians, and all in vain.

The natural buoyancy and cheerfulness of his disposition kept him up longer than would have been the case with most men. The end came June 24, 1893, on Saturday afternoon. The farm hands were bringing in the sheaves of wheat and closing up their labors for the rest of the Sabbath. The cattle were returning along the lanes. The sunset was clear and serene over the beautiful fields and woods, and evening was bringing all things home. And he, too, the master, the husband, the preacher, was going home: his day's work was at an end, and he was entering upon his everlasting rest. As the sun sank behind the hills, he died peacefully and without a struggle, in the full possession of his mind and sustained by an unfaltering faith.

Let the church that he loved and served so long remember the desolate and lonely widow in its supplications, and may she find around her continually the Everlasting Arms.

"Be still, sad soul, thine hour shall also come;
Behold, one evening God shall lead thee home."

C. P. SPENCER.

"When I was in the Seminary at Louisville a Presbyterian was assistant or co-professor."—A. J. Dickinson, in Western Recorder, August 10, '93.

Bro. Dickinson is the talented young pastor of the Baptist church in Selma, Ala.

"Nobody but a Baptist has ever been a professor or assistant professor or co-professor in the Seminary."—Western Recorder, August 10, '93.

I have been a Trustee of the Seminary for many years and have never heard of a Presbyterian connected with it as an assistant or co professor, except through this statement of Bro. Dickinson. I think Bro. Dickinson owes it to himself, to the Seminary, and to the Baptist brotherhood of the South to withdraw this statement at once.

In the same article Bro. Dickinson says: "When I was a student at Richmond College there was an Episcopalian in one chair and a German Rationalist in another."

I think this statement misrepresents Richmond College. Who can tell us the facts?

Johnston County Items.

We had a good Union Meeting at Shiloh, on 28th, 29th and 30th of July. Rev. N. B. Cobb, N. B. Broughton and T. B. Moseley were out from Raleigh, and added very much to the interest of the meeting.

Dr. J. J. Hall was shaking hands with his Tabernacle people for the last time and could not fill his place on our programme. Dr. Cobb preached the missionary sermon on Sunday, to the delight and profit of all present. It is a great pleasure to visit Rev. F. H. Poston and his good people at Shiloh.

Had a good meeting at Bethesda, Johnston county, from the fifth Sunday in July, to the first Sunday in August. Thirteen professed a good hope through grace. Rev. Thomas M. Leary of Clayton aided in the meeting and pleased our people.

The work of the Lord is prospering all along the line. My people have been doing better than they promised to do this year. To God be all the glory through Christ.

Brief Notes from Mt. Airy.

The mission work, which we recently projected in the eastern part of Mt. Airy, is quite encouraging. The Sunday-school is well attended and interesting, numbering in all about one hundred.

From this movement we have already realized some precious results. For the present, this is a feeder to the church, yet we hope, as the days go by and the town grows over the hills of that community, to have a Baptist church there. I believe our Baptist people in the flourishing and prosperous towns and cities ought to have a vigilant eye to these populous wards, and project as early as practicable their plans for religious work.

About three weeks ago the pastor and a small band of Christians began singing, praying and talking in our mission hall. In a few nights the hall proved to be too small and uncomfortable, so we moved into a spacious warehouse in which large crowds come together to worship the Lord. It was a very pleasant place and every one seemed to enjoy it.

The meeting closed with twenty-five or thirty professions, and I expect to lead some of the converts into the baptismal waters next Sunday night.

Bro. R. M. Loftis preached two or three sermons for us. By the way, we are beginning to regard him a strong gospel preacher. His sermon on the Holy Spirit was sound, biblical and impressive. He is pastor of four churches and others have an eye on him.

Since holding this meeting in the warehouse and beholding the great multitudes of people that come to hear the gospel, I am in earnest sympathy with a "gospel tent."

Bro. Broughton, here is my hand and my heart. We need a tent for the territory of the Pilot Mountain Association.

The Baptist Zion of Mt. Airy at the center is taking on new life day by day. The brethren and sisters have displayed church pride and good taste in the recent improvement on our church. It is indeed very neat and attractive. L. R. PRUETT.

School Notices.

Read advertisement of South West Virginia Institute in another column.

We call attention to the advertisement of the Cedar Rock Academy in this issue. This school is principled by a recent graduate of Wake Forest, Rev. W. A. Smith, who was a success as a student, having conducted several successful pastorates while at College, and at present is a promising minister and teacher. We hope for him a large success.

We call special attention to the advertisement in our columns of the Medical College of Virginia. This old, efficient and honored institution is about entering on its fifty-sixth session, and we recommend to our young men who contemplate the study of medicine to consider this institution, whose professors and instructors are selected from the best practitioners in the country. We note with pleasure that Dr. J. A. Hodges of Wilmington, favorably known as a distinguished practitioner has recently been added to the faculty of this College.

The catalogue of the Horner School, Oxford, N. C., shows a patronage extending over ten States. For years this school has been full to overflowing, and to meet this demand the principals put up a model school building with all the modern improvements—electric lights, scientific ventilating and heating, a complete gymnasium, and a steam laundry. The patronage was doubled the first session, reaching within ten of the increased limit. It is to be noted that this school still places such a restriction in the number of pupils admitted, that the principals can give due personal care to each pupil. It is probably just here that the reputation of the school for the highest standard of scholarship and morals has been won and maintained. If you send your son to a school to be instructed by a certain teacher, it is desirable that no more pupils shall be admitted than can receive largely the personal instruction of that teacher. Secure the very best advantages for your son by engaging a room before it is too late.

Sunday-school Convention.

The West Chowan Baptist Sunday school Convention met with the church at Bethlehem, Hertford county, N. C., July 28-30. Introductory sermon was preached by Rev. A. Cree from Ephesians 5: 8—subject, "Children of Light." This sermon showed the power of thought and the encouragement of being God loving and God serving people.

After the sermon, Vice-Moderator Dr. R. P. Thomas called the Convention to order, and read the twenty-third Psalm, and Elder Scarboro led the Convention in an appropriate prayer.

After the election of officers, &c., Rev. H. T. Williams addressed the Convention upon the ultimate aim of the Sunday-school.

The second subject—the Sunday-school a missionary agency—was discussed by Dr. T. T. Speight, and he proved conclusively that the Sunday-school was the prime agency of missionary work.

Saturday morning the people began to come in from all quarters, and a half hour was spent in devotional exercises conducted by Rev. S. F. Bristoe.

At 10 a. m. Moderator D. W. Britton called the Convention to order. The third subject was taken up. The influence of the Sunday-school upon the family was discussed by Rev. J. B. Boone. Bro. Boone showed plainly that the man or woman who was a Sunday school superintendent or teacher and who did not live religion in their homes were practicing a fraud upon God's people; and to be a member of the Sunday-school meant to be a better man or woman.

Rev. S. F. Bristoe followed by saying there may be some beginning of the Sunday-school influence at home, but he could not find the end, and urged the superintendents and teachers to have family worship.

The fourth subject—libraries and literature—was discussed by Rev. B. Craig. Bro. Craig proved that nothing could supply the place of a library in the Sunday-school, and nothing better in shaping the minds of the young than the reading of good books, and all Sunday-schools should have a supply of Bibles for families who had no Bibles.

Bro. D. E. Modlin followed by saying that we need pure and free libraries, and the best care should be taken in getting literature. Elder Scarboro also followed, and said we must not be stingy in this line of work.

Evening session. The Convention resumed business at 2 p. m.

Bro. W. P. Shaw addressed the pastors of the Convention, and urged upon them the great need of their help in the Sunday-school to the superintendents and teachers, not to rebuke or crowd them out, but by loving help and advice.

Rev. A. Cree lectured the superintendents of the Sunday school, asking them to be punctual, prayerful and studious.

Rev. T. G. Wood lectured the teachers by showing them theirs was the second calling: that they were preaching to individuals; and they should study the character of their pupils, and meet their several needs, and apply the lesson to their wants.

The speakers showed their appreciation of this work by their plain, practical exhortations. There were fifty-three Sunday-schools reported. Nine churches made no reports of Sunday-schools. There were twenty-one churches with one school each; ten churches with two schools each; four churches with three schools; number of officers and teachers, 501; number of pupils, 3,812; libraries, 24; contributions of the Sunday-school, $633.40; expenses of the Sunday school, $561.53.

SUNDAY MORNING.

General topic: Paul the Missionary. Paul at Troas, B. Craig; Paul at Philippi, H. T. Williams; Paul at Thessalonica, J. W. Fleetwood; Paul at Berea, C. W. Scarboro; Paul at Athens, T. G. Wood; Paul at Corinth, T. T. Speight.

At 11 a. m. Rev. J. B. Boone preached from James 1: 25—subject, Law of Liberty. Bro. Boone proved this liberty belonged to only those who were not bound by the law of sin or fixed sinful habits.

The Convention was entertained by the sweet singing of the Bethlehem choir, led by Prof. J. E. Matthews.

At 12:15 the Convention closed its most interesting session.

"The best thing yet!" That is the way a young man put it who made arrangements to work for B. F. Johnson & Co., of Richmond, Va. You can get further information by dropping them a card.

Rev. R. R. Day.

The death of Rev. R. R. Day removes from the ranks of N. C. Baptists one of our most promising young preachers. Who of his many friends will take up his mantle and carry forward the work which he had so nobly begun!

Bro. Day was born in Surry county, N. C., May 26, 1869. He appreciated very highly the rich heritage of godly parents, and he always felt that he owed the credit of most of his sacred ambition to the noble aspirations which they instilled into his heart in early childhood. In a letter to me about a year ago, he wrote of his parents: "Through their instruction and encouragement, I imbibed very early a burning desire for knowledge. * * * When about fifteen years of age, I was converted and baptized into the fellowship of Island Ford church. My conversion was due perhaps more to the instruction of my godly parents, and especially to the influence of my mother, than to any other instrumentality. * * * From the time of my conversion, I felt it my duty to [illegible] the gospel."

His opportunities for acquiring an education were very meagre, being simply able to attend the public schools of his district. It depended, to the extent of our opportunities that makes a man, but the way we use the opportunities we have. Brother Day's faithfulness in this respect may be seen from the fact that at the age of fifteen he was able to teach in the public schools. He was licensed to preach before he was seventeen, and entered the pastorate before he was nineteen. Even at this early age his success as a preacher and pastor was quite marked.

He taught and preached for several years, longing and praying all the while for the way to be opened whereby he might enter college and better prepare himself for the work which he loved so much. In answer to his prayers, and as a result of his consecrated endeavors, the way was opened, and he entered Wake Forest College in Sept., 1890, and, had he lived, would have graduated next June.

Although he was so successful as a pastor, I am quite sure that no part of his life was fraught with more real good to his fellow-men than the three years spent at Wake Forest. He was always very modest and unassuming in manner, but was one of the living epistles known and read wherever he was seen. His whole manner of life was a condemnation of all that was low and degrading; but all who came in touch with him must have received inspiration for all that is high and noble in life and character.

Besides the influence of his life and his personal work in college, at the time of his death he was pastor of the churches at Garner, Bethel, Clayton and Warren Plains. He also supplied for the churches at Concord, Granville county, and Corinth, Franklin county, for several months. In all these communities, he had greatly endeared himself to the people, and although his voice is hushed in their midst, he still lives in their hearts, and truly can it be said of him that "he being dead yet speaketh."

REV. R. R. DAY.

Eight months ago Bro. Day, the subject of this sketch, was called on to write a sketch of the life of Bro. A. T. Denny, and now I am called to write a short sketch of his life and work. How vividly the great truth is forced on our minds, that we must soon pass away from this world!

Bro. Day died at Scotland Neck, supplying for Rev. R. T. Vann, in his twenty fourth year. He was born in Surry county, N. C. His boyhood days, until he was about fifteen years of age, were spent at his father's, working on the farm during the spring and summer and attending the public schools during the fall and winter; after which he entered an academy and soon became competent to teach in a public school, and wherever he taught, he never failed to get hold of the people, and always gave satisfaction.

From early childhood he showed evidences of thirst for knowledge and of a studious disposition, which afterwards was characteristic of his life. During the fall of 1884, when in his fifteenth year, he was wholly awakened to his sinful and helpless condition and was led to believe in Christ as his only Saviour.

The following spring, May, 1885, he was baptized into the fellowship of Island Ford church.

He was genuinely converted, and by the life he lived he bore testimony of the power of the religion of Christ. In a short while he became convinced that it was his duty to preach the gospel. He was, therefore, licensed by his church, March, 1886, and the next year, August, 1887, he was ordained to the full work of the ministry by Elders Gregory, Woodruff and Vestal. From that time his life was fully consecrated to the work whereunto the Master had called him.

Feeling the great need of a thorough preparation for his life work, he began to strive for the knowledge that was necessary to equip him for the warfare, going to school during the summer and teaching in winter, and also preaching Saturday and Sunday. When time would permit, he worked in revival meetings, and his labors were greatly blessed by the Lord.

In August, 1890, he was elected Clerk of the Yadkin Association, which position he filled ably and satisfactorily for three years.

He was called to the pastorate of Elkin Valley, Corinth and Union Grove churches before he was twenty years old.

The first part of his twenty first year was spent in the Bookville High School and in preaching as pastor at Union Grove and Forbush churches.

The coming fall, September, 1890, he entered Wake Forest College, remaining a student of that institution until his death. He expected to have graduated, had he lived, in June, 1894. Here, as in all other relations of life, he won the confidence and esteem of his teachers and fellow students by his persevering devotion to duty. Equally faithful in the performance of all his duties both as a member of his Society and of the College, his life proved the honesty and candor of his heart. So honorable and praiseworthy was he in all the relations of life, that, one knowing him, could not doubt his Christianity.

His vacations were spent in telling the story of the gospel, the work which had the uppermost seat in his affections.

He was unanimously called to the pastorate of Garner church early in the spring of 1892. His labors were greatly blessed, the church much built up, and there were several additions to its membership.

He had charge of Bro. W. R. Cullom's work during his stay at the Seminary, and in that work he failed not to win the hearts of the people. Bro. Cullom having resigned the church at Warren Plains, he was called indefinitely to the charge. He was also serving Clayton church, having been called there in early spring of 1893. From the first of October, 1892, to June 1st, 1893, he preached to four churches, preaching eight times each month, kept up his work in College, and made very satisfactory marks in all his studies.

He was also a correspondent of the North Carolina Baptist for some time before his death. His last article appeared in the Baptist of Aug. 2, 1893.

One month before his death he preached at his home church to a large congregation. His sermon wonderfully impressed the people. He loved his home people and Association, and often spoke of his desire to return home and work in his home field. How near the brethren and sisters were to his heart, and how he longed to see his Association developed, and the work of the Master enlarged!

During last year he had an attack of catarrh of the stomach and bowels, the disease with which he died. It was thought at one time he would have to give up his work in school; but by special care and attention he recovered, and was able to pursue his course of studies, but being much confined and pressed with work, it came back on him again, taking a stronger hold than before. All attention possible was given him by loving brethren and sisters of Scotland Neck Baptist church, and the very best medical aid, but after ten days' illness he gently fell asleep in Jesus, July 13, 1893. He bore his sickness with much patience, never murmuring nor complaining, often wishing he could get a good drink of water from his father's spring, but the angel took him to Jesus, a better place than that. Ten minutes before his death he bid all in the room farewell by shaking hands, being unable to speak at that time. Who could doubt that in this ordeal he realized that Jesus was his refuge and the everlasting arms were under him.

His remains were sent to Island Ford church where, after appropriate services by Rev. W. B. Woodruff and the writer, they were gently laid to rest in the cemetery, a most fitting place, for there he trusted Christ, there he was baptized, there he was licensed and ordained. There he sleeps until Christ shall call him from the grave.

Quite a crowd was present, signifying by their presence and tears how he was loved in his own community.

Thus ended a life that possessed large possibilities of usefulness in the Master's kingdom. Bro. Day was known to the writer from the age of fifteen. We were boys together, and therefore I write this sketch with a feeling of unspeakable sadness. But why grieve for one whose life was so pure and good? He has just gone from us to his reward, and we must soon follow; and so let us not grieve but rejoice, because our lives have been made better by his having lived; rejoice, because the power of saving grace enabled him to live so well and die so triumphant; rejoice, because it is our privilege to live in the service of the Master, and be ready for him when he shall come for us. "Be ye also ready, for in an hour when ye think not, the Son of Man cometh."

LOOK OUT.

"In peace prepare for war, in health for sickness." This old adage is always wise and timely, especially so just now. Summer is on, with its debilitating influences. Nerves are flagging, appetites failing, energy and strength yielding, even now. Shortly will come decay of vegetation, when malaria will "ride on every passing breeze" and count its victims in every home. Now is the time. Repair the wastes. Restore the vitality. Fortify the system. Ward off the perilous attacks of malaria and pass safely and happily through. You can do this by using DR. KING'S

ROYAL GERMETUER.

It is the best preventive, the best restorative, the most unfailing cure—pleasant to take as lemonade and harmless, unique, matchless, perfect, "the ultima thule of medicines." Try it now. For sale by druggists.

I have used Dr. King's Royal Germetuer for indigestion, and cheerfully say that it afforded me more relief than any other remedy I ever tried. I also used it in my own family in a case of malarial fever with best results. I take pleasure in recommending it.

Suffering Women Should Not Despair of Ever Being Well Again.

HUNDREDS OF CASES LIKE THIS ONE HAVE FOUND HEALTH AND STRENGTH, EVEN AGAINST THE ADVICE OF PHYSICIANS.

LUMBERTON, N. C., May 29th, 1893.

MR. JOHN N. WEBB,

Dear Sir:—Below I give you our experience and observation with, and opinion of the Electropoise. For several years my wife's health had been gradually declining until last winter a year ago her case merged into general debility, attended with female weakness and a general derangement of the system.

I had placed her under medical treatment trying the best physicians in our reach. I had about despaired of seeing her restored to health, but upon recommendation of some of my friends who had tried the Electropoise, I sent for one, and commenced its use. From the third treatment, it was evident that the 'Poise had done for her what months of medical treatment had failed to do. Her tongue, which had been coated for months, became perfectly clean, and her digestion, which was so much impaired, became as good as when she was a child, and her rheumatism and neuralgia are almost well. She has gradually improved ever since until now she rarely complains. I think she is as well as I ever saw her and better in some respects, and she has not taken a dose of any kind of medicine since she began its use.

We have tried it on several others with good results. The doctors say that it is nothing but faith, and not virtue in the 'Poise, and my reply to it is, thank God for such faith. Respectfully,

W. H. HUMPHREY.

THE August number of the Homiletic Review contains an excellent article on "Practical Politics: What can Clergymen do About It" by Prof. Jno. J. McCook of Trinity College, Conn., which in the present confusion of religious and political duties might be read by every minister. We reprint the following extract:

ATTACKING THE RUMSELLER.

Now, here is practical politics, and on the biggest of all scales. Nothing so big, as I am persuaded, on the boards at this present moment. And what can the clergyman do about it? Go straightway and in his Sunday morning sermon denounce the "rumseller"? Nay, good friend, stop and think. If the law allows me to sell axes and a man comes along and buys my axe and then goes and beats somebody's brains out with it, who is the scoundrel, I or he? No doubt I share the blame if, when he made the purchase, I knew him to be drunk or crazy. But, after all, would not the really responsible party, even in that case, be the community which allowed a drunken or a crazy man to be at large and to buy what he pleased and do what he liked? Let us call things and people by their right names. Clergymen have offended not a little in this regard.

JOINING THE PROHIBITIONISTS.

"But at least, if I denounce not the rumseller in my sermon, I may join the Prohibition party?" That now is a political question, and I must beware lest I preach politics while delivering warnings concerning political preaching! But I will say thus much: I have the greatest sympathy with prohibitionists. They are deeply in earnest, and they are, in one point, far ahead of the average of us—they have some adequate sense of the importance of the drink question. But I cannot but feel that their way never can, and possibly never ought to, be given them. I say "possibly" with deliberation. If all else failed, and it came to be a question finally of whether I should have to part with my liberty to the drunkard or he part with his to me, I think I know which side I should choose. I should take his freedom away, and should be vain enough to imagine that, under the circumstances, that was best for all concerned. But until that possibility becomes actual fact I do not favor prohibition—as a political issue least of all. And truth compels me to say that I find prohibition organs at least a trifle too absolute, though often conducted with much ability. Still, I fear that will happen here which happened in England in 1878. The prohibitionists will be found side by side with liquor dealers in opposing any political remedies, however practical, which fall one hair's breadth short of their ideal:

SOMETHING BETTER TO DO.

Wherefore, I say, there is something better to be done than join the prohibitionists. For example, study the drink question calmly, faithfully, in all its relations. Study solutions of it that have been attempted, as in Maine, Kansas, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden; give hospitable reception to experiments proposed or to be proposed by serious, earnest men. And meanwhile, as is surely just on the principle that people should be held responsible for what they do, or else if irresponsible shut up, begin to shut up drunkards of every condition, whether violent or not. That will meet any theory as to the nature and cause of their disorder. But don't shut them up, as now, in one of our crowded jails, which at the best offer no facilities for teaching trades to people or forming in them useful habits. Give us State institutions—call them workhouses, house of correction, reformatory, what you will—and send them there, along with idle vagabonds and the like, on indeterminate sentences regulated by a wise system of parole. Put in charge of the establishment a first-rate man who knows his business, and give him what he requires to carry out his plans. However much it may cost, it will pay for itself.

Ho! traveller, take Beecham's pills.

Why we Plow.

We plow to bury the top or surface growth; to prepare a properly pulverized seed bed to receive the seed and best nourish the young and growing plants; to kill the weeds and grass; to break the crust after each rain, and thus conserve the moisture, which would otherwise be evaporated from the surface.

In planning for the preparation and cultivation of every crop, we must remember one most important truth, plants do not eat; they drink, and our aim should be to put the soil in such condition that the moisture, which comes up from below, may be held in reach of the plants, and of any fertilizer we may use, and also to prevent the evaporation of this moisture as far as possible. No matter how much natural or prepared plant food there may be in the soil, without all the important moisture to render this food available, it is utterly worthless to the growing plants. Each man should study his crops, his soils, the needs of each, and so manage his plowing as to develop the best elements of both, and get the greatest good from the smallest outlay.—Cultivator.

Gold Dollars too Cheap.

Look out for the man who is trying to sell gold dollars for fifty cents. It isn't always safe to trust entirely to an attractive advertisement—especially if the advertiser lives a long way off and you don't know much about him. Very few people know much about the real merits of a musical instrument and may be easily deceived by trusting to appearances. Many a piano or organ looks like a fine instrument, but its merit is only skin deep. Remember that it actually costs a reputable manufacturer more to produce a good instrument than some people advertise to retail theirs at. When you wish to buy, you will be safest in at least getting information from the great Southern Music House of Ludden & Bates in Savannah, Ga. They are the largest dealers in the South and are known to every one. Read their advertisement in this issue.

The Art of Forgetting.

Memory's studies are all the rage nowadays. But every Christian ought to drill himself in the art of forgetting.

Forget evil imaginations
Forget the slander you have heard.
Forget the meanness of small souls.
Forget the faults of your friends
Forget the misunderstanding of yesterday.
Forget the disagreeable people whose talk poured vinegar into your spirit.
Forget all malice, all fault-finding, all injuries, all hardness, all unlovely and distressful things.
Start out every day with a clean sheet.
Be lovely, be loving. See how much sunshine you can produce.—Christian Helper.

Home Mission Hymn.

Look! ye heralds of salvation,
Cast your eyes o'er all the land!
Souls from ev'ry clime and nation,
For the gospel, waiting, stand.

While the teeming millions enter,
Who will help to mold our fate?
Bear the cross from coast to center,
Till it conquers ev'ry state?

Over hill and valley, westward,
Ceaseless tides of travel roll;
While but here and there a shepherd,
Stands to feed the starving soul.

Wake! O, Christian! God is leading
You to grander aims and cares;
And your native land is pleading
For your toils, your alms, your prayers.

Providence has set before you
Open doors on every hand;
God's own promises are o'er you,
Ev'ry hour with hope is grand!—Sel.

Subject for August: Home Board.

"Go home to thy friends and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee." Missionaries, 365; baptisms, 5,274; Sunday-schools organized, 342; teachers and pupils, 17,785; churches constituted, 179; houses of worship built, 80. Receipts of Home Board, $84,871.19.

STUDY TOPICS.—Needs of each State in the Home field. Relation of Home to State Missions and vice versa. Maintenance of missionaries. Frontier missions. America for Christ, or for Romanism and infidelity? Chapel building.

The Southern Baptist Convention at its late session in Nashville, Tenn., extended the time of the Centennial of Missions until the close of this year. The Centennial Record Book will also be kept open until that time. It is hoped that renewed efforts will be made for this work, and the Woman's Central Committee of Missions will gladly supply Centennial Missionary Literature, Centennial Chapel Cards, Centennial Day Programs, and Centennial Certificates, free. All who are already entitled to Centennial Certificates can obtain them at once on application. If after application the Certificates are not received within a reasonable time, please renew your application, as some loss may have occurred in the mails. Address Miss Fannie E. Heck, Pres. Woman's Central Committee of Missions, Raleigh, N. C.

Home Board Recommendations.

The following recommendations were presented to Woman's Missionary Union assembled at Nashville, May 13, and adopted by that body:

1. That the Woman's Missionary Societies make moneyed contributions to the Board, especially for the support of missionaries and their families on the frontier and elsewhere, and that, as heretofore, they send boxes of clothing and other useful articles to aid in their support.

2. That the societies be requested to aid in sustaining our teachers and scholars in Cuba, where we have an average of seven hundred and fifty pupils, and could easily have as many times that number if the proper facilities were afforded.

3. That mission work be further prosecuted among the foreign population, especially those arriving on our shores, the Germans in Baltimore, the Chinese in our cities, and the Cubans in Florida and other States, and particularly the vast number of colored women around our homes.

4. That the observance of an annual Mission Day by our Sunday schools be commended as very desirable, and we earnestly request that the Union take such steps as may lead to its universal adoption.

HOME BOARD APPEAL TO THE W. M. U.

Accompanying the foregoing recommendations, was the following appeal from Dr. I. T. Tichenor, Corresponding Secretary:

The mere statement of the needs of the Home Board, and the indication of the special directions in which the Woman's Mission Societies can aid us in our work, would seem enough for those who have shown so often that they have hearts as well as "hands ready to do every good work."

But if anything further is desired to "stir the pure minds of our sisters by way of remembrance," I cheerfully add this brief appeal:

1. The sending of boxes to our frontier missionaries has carried so much of sunshine into so many homes—the letters of thanks received by those who have sent the boxes have been so hearty—and the evidences of the Divine favor on this good work have been so marked, that no appeal need be made to those already engaged in the work not to "weary in well doing," and it is only necessary to explain it to others in order that the number of these boxes be greatly increased. But in addition, the Board greatly needs, and earnestly appeals for, contributions of money in order that we may increase the scant salaries of these toiling, needy, and self-sacrificing servants of Jesus.

2. Our schools in Cuba have been and are a great power for good, and with proposed changes and increased facilities, they will prove in the future a still more valuable adjunct to the work of our missionaries. Our noble women will do a needed work in supporting these schools.

3. Work among the foreigners who are crowding into our territory as never before—especially the Germans in Baltimore, Missouri and Texas, the Chinese in our cities, the Cubans in Florida and other States—cannot be too vigorously pressed, and it does seem as if, in God's providence, a vast amount of Foreign Mission work is to be done in the Home Mission field.

And as it is obvious that there is no sort of consistency in sending missionaries to Africa and neglecting the Africans at our doors, so it seems peculiarly appropriate that our sisters should, as their part, do special work among the Negro women and children who are crowded around our homes. The noble work done by a few women in Baltimore indicates what may be accomplished where zeal, wisdom and consecration are combined in this humble but glorious work of leading God's poor into the light of the gospel.

4. The observance of an annual Mission Day by our Sunday-schools would not only result in handsome collections, but would serve to educate our children in missionary ideas and plans, and inform them about the work of our own Convention. Of course the Executive Committee of the Woman's Missionary Union can arrange plans and secure the general observance of such a day as no other agency can, and the hearty co-operation of our pastors, churches and Sunday-school workers is earnestly invoked.

In a word, the Executive Committee of the Woman's Missionary Union auxiliary to the Southern Baptist Convention have conducted their work so wisely, so zealously and so well, and the results have been so gratifying, that the Home Mission Board can only say to them, "Go on," and appeal to others to give them, in their plans, warmest sympathy, most fervent prayers, most active co-operation.

EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.

One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B. Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Carolina, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1858. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches, and carry in stock a fine line of stationery, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, posters, circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

Can You Read The Future?

Do you know what your condition will be 20 years hence? Will your earning capacity be equal to the support of yourself and family? This is a serious question, yet, you could confidently answer "yes" if you had a twenty-years Tontine Policy in the

The Leaksville Woolen Mills, Leaksville, N. C., need no introduction to the public in North Carolina and adjoining States. This is simply to remind you that they are still "in touch" with the people, working up their wool into various forms of finished product at satisfactory prices. A handsome catalogue containing samples of their new and attractive styles of Fancy Cassimeres and All-Wool Flannels, together with all other goods made by them, is sent to any address on application. Besides an interesting article on "How to Handle It," the catalogue contains full particulars in regard to shipping wool. If these details are carefully followed, we guarantee prompt return of goods.

Write to Hiram Peard, Secy, Leaksville, N. C., for catalogue, before shipping of your wool.

Electropoise (TRADE MARK) ATMOSPHERIC OXYGEN BY ABSORPTION

ATLANTIC ELECTROPOISE CO., Washington, D. C.

Letter From Rev. J. C. Hocutt.

Bro. Bailey:—I will give you a few items of interest from this section. Beginning with the first Sunday in July, Bro. Alvis Andrews and I protracted a meeing at Glencoe, a factory village three and one-half miles from Burlington, continuing nine days. Bro. Andrews preaches there under the supervision of the Executive Committee of this Association. This was the best meeting that I have ever attended. There were about forty-five professions of conversion. Yesterday afternoon I baptized twenty-six of these, in Haw River, as members of Burlington church. We expect to organize a church in that village early in October. We can organize with a membership of more than thirty.

Monday night following the third Sunday, we began a meeting at Haw River, continuing ten days. This was a meeting of unusual interest and power. At the close, we received one by letter, and sixteen for baptism. These, added to the thirty-three with whom we organized the fourth Sunday in June, make a membership of fifty. The fourth Sunday in this month, when I shall administer the ordinance of baptism, we expect to receive several others. This church has a bright future.

Here, in Burlington, the cause continues to move forward. There is a continuous work of grace—every now and then there are professions of conversion, and we have frequent accessions to our membership—I expect to administer baptism next Sunday night. This is one of the most hopeful fields in the State. There is a broad tract of country between the Mt. Zion Association and the Beulah, on the north, and the Liberty, on the west, that offers a fine opportunity for the Baptists—it is ripe for the harvest. The preaching of the pure Word of God, accompanied by the Holy Spirit, takes hold of the hearts of the people, and leads them to Christ; and, when they study God's Word carefully, prayerfully, and with an unbiased mind, they come, as a natural consequence, into the Baptist churches.

To the brethren and sisters over the State I would say—Bro. Andrews and I, while doing this important work, need your prayers. Fraternally,

JOHN C. HOCUTT.

DIED.

WOOD—Died of typhoid fever, July 20th, 1893, Ida F. Wood, daughter of Mrs. M. E. Wood of Hertford county, N. C., in her sixteenth year. Ida professed faith in her Saviour and connected herself with Meherrin Baptist church at the age of ten years, and remained a consistent member until death's summons came. A FRIEND.

GRANDY—On July 24th, 1893, in Ocala, Florida, having just completed the sixty-sixth year of her age, Mrs. E. M. Grandy passed away at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. Thos. D. Crawford. She was born in Camden county, N. C., July 20th, 1827. Her maiden name was Elizabeth M. Bell, being a daughter of Haywood S. and Hester Cartwright Bell. On April 10th, 1845, she was married to Titus T. Grandy, late of Oxford, N. C.

Shortly before her marriage she was baptized into the fellowship of Sawyer's Creek church, and in 1849 she with her husband and mother removed from Camden to Oxford. This move, to those who know the history of the Oxford Baptist church, appears to have been a providential one. This church was small and weak, and was sadly in need of workers. This family furnished for the period of forty years some of the best Christian workers to the church. How much the subsequent prosperity of the church is due to them, God only knows.

Mrs. Grandy's Christian character was of the highest type. Her faith was like the faith of a little child—it knew no doubt. Her love for God's word, for his people, and for the prosperity of Christ's kingdom on earth, was love unfeigned. Her charity for all was spontaneous and beautiful, but it might have been said of her as of the church at Ephesus, "I know thy works, and thy labor, and thy patience, and how thou canst not bear them that are evil." How she did love the house of God! Cold indeed was the weather, or of extreme inclemency, that kept her from her place in the Lord's house. Her piety was of an active kind that abounded in good works. She was a Baptist from principle. She knew what she believed, and she believed with the earnestness of conviction; no weakly sentiment marked her as a Baptist. To her church she was devoted; for it she had no apology, because she believed that it was true to the word of God. She had but little patience with Baptists who took no interest in and no pains to inform themselves as to their denomination and its work. When getting ready to leave Camden for Oxford some one said to her, "I would not go to Oxford; the Baptists are weak there." She replied, "Well, that is the very reason I think we ought to go. Maybe we can do some good there, and we are not needed in the church here."

The RECORDER never had a better friend than Mrs. Grandy. Her mother had taken the first copy ever published, and so from her very earliest recollection she had seen it, loved it, and read it. I well remember her oft repeated remark when the day for the RECORDER came, "The RECORDER comes to-day." I do not think that she thought any North Carolina Baptist was what he ought to be as a Christian if he did not take and read the RECORDER.

She was a liberal Christian. Every good cause found in her a friend and supporter. Being well informed she saw Christian work from all its sides, and loved and helped it all.

During her life she passed through many afflictions. A beloved brother, Luther R. Bell, fell at Malvern Hill in 1862. Her mother later on passed away; child after child was taken; her beloved daughter, Mrs. Jno. A. Williams, and her honored son, Prof. Carey Dempsey Grandy of the University of North Carolina, both died in the bloom of youth; last of all, her noble and godly husband died,—all these sorrows like billows passed over her, but amid them all she was patient and resigned to God's will. I never knew a Christian more so. Like Job, I believe she could have exclaimed, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust him." This patience and unmurmuring submission to God's will continued unto the very last, when she quietly gave up her spirit into the hands of the Lord Jesus.

As a mother she was a model. Loving her children with a beautiful maternal affection, she seemed to do her uttermost to bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. I believe her one prayer and one desire of heart were that they might be consecrated, godly men and women. Children reared in her pure and attractive home, where every influence was healthful and good, where parental example accorded with parental teaching, and where the first lessons were prayer and the fear of God, were blessed with an inestimable heritage.

About three years ago she moved with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Crawford, to Ocala, Florida, to live. Her health, which had begun to decline, continued to fail, until unable to get out to worship with God's people, shut in at home, a great sufferer, yet ever cheerful and uncomplaining, she at last entered peacefully upon her eternal rest.

She leaves three children, Mrs. T. D. Crawford of Ocala, Fla., Mr. A. S. Grandy of Nashville, Tenn., and Dr. L. B. Grandy of Atlanta, Ga. To them may God grant his consolation, and a double portion of her spirit.

Old Times and Old Love.

There are no days like the good old days,
The days when we were youthful!
When humankind were pure of mind,
And speech and deeds were truthful;
Before a love for sordid gold
Became man's ruling passion,
And before each dame and maid became
Slave to the tyrant, fashion!

There are no boys like the good old boys,
When we were boys together!
When the grass was sweet to the brown, bare feet
That dimpled the laughing heather;
When the pewee sang to the summer dawn,
To the bee in the billowy clover;
Or down by the mill the whippoorwill
Echoed his night song over.

There is no love like the good old love,
The love that mother gave us!
We are old, old men, yet we pine again
For that precious grace—God save us!
So we dream and dream of the good old times,
And our hearts grow tenderer, fonder,
As those dear old dreams bring soothing gleams
Of heaven away off yonder.

—Eugene Field.

Children as Helpers.

Some of the most pathetic stories in the world's literature turn upon the abuse of children and the way in which heartless parents and guardians compel them to work, but far more frequent in the walks of life most familiar to us is the mother who says that it is "a great deal more trouble to teach the children than it is to do the work herself."

She forgets that trouble taken in that way is taken once for all time. A girl or a boy who really knows how to do any kind of work well will remember that knowledge indefinitely, and will generally be ready to use it on the principle that we all like to do what we can do well. When the motive of helping an overworked mother is present also, it will be a very hard-hearted child who will not try to do his best to assist her.

A mistaken fondness for her children is often at the root of a mother's failure to teach them how to work. She wishes to spare them the drudgery which has fallen to her own lot, and she has a vague notion that if she does not teach them how to perform it they will, in some mysterious way, escape it, or she fancies that they will love her better for her leniency, or she glories in the martyrdom of her "self-abnegation," or she wishes to save their hands from the marks of labor, and may even surmise that a certain aristocratic delicacy may be imparted to their features by keeping away from the heats of the kitchen. Whatever her theory may be on the subject, when a woman is seen to make a household drudge of herself while she has children, be they boys or girls, who are old enough and strong enough to learn to help her, she subjects herself to proper criticism. She is kind neither to them nor to herself, and she is distinctly to blame if a stepmother has to take care of them in the end.

In the first place, the training of a child to do some drudgery every day as a part of the regular work for which he is responsible is a valuable means of discipline to him. Whatever knowledge he has to acquire in learning it is no despicable addition to his information, and if he is doing his work in order to spare his mother's strength, the consciousness of that alone is calculated to awaken the noblest emotions within him, while the fact that he does not know how to work will never save him from poverty. It is much more likely to bring poverty upon him.

In the second place a mother has no right to systematically spoil her children in the hope of winning more love on account of her indulgence. It is sometimes necessary to sacrifice ourselves for others, and no soul which has a spark of noble fire will hesitate in such an emergency, but it is doubtful whether it is ever right to do this in order to make ourselves beloved. Is it not a higher principle to do what is right and noble and to let the consequences take care of themselves? Especially should it be the first aim of every mother to so train her children that they shall be unselfish and helpful to others and that their best powers shall be most highly developed. The dread that their children may not love them is at the bottom of much of the lax discipline and foolish fondness of mothers. She would be a monster who would not desire her children's love, but unworthy and time-serving expedients will not gain the love best worth having. Children cling and appeal to a petting, excuse-making, indulgent mother, but their highest and deepest admiration and affection will go forth in their maturer years to the mother who wisely planned for their ultimate happiness, who insisted upon providing them with useful employment and upon their showing consideration for others, who gave them early and thoroughly, by that daily "line upon line," the knowledge of those homely arts upon which the comfort of a household depends, a knowledge which is of universal application and liable to be needed even in the most fortunate life.

Thus every child should know how to cleanse dishes daintily, how to dust a room deftly and neatly, how to make a bed, to set a table, to fill glasses, cut bread and butter, sew on buttons, clean doorsteps and sidewalks, kindle a fire and do simple cooking.

"O, I've had enough of John's making beds!" exclaimed an impatient mother. "He heard Harry Smith say that he made his own bed every day, so John thought it would be sport to make his. He fancied it was going to be a great help to me. I wish you could see it. I'm thankful that I don't have to sleep in it."

It is seldom that the most skillful child can [illegible] what the old ladies used to call "[illegible] bed," but in these days of mattresses and springs any boy can make a bed [illegible] and so that it has a tolerably [illegible] appearance. Only insist [illegible] all the coverings shall be completely taken off and hung upon chairs until they are sufficiently aired. Then make the bed with the child for several mornings, calling attention to the little niceties which you observe in the tucking and arrangement of the different parts (continuing to make it with him or her at odd times as often as you can find it convenient) and then let the operation go on as best the young experimenter can manage to do it. Every manly boy will rejoice that he can thus save his mother one "chore," and it goes without saying that a girl should always make her own bed, no matter how wealthy her parents may be. Solomon's model woman, rich and sumptuously clothed as she was, ate never the bread of idleness.

It is true that the teaching of children is not easy. Even harder than the mere teaching is the following them up to see that work is done at the proper time and as taught. But if right principles have been inculcated in a child—that it is just as bad morally to half do a piece of work when one knows better as to tell a lie—and if his conscience and his love for his parents have been properly developed, and, above all, if system and order are regarded in the general management of the home, then a few weeks of training will introduce a new and efficient helper in the family. A child once made master of a certain share of the household work, one which is suited to his capacity and for which he clearly understands that he is responsible, is a mine. His legitimate pride is developed, his hand has gained a new skill, he is so much better prepared for life, his emotional nature has found a wise outlet, he has become more unselfish—in short, he is a higher human product that he was before.

Mother, never say again, unless you wish to condemn yourself out of your own mouth, that it is more trouble to teach your children to work than it is to do that work yourself. Some people who cross the Brooklyn bridge every day of their lives pay their fare on each trip. Others buy tickets by the package, thus saving a half-cent on each ticket and much time and strength. This in years must amount to a serious loss—and it is irretrievable. This is a faint and inadequate illustration of the folly of hard working mothers in not teaching their children to be helpful in the conduct of the common home.—Kate Upson Clark, in Congregationalist.

What Home Is.

A London paper offered a prize for the best definition of a home. About five thousand answers were given, some of the best were the following:

A world of strife shut out, a world of love shut in.

Home is the blossom of which heaven is the fruit.

Where you are treated best and grumble most.

The father's kingdom, the children's paradise, the mother's world.

The best place for a married man after business hours.

The place where the great are sometimes small and the small often great.

The jewel casket containing the most precious of all jewels—domestic happiness.

Home is the coziest, kindliest, sweetest place in all the world, the scene of our purest earthly joys and deepest sorrow.

The only spot on earth where the faults and failings of fallen humanity are hidden under the mantle of charity,

A little hollow scooped out of the windy hill of the world where we can be shielded from its cares and annoyances.

A hive in which, like the industrious bee, youth garners the sweets and memories of life for age to meditate and feed upon.

An abode in which the inmate, the "superior being called man," can pay back at night, with fifty per cent interest, every annoyance that has met him in business during the day.

That source of comfort which youth does not fully appreciate, which the young men and maidens lovingly desire, which the middle-aged generally possess, which the old rightly value.

"Stealing a Ride."

A conductor on one of our passenger trains is also a steward in his church, and carries round the collection basket at the public services. "It is alleged" that on one occasion, passing by a man who did not contribute, the ticket puncher, after urging a contribution, reached up in a fit of absent-mindedness for the bell-cord with a view of putting the delinquent off the train. Of course he was confused and the congregation amused, but the incident fails not, nevertheless, to point a moral as well as adorn a tale. There are a number of so-called Christians—Baptists, too—who are simply deadbeating their way on the "gospel train." The State makes them pay their dues, but not being forced to shell out to the support of the gospel, they show how little and mean they are by stealing a ride at the expense of their brethren.—Texas Advocate.

Wrinkles, and hollow cheeks, and dull, sunken eyes, don't always mean that a woman's old. Half the time, they only show that she's overworked or suffering. To such women, to every woman who is tired or afflicted, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription safely and certainly brings back health and strength. It's a legitimate medicine that corrects and cures; a tonic that invigorates and builds up; a nervine that soothes and strengthens. For all the derangements, irregularities and weaknesses peculiar to women, it is the only guaranteed remedy. If it doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back.

It won't do to experiment with Catarrh. There's the constant danger of driving it to the lungs. You can have a perfect and permanent cure with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

Look on the Bright Side.

A man met a little fellow on the road carrying a basket of blackberries, and said to him, "Sammy, where did you get such nice berries?"

"Over there, sir, in the briars."

"Won't your mother be glad to see you come home with a basket of such nice ripe fruit?"

"Yes, sir," said Sammy, "she always seems glad when I hold up the berries, and I don't tell her anything about the briars in my feet."

The man rode on. Sammy's remark had given him a lesson, and he resolved that henceforth he would try to hold up the berries and say nothing about the briars.—Domestic Journal.

For Sleeplessness,
Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate,
and you will exchange a night of restless tossing for one of dreamless sleep.

The grace of silence under trial is one of the most rare and difficult graces; but it is one of the most pleasing to God, and most conducive to strength and beauty of Christian character. None of us love to suffer, and we all shudder at the sight of the probe or the amputating knife. But when the infinite Love is engaged in cutting out a selfish lust or cutting off a diseased limb, our duty is to submit.—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

A PRETTY FACE is the result of a healthy physical condition. "Beauty is but skin deep" yet it greatly depends on a clear complexion, free from wrinkles and hollow cheeks.

Health always brings wealth of beauty. A healthy state of the system comes with Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It's a medicine prepared for woman's ailments—it cures those derangements and weaknesses which make woman's life miserable.

A woman who neglects to take proper exercise is particularly prone to excessive congestion, debility and a sluggish circulation. This is the time we advise the "Prescription." In all derangements and displacements of the special organs which result in "signs of inflammation," in catarrhal discharges from the lining membranes, and in distressing irregularities—this medicine is guaranteed to benefit or cure, or the money is returned.

It is amusing to a Protestant to read the Catholic papers in these times. Of all the divisions of the Protestant churches, of all the changes that have come over Protestant denominations, of all the fierce discussions that have threatened their existence, none are to be compared with those which hover over American Catholics just now. For years the Catholic church has been divided into two great parties on the parish-school question, Archbishop Corrigan on one side at the head of seven of the thirteen Roman Archbishops of the United States, and Archbishop Ireland on the other side, as leader of the remaining six, the former contending for Catholic schools, independent of the State, for Catholic children, and favoring the ex communication of all Catholic parents who should educate their children otherwise; the latter favoring the Catholic schools, but declining to resort to extreme measures to maintain them, and expressing themselves as favoring a combination of the Catholic parish-schools with the public schools, which in our opinion is a movement to capture our public schools in the interest of Rome—a step that liberty-loving citizens would never abide. Archbishop Corrigan and his party represents the Pope in his deadly hatred of public schools; Ireland is more liberal, and is willing to count on future power. Both are dangerous to our national life and liberty. The Pope wanted to favor the former, but such action would lose him half his following in this country. So in his infallibility he favored both; sending a message of love, and praying for peace, he begged that his representative, Satolli, might be allowed to settle all further difficulties. All were forgiven, but nothing was settled. Of course this way of doing things did not tend to a settlement. Even the Catholic press openly ridiculed such an infallible way of settling matters. That is the way the dispute stands to-day. All sides are forgiven, but the question is still burning, and cannot be smothered with a message of love. The Pope has relaxed his severe discipline which heretofore held Rome in unity. Long since would it have torn itself in pieces but for the lash of the Pope. To-day he wields the lash no longer, and his subjects ridicule his infallibility as a hollow mockery. The end of Rome is coming. When Catholics cease to fear the Pope; when they send their children to public schools without fear of discipline; when they do not hesitate to ridicule his actions, which they once believed infallible and divine, we need have no fears but that they will go further, and deny his authority altogether. We can thank God that the school question arose in America—a country of free thought and independent people.

The "Parliament of mankind, the Federation of the world," has long been the theme of poets and the inspiration of orators, but until the last few years it has been looked upon as only the dream of the two above-named classes of humanity. And in fact even until quite recently we have never had anything approaching the true plan. Since the early centuries the churches have held Ecumenical councils, and in this century we have had a Pan-American Congress, and to-day England and America are settling a weighty quarrel by an international tribunal. But these are hardly worthy types of the vision of Tennyson. Not until the series of World's Congresses was instituted at Chicago was this method of representing the world's ideas in one great body practically applied. These congresses have considered many of our most vital questions, and many more are to be considered before the series is completed. That good will come of them, that they are the herald of a future parliament of mankind, that they are the stepping stone to universal peace and universal progress, cannot be doubted, if their management is only placed in worthy hands. They can be made an everlasting testimony to nineteenth century civilization if only that care and deliberation are used which such conferences deserve. Discoveries will be made, errors corrected, and truths will be made more apparent by the clash of brilliant minds. The followers of a new idea can find a congenial fellow struggler in them and they can unite for the universal good. Surely such an end should excite the encouragement of the people, and spur the representatives to redoubled efforts.

Just at this time our country presents the interesting spectacle of the patient attended by too many doctors. While interesting in the extreme, it is none the less sad and appalling. Congress was convened for the special purpose of relieving the people, and to do it quickly; and in the face of the fact that the legislative and executive branches of our government are controlled by the Democratic party, we can see no reason why relief measures, based on the platform of that party, should not be enacted in the next ten days. Yet the probabilities are that at least a month will have passed before any action is taken. Congressmen are wrangling, lobbyists are dilly dallying, Senators are pursuing the even tenor of their way, occasionally awakening to settle personal differences with the President, and this country of ours is having to take care of itself. There is no earthly reason for delay. There is no earthly cause for doubt as to what the Democratic party is pledged to do. It was placed in power on a well-defined and unmistakable platform, which the people will not forget. It is the one duty of the Democratic President and Congress to fulfill the promises of that platform in the most expeditious manner possible. This is no time to discuss measures—it is the time for action. Will Congress act? A negative answer means the death of the Democratic party.

Not the least striking of the many new departures of this progressive age is the part that woman is taking in what we were reared to deem man's particular domain. To-day the feminine doctor, lawyer, politician and lecturer, is abroad in the land. The greater colleges and universities are fast removing the barriers to higher education for woman. She knocks at the doors of the professions and is received. She has shown in many cases that man is in no way her superior. Her zeal to be self sustaining and progressive is commendatory, but we believe she is misusing her talents. On her rest responsibilities to which man can never be equal. She may take man's place, but than can never replace her. The moulding of the mind that shall shape the destinies of nations is in her hands, and to that one duty she should confine herself. For that duty she cannot be educated too highly, if she is to pursue it to the welfare of mankind and the glory of God.

Letter from Rev. L. N. Chappell.

Dear Recorder:—I have asked myself the question, "Are the Southern Baptists interested in the Geary bill, and are they especially anxious to do all they can to have it repealed?" I see no indication of any interest manifested so far as any discussion of the question in the papers would indicate careful thought on the subject, or any reference made to the matter in the deliberations of the last session of the Southern Baptist Convention. The Southern Presterians and Methodists and most other Christian bodies who have work in China are deeply interested in this important subject, and are doing what they can to have the bill repealed, and its present enactment delayed until public opinion shall have been sufficiently aroused to make the carrying out of the measure not only impracticable but impossible. Reaction is setting in on the Pacific coast, and many farmers, who employ many Chinese laborers, have begun to realize the loss threatened their work when the Chinese labor is to be forbidden a home in the States.

What is to be the result of these efforts is a most interesting question to your missionaries. What do the brethren of North Carolina think about it? What effort have you made to secure the repeal of this unjust measure and a continuance of residence under treaty rights for your brethren here in China? Li-Hong-Chang, whom you may call the Prime Minister (or else the Secretary of State) of China has expressed his purpose of retaliating on American citizens in China if the Chinese are expelled from the United States. A few important questions arise. Is the Geary act just? Granting for argument's sake that it is just, can the Christians in the United States afford to allow its enactment? If they do allow it, what results will follow so far as our missionary interests in China are concerned? Would Li-Hong-Chang carry out his threat? Suppose, for political reasons, real or imaginary, he should see fit to forget to retaliate by any governmental act of expulsion of all American citizens from China, what would be the regard with which all American citizens, missionaries and others, be held by the Chinese people? If allowed to stay here in durance vile and of bad odor socially, what immunities as to personal property privileges, or safety of personal life, would be expected? What special pretexts and added hate might be given discontented spirits among the people to give direct attention to American missionaries in times of riots or other disturbances? What moral influence could American citizens as such exert on the sober minded Chinese people to secure their good will and influence either for peace at such times, or protection of either life or property in times of danger? What assurance would we have that the officials would not stir up the people to mob violence directed against United States missionaries; and on appeal to the government at Peking, what hope have we of redress or protection? If during a general riot hereafter mission property should be lost, what hope of indemnity from the Chinese government? Heretofore we have lost nothing in this way because of the Chinese government. What is the specially encouraging features of mission work in China for our missionaries, if this monstrous measure is enacted? In case of immediate and angry retaliation on the part of the Chinese government, what would become of property left in China? And if the government, in the time of even the most mild and courteous expulsion, should be willing to protect American citizens as far as possible, what would they be able to do to restrain a fierce people, a fickle soldiery, and oftentimes an inhuman set of officials when goaded on by the special venom which this disgrace the United States government has shown to Chinese citizens would give them? If in open ports, partial protection were guaranteed by foreign gunboats, what would become of missionaries out of treaty ports, and especially those far off in the interior? Have we, as stewards of God's kingdom, asked ourselves if we are faithful to the responsibility laid upon us as citizens of the United States, so far as our privileges and rights to restrain unjust legislation, and our personal influence to secure not only good government at home, but the protection for God's servants of property and life and personal liberty abroad; and more than all, the welfare of the Master's kingdom not only by aggressive measures for extension, but also the protection of the work already accomplished is concerned?

These questions are not asked to discourage or unduly alarm any one; nor, on the other hand, are they entirely improbable alternatives. Let each one ask and answer these questions for himself, seriously and carefully, and ask God to guide him in what he shall do. If I shall have aroused interest in an important question in the minds of any who had failed to seriously consider it before, my object is secured.

In conclusion, let me say that the future for our work was never more bright and encouraging. If the Baptists of North Carolina allow these doors for missionary work to be closed on their missionaries in China by the political intrigue of a few corrupt men, without at least united and vigorous protest on their part, they must hereafter entertain many bitter regrets when it is perhaps too late. My hope is that the people are waking up to see that it is no small, insignificant matter, but one of the gravest import. Then I am sure that the matter will be promptly attended to and the threatened catastrophe averted.

Our work in Chinkiang is still encouraging. Daily inquirers come to talk about the gospel, and our services are well attended, notwithstanding the excessively hot weather.

Pray for your work in Chinkiang, that the Holy Ghost may come down with power upon your brethren and sisters here, both native and foreign, and that many souls may be saved from among this perishing people.

L. N. CHAPPELL.

Chinkiang, China, July 5, 1893.

[We take the liberty of making the following remarks in regard to Bro. Chappell's letter, in order that we may explain why Southern Baptists are not "specially anxious to do all they can to have the Geary act repealed." To one who is acquainted with our Chinese law of 1880, and the relation of this "Geary law" to it, there is but one side of the question and no ground for discussion. We explained in our issue of July 19th that the law was just, that it aimed at the welfare of the Chinese residents, as opposed to the herds smuggled into our confines by the "six companies." The Chinese would never have refused to comply with the law, but for the wonderful influence which that organization has over them. Like many American citizens, they commenced complaining long before they knew what the law was. All who are interested in this matter should read the terms of the law of 1880, and then those of the Geary law, along with some article like the one in the RECORDER of the 19th of July, before forming an opinion.—EDITOR.]

Illustrated Comments.

Standing on top of the Cheviot Hills, a little son's hand enclosed in his, a father taught the measure of the measureless love of God. Pointing northward over Scotland, then southward over England, then eastward over the German ocean, then westward over the weltering limitless hill and dale; and then sweeping his hand and his eye around the whole circling horizon, he said, "Johnny, my boy, God's love is as big as all that!"

"Why, Father," the boy cheerily replied with sparkling eyes, "then we must be in the very middle of it."

If all around him, the earth and the sky, was the love of God, he was in the very middle of it. Sometimes we realize this same great truth. How near then does he seem to be to us! We do not even have to look up to see him. Right before us he is and all around us. We could never be angry and in unlovely moods if we realized this all the time. In the middle of God's love! Oh! if God's love was only on one side of us, how we would hedge toward that side as the Alpine traveler does the rocky wall as he crosses the mountain. But now because it is on all sides of us, we hardly care to reach out and touch it.

Only think of it—God's love! I may go wrong a thousand times, and so far that my friends can't reach me or help me; but no matter how far, God's love goes around me and heads me off. Did you ever think that when the prodigal son went "into a far country" and was going further and further in his despair and want, that the father's love headed him off, and, circling nearer and nearer, got into his heart, and he remembered then that in his father's house there was "enough and to spare"?

I may get very deep in sin; but sink however rapidly, still his love stretches firm under my feet. It surrounds me like a wall. It covers me as a roof. It sustains me as a floor. I cannot rise out of it. I cannot sink beneath it.

A gentleman was driven by a fierce mountain fire to take refuge on a cliff on the mountain side. Looking down he saw below in a small tree an eagle's nest full of young. The fire raged up the mountain side sweeping all before it. Nearer and nearer it came. The mother eagle, as the cinders and the fire's hot breath came nearer, rose out of the nest, and, sweeping in wide circles, uttered her shrill cries of distress. At last the flames reached the tree, and the branches blazed and crackled. The eagle from her airy safety swept down upon the nest, and, with wings outstretched over them, buried her head among her young, and, quivering from wing-tip to wing-tip, died in the blaze! This incident was told by a rude but eloquent mountain preacher not many months ago to illustrate the love of Christ, and with powerful effect. And how movingly does it illustrate it. The love of Christ! The Father loves me. I am his son. But Christ, my Brother Christ, puts his arms about me, and, standing where I stand on the steps of life which lead up to the Father's throne, feels with me and pleads for me. And my Father forgives me because my Elder Brother wants him to and begs for me.

The love of God makes me glad, but the love of Christ makes me tender. The love of God makes me secure, but the love of Christ makes me happy and mellows my heart.

Have you ever been lying down and have some loved one come and put the affectionate arm about you and the loving face down? How you can reach up and feel the tenderness beating from heart full to finger tip as you respond to the caress. The love of Christ brings somewhat the same feeling. It penetrates to the very core of our hearts. It is both a human love and a divine—a God-love and a man-love. Oh! the power to know the love—to "be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth and length and depth and height, and to know the love of Christ." Truly, "it passeth understanding." Come on Death with thy red tongued arrows! Sweep storms! Howl tempests! Break storms! Crash thunders! Surge waves! Nay, nay! none of these things move us. "In all these things we are more than conquerors." "For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

JNO. E. WHITE.

Modern Heresy.

I noticed in the RECORDER recently two articles on ball-players and patrons in general, and one certain preacher in particular.

As far as the matter relates to him, it is a personal one, and I do not propose to discuss it. The gentleman who has thus brought discredit upon his high calling by attending a match-game of ball, has probably realized the fact that, considering the enormity of his offense, his critics were justified in departing from the Christian method of correcting a brother's fault, and in publicly pointing out his failings in a manner so plain that a large number of your readers could not fail to understand to whom the allusion was meant to apply.

I believe, however, the body of the charge is, that he was present at the game. I do not suppose that either of the writers would accuse our erring brother of having any money up on the result.

Nor yet do they hold him responsible for the civil strife and internal dissension that have divided two once friendly but now belligerent towns.

As he was in no way connected with the betting or the quarreling, they must base their censure upon the merits of the case, i. e., the game is wrong of itself, which position is taken by one of your correspondents. That, of course, is a matter of difference of opinion.

Howard Crosby, Noah K. Davis and a number of other eminent men, whose names are synonyms for Christian character, are advocates of our national game. These, it would seem, are entitled to some weight, even against our friends who pronounce anathemas on this popular amusement.

Of course, no Christian man endorses betting. But it should be remembered that there is essential difference between bet and abet.

And the fact that bets are made upon a certain event does not necessarily imply inconsistency on the part of all Christians who manifest an interest in the issue of that event. During the course of the last Presidential campaign, thousands of dollars were waged. Indeed, no election of importance takes place unattended by the same disgraceful circumstances; yet no reasonable man would make this lamentable fact a ground for abolishing the office of President.

Or, again, the running of an excursion is often celebrated in a most riotous manner by the festive; yet no conclusion could be drawn therefrom that excursions are not of themselves sources of harmless amusement and profit.

Neither are the fiercest opponents of baseball generally averse to attending county fairs, where the racer is found in all his glory, and where the man in striped pantaloons invites all passers-by, in a melodious voice, to come in and bet on his: "Here it is and there it is; now where is it?"

Let me, in conclusion, recommend our friends to a study of those words which, falling from the lips of Divine Wisdom, sounded the key-note for a broader charity in the judgments of men, "Let him that is without sin cast the first stone."

THOS. M. HUFHAM.

"Go the Whole Hog or None."

Bro, Bailey:—Tell Bro. Matthews that I am not surpised at the Advocate favoring an exchange of pulpits with Baptists; but how a Missionary Baptist can favor it and be consistent, I can't see. I wonder if the brother would commune with them? Tell him to go "the whole hog or none." Consistency, what a jewel!

W.

Randleman, Aug. 1, 1893.

To love God is to love his character. For instance, God is purity. And to be pure in thought and look, to turn away from unhallowed books and conversation, to abhor the moments in which we have not been pure, is to love God. God is love; and to love men till private attachments have expanded into a philanthropy which embraces all, at last even the evil and enemies with compassion, that is to love God. God is truth. To be true, to hate every form of falsehood, to live a brave, true, real life,—that is to love God. God is infinite; and to love the boundless, reaching on from grace to grace, adding charity to faith, and rising upwards to see the ideal still above us, and to with it unattained, aiming insatiably at perfect even as the Father is perfect, that is to love God.—F. W. Robertson.

CHRISTIAN UNION AGAIN.

Much is being said and written now on this great theme. The RECORDER has more than once defined its views on this important subject. Some things said and written on this matter are wise, and some are quite otherwise. For instance, the Independent, an influential paper published at New York City, has hit on what it conceives to be quite a good plan for Christian union, or the fusion of all denominations into one. That is, if we understand the editor's theory, for all denominations to unite under one organization, with the understanding that each individual or local church be allowed all the liberty of faith and practice they now enjoy under separate denominations. Under this plan, of course, each local church could practice or refuse to practice infant baptism; could practice immersion, sprinkling or pouring; could hold Arminian or Calvinistic doctrine; in short, could believe and practice almost anything within the possible range of orthodoxy, so these local churches continued in fellowship with the general body, by whatever name it might be known.

This may strike many, as it seems to strike the Independent, as a beautiful, and even wise, plan; but there are many practical difficulties in the way of it that may not have occurred to the Independent and those who agree with it. It would be quite interesting to know what system of church government, if any, the proposed general body would use. Would it use the Episcopal, the Presbyterian, the Baptist, or what? Would it attempt to cut the Gordian knot, and solve the whole difficulty by adopting the Romish form of church government? If so, who would be Pope?

Another interesting question might be asked about the situation under the halcyon days that the Independent sees, or would like to see, and that is, if such large liberty of conscience, faith and practice were allowed local churches, how could the members be expected to agree among themselves as to any doctrine or practice? Half of the church might be Calvinists and the other half Arminians—would they not wrangle? One third might be in favor of a bishop; another third might be satisfied with ruling elders and presbytery; and yet another might very positively object to both—how could they reconcile their differences? "How can two walk together except they be agreed?" Again, one-fourth might prefer sprinkling for baptism; another fourth might prefer pouring; another immersion; and yet another none at all. How could these agree. How could their pastor preach to them on the command to be baptized? If he preached at all, would he not be in the position of the country school-master who, learning that his prospective patrons at a certain place differed as to the earth being a globe, proposed to teach that "she was round or flat," as his patrons preferred. Would such be a united church? "A house divided against itself cannot stand."

After all, we think the Baptist position in regard to Christian union the only safe and logical one, and that is that all Christians come together on the common basis of the Bible, and that alone. The Bible, honestly and candidly interpreted, would bring about uniformity of faith and practice, and even oneness of organization. Whatever doctrine was plainly taught could be held, and any not plainly taught, or that clashed with that which was plain, would have to be abandoned. Whatever form of baptism is plainly taught could be practiced, but all other forms would have to be abandoned. Whatever form of church government was recognized by Christ, and established by the apostles, could be adopted; but this adoption would exclude all other forms; and so on to the end of the list. When the end was reached there would be oneness of faith, and oneness of practice, and oneness of organization would easily follow. And these can come in no other way.

It will not do to attempt to dodge this conclusion by saying, "If Christians should come together to effect a union of the different denominations they could not agree because they would differ in their interpretation of the Bible." This objection is robbed of half of its force when we remember that men often fail to agree because they do not wish to agree. The Bible is not a difficult book if men wish to understand it. [illegible] agree when they have an in[illegible] basis of truth on which to agree. [illegible] is undoubtedly such a basis, and [illegible] men unite on this basis they [illegible] who offer the above [illegible] that they charge God foolishly with having given man a book for his guidance that is very difficult to be understood. Christian union in our opinion will never come until all Christians abandon preconceived notions and prejudices, and come to the study of the Bible with the spirit of humility and obedience, making it, and it alone, the basis of agreement, and hence, its statements the infallible and all-sufficient test of faith and practice.

SPEAKING FOR OTHERS.

There is a habit more or less prevalent, especially among public speakers or writers, that deserves some notice, and considering the extent to which it is often carried, sometimes deserves popular condemnation. We refer to the custom of some speakers or writers who, simply because they, and a few friends they have consulted, are in favor of or opposed to a certain measure, take the liberty of asserting "the people want this thing," or are opposed to it, as the case may be. Do these speakers claim that they and a few of their friends are the people? If so, their assertions would at least be consistent with their belief, though they might bid defiance to modesty and logic. If they do not mean this, and have not consulted all of the people for whom they speak, what right have they to make such assertions?

Some of our honored brethren that belong to that part of the editorial fraternity that run our religious press, publish their papers in the folio form. Some of these are excellent and able journals, and if the editors or publishers prefer giving their patrons four instead of eight or more pages of matter, that is their business and not ours. In scanning the pages of one of our valued exchanges, however, we recently found in a letter of one of its correspondents the statement, "The people do not want any more (matter) than you send them every week." To our certain knowledge, that paper has a large circulation, and we are constrained to ask where did that brother get his information? Had he gone or written to the homes of all the patrons of that paper and consulted them? If not, what right had he to make that assertion?

Again, does it not often happen that a brother who wishes to start a new enterprise, and who has troubled himself to consult only a few of his friends, whom he may find quite enthusiastic in regard to it, take the liberty of asserting that "the people are ripe for this movement; they want it, and want it now." Often the people are ripe for a new movement, but no man should assert that such is their desire, unless he knows what he says is strictly true. The same is true of those who oppose a new enterprise. It is quite common, because they and a few who think with them oppose a measure, for them to assert, "the people are not ready for this thing; they do not want it;" while in fact many of the people have been hoping and praying for it for years.

It would accord much more closely with the truth if the speaker or writer in such cases would say, "I think the people are opposed to (or favor) this thing," &c. But even that assertion cannot be truthfully made unless the speaker has learned in some way the general sentiment of the people. In learning that, if there are any well-marked exceptions, let him have the candor to admit it. To pursue any other course is, in plain English, to deal in falsehood. It would be well for brethren, who are fond of "speaking for the South," to think a little along this line when they address large religious assemblies, North, South, East, or West. It may appear very grand to speak for a whole section of our great country, including millions of people; it may "astonish the natives" into asking "Who is he?" it may cause the applauding brethren to put in their dusty work, and the Anglomaniac to bawl, "Hear! hear!" but none of this, nor all of it, will excuse the presumption of making unauthorized or exaggerated statements.

WAKE FOREST COLLEGE.

It is now two weeks before the opening of the fifty-ninth session of this institution, so necessary to the progress of our denomination, so valuable to its interests, and so worthy of its support. The time is short, but much good work can be done for it in the few days that remain.

The professors are already at work, and have been for a good part of the summer; some of its students are sowing seeds in its interest here and there; but we fear that the great body of the denomination, on which the College must depend for support, is unmindful that just at this time its co-operation was never more necessary to the welfare of the College. With the aim of arousing the people to their interests, we have these few words to say:—

If there is a father in the State who hesitates to send his son to Wake Forest this fall on account of the expense, we want to assure him that he can endow his son with no richer legacy than an education; and he can do it no where so cheaply and profitably as at Wake Forest College.

In a recent issue of the Wake Forest Student Prof. Carlyle set forth in unmistakable terms that ten months' schooling, with all necessary expenses, can be obtained at Wake Forest College for $150—hardly as much as will cost to keep your boy at home and send him to an academy, not to mention the difference in the quantity and quality of the education that is gained, which has enabled many young men to pay their college expenses by work in the three months vacation.

To those who fear that Wake Forest is not "up to the standard," we would point with pride to the hundreds of her successful sons in this and other States, and request them to read the words of the distinguished Dr. Noah K. Davis in this issue. A greater compliment could not be paid our College and its President, and coming as it does from one so high in educational circles—a leading professor in the University of Virginia—it should have especial force.

We would urge upon Baptists generally that they can engage in no better employment in behalf of their denomination just at this time than aiding in the working of the College by encouraging young men to attend it this fall. It is a great institution, which has been the pride of our denomination for half a century, and all it needs to place it far and away ahead of any similar Southern institution is that active working interest of its friends, which no one will deny it richly deserves.

Wake Forest College should have two hundred and fifty students within its walls this year, and it will have them, despite the "hard times" and "superior (?) standards," if its friends will bestir themselves in its interest in the few days that remain.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

FLAT RIVER ASSOCIATION.

This body met last week with Mt. Zion church in Granville county. This was the centennial year of this Association, and by appointment last year Bro. R. I. Devin read an interesting sketch of the history of the Association from its formation a hundred years ago to the present time. But for the fact that Bro. Devin has promised to furnish this manuscript for publication, we would as a matter of interest to our readers give some extracts from this excellent paper. It is well written, was finely read, and deserves a place in the Baptist history of our State.

At 12 o'clock on Tuesday it looked as if the whole country around had come to the Association. In addition, we note a large number of brethren from other Associations and representatives of the various interests of our denominational work. Prof. W. B. Royall from Wake Forest is here to speak and work for the College; Rev. W. R. Gwaltney, for the Board of Ministerial Education; Dr. C. Durham, for the Board of Missions; brethren Bryan and Herring, for China, and Bro. Van Deventer, Vice-President of the Foreign Mission Board, for the work which always lies so near his heart. These brethren, when united with the home talent of this, one of the very best manned Associations in the State, make a force well fitted to celebrate this, the one hundredth year in its history.

The subject of education never was given so much prominence in our Associational meetings as has been given it the present year. Prof. Royall led in the discussion of Wake Forest, in which he clearly and forcibly urged our people to support and sustain our own institutions. He was followed by President Hobgood and Rev. J. A. Beam, both of whom made strong and earnest appeals upon this subject.

Following this, was the subject of Periodicals. The report was read by Rev. W. F. Watson, in which the history and efficiency of the BIBLICAL RECORDER was specially made prominent. Bro. Watson made a good speech upon the report, and was listened to by the friends of the RECORDER (whose name in this section is "legion") with gratifying interest. This was Bro. Watson's first opportunity to attend this Association, and the warm welcome he received at the hands of the brethren ought to be a fresh impetus in his work among them.

Brethren Bryan and Herring had a fine discussion on the subject of Foreign Missions. The house was packed, and many were on the outside who wished to hear the different views of these two brethren expressed, as well as from the work in China. The brethren here, as in other parts of the State, love Bro. Herring very much, and would rejoice greatly if he could see his way to work in accordance with our organized plans of doing this work, but he will hardly receive much substantial aid in the new plans which he now proposes to try. Every day I heard brethren express the hope that he may yet return to his former position and do his work as heretofore.

Bro. Mills made a very tender and interesting talk for the Orphanage. The people always hear Bro. Mills with interest when he speaks, and the only reason they did not give him the finest collection the Orphanage ever received was, that they did not have the money. Some money was given, and a large lot of provisions will be sent soon.

A good discussion of Sunday-schools and Temperance was had on Thursday, the last day of the session.

Bro. A. C. Parham presided over the body so as to give additional interest to the discussions which were good all the way through. The church in which the Association met is probably the best country church in the State, built of brick, of good architecture, ventilation first-rate, and seats comfortable. The entire cost was $1,600, and we should have supposed it cost at least $3,000.

THE YADKIN ASSOCIATION.

This was the first opportunity we have ever had of attending this Association. Reaching there on Friday morning, the hundreds of fine horses and mules looked as if they had been brought out for exhibition. The Association was held in a beautiful grove where the oak, hickory and dogwood grew so thick as to form an arbor, keeping out the sun at almost every point.

Bro. J. E. Burrows was again elected Moderator. He is a very popular officer. He does not limit the speakers, but lets them talk as long as they can stand. There is no finer section in all this country than that embraced in the Yadkin Association. There is a wilderness of corn for miles up and down the Yadkin river; fine wheat and oat crops have already been harvested; tobacco is large and already yellowing up nicely on the hill; and fine fruit and luscious melons are there in the greatest abundance. Judging from the way some of our visiting brethren get on the outside of chicken, lamb, vegetables, milk and butter, sour-wood honey (the best in the world), we suppose they were assured that there was plenty more "where they came from."

The churches were all represented, and the improvement which has been made in all the departments of work is very marked to the older brethren who knew this body many years ago. However, we feel that what has been will hardly be thought of after the lapse of twenty years more.

There are now about a half dozen well located, well equipped high schools in this Association. These schools will in time to come recast and re energize this whole country. Dr. Taylor made the finest address on education it has ever been my privilege to hear. I enjoyed the speech for what it contained, but more still when I saw the hearty response it met with in the minds and hearts of the vast crowd to whom he spoke.

Here Bro. Gwaltney was at home among those who have always known him. He made a splendid speech in the interest of Ministerial Education.

Here, as at all our Associations, Brother Bryan was received with great joy and listened to with much interest as he told of his experience and work in China.

Prof. J. E. Greene of Booneville, and Dr. Stallings, who is just beginning a school at Low Gap, spoke in the interest of their schools.

There are many facts about this Association to which we would find pleasure in alluding, but we are reminded our space is already taken up. J. C. C.

THERE are probably one thousand good Baptist people who will read this issue of the RECORDER, each of whom is owing from one to three dollars on their subscription. Most of them will let the week go by without so much as a thought of paying us. Some want to pay, but haven't the money. On these we can wait. But others have the money, and won't pay just because they don't think of it, and if they do, they think also that we can wait. As long as you are able, it is your duty to pay your debts; it is the duty of every Christian. We hope those subscribers who have the money, but are "waiting," will send it this week. We cannot let things go on at the present rate. We need money to run the paper—and need it badly. While it is only $2 to you, it is $2,000 to us, and we must have part of it.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Dr. J. W. M. Williams of Baltimore was in Raleigh last week.

....Rev. J. K. Fant occupied the pulpit of the church in Wilson on Sunday last.

....Rev. D. N. Gore has changed his address from Loris, N. C., to Chadbourne, N. C.

....We learn with regret that the venerable Dr. Chas. F. Deems of New York is near death's door.

....Dr. Harrell and Rev. J. T. Jenkins were engaged in a series of meetings at Manchester last week.

....Rev. Henry Sheets had the assistance of Rev. N. S. Jones in a blessed meeting at Trading Ford last week.

....Rev. J. E. Greene, principal of the Yadkin Valley Institute, Booneville, has been called to the pastorate of the church in that place.

....Rev. F. H. Jones of Chatham, Va., has recently been engaged in several very successful meetings, which have resulted in over sixty baptisms.

....Rev. J. L. White of Asheville is spending part of his vacation at Baltimore. He preached for Dr. Wharton in the Brantly church on Sunday, the 20th.

....Dr. T. E. Skinner, who is supplying for the First Baptist church of this city during the absence of Dr. Carter, preached two fine sermons on Sunday last.

....Rev. J. L. White of Asheville has been granted a vacation by his church. He deserves it after that glorious revival which must have worked him very hard.

....Rev. Jno. E. White filled the pulpit of the Tabernacle of this city on Sunday last before large audiences. Bro. White has made a fine impression on our people during the short time which he has supplied at the Tabernacle. He preaches at the First church of Durham on next Sunday.

....It is highly probable that Dr. R. R. Acree of Roanoke, Va., will accept the call to the pastorate of the First church, Knoxville, Tenn., recently extended him.

....Rev. Jno. E. White's article in this issue bears a blessed message of God's love to our readers. This young brother grows in grace daily, and we are always glad to hear from him.

....Rev. H. H. Poston of Smithfield writes: "We have just closed a gracious meeting with Shiloh church. Seventy have been baptized and several others are expected to follow."

....We were very glad to have a pleasant visit from Brother and Sister Willoughby of Marion, S. C., who have been spending a vacation in an extended trip to New York State. They stopped over at Wake Forest on their return.

....It has been reported that Rev. C. S. Cashwell, who resigned the pastorate of the Mocksville church recently, had been called to Hickory. This is a mistake. Bro. Cashwell has not yet decided on a field.

....A writer in an exchange pleads for "Moral Law in the Secular World." That is what we are needing now, and needing badly. A revival of the fear of God which is the only basis for moral law.—Western Recorder.

....The Baptist Sunday school Board has an interesting advertisement in this issue. In view of the scarcity of money they have made timely reductions in the prices of their publications, which we commend to our readers' consideration.

....We are under obligations to Bro. H. L. Hall for the information that the South River Association meets this year at Piny Green church, Sampson county, instead of Piny Grove, as it appeared in our types. We gladly make the correction.

....Rev. J. F. Tuttle has resigned the pastorate of the Plymouth church, to take effect September 1st. Bro. Tuttle's resignation is a serious blow to this church, with which he has been connected so long; and which he has done so much to build up.

....Bro. R. T. Bryan, our returned missionary, will soon furnish the readers of the RECORDER an article on systematic giving in our churches. Brother Bryan is finding the greatest favor among our people, and they will read with great interest whatever he may write.

....Rev. B. H. Matthews has resigned the pastorate of the church at Smyrna, and will enter some Seminary this fall. Bro. Matthews has met with no small success at Smyrna, and we are very glad to learn that he is able to prepare himself more fully for the work.

....Rev. J. F. Tuttle writes: "I spent last week delightfully with Bro. Stallings in a meeting at Coinjock. It was refreshing to see how strongly he has bound himself to those people. Already held in warmest esteem, the Lord has for him, I'm sure, still higher honors."

....The young man whom the world has use for, is the young man who, as good President Anderson of Rochester was wont to say, "can bring things to pass." And the better the pass, the better the man, and the more the world wants him; always provided the thing is worth bringing.—Standard.

....The glorious meeting held by Rev. J. T. Jenkins and others at Teachey's, near Wilmington, closed with great success last Tuesday. The average daily attendance was one thousand. There have been forty baptisms, and many more are expected, as there were two hundred professions of religion.

....Rev. J. L. White of Asheville states the following in a communication to the Baltimore Baptist on "Dr. Wharton in Asheville, N. C.": "My church has been greatly strengthened. Sixty-seven have been added with others to follow. The other churches of all denominations have received large additions."

....Prof. Carlyle writes a letter full of interest to Baptists in this issue. In a private letter he says: "I have been very, very sick, but am improving now. The RECORDER gave me great pleasure during my illness." Bro. Carlyle will be at Wake Forest in good time for the opening, the prospects for which at this time are brightening.

....The Lutheran World has no sympathy with the modern martyr. It says: "In the primitive church it cost a good deal to be a martyr. But now it is easy and simple. It is only necessary to proclaim some heresy, turn one's back on the church and cry out, 'liberty,' and there you have your martyr. Nineteenth century martyrs are a cheap lot."—Western Recorder.

....It is gratifying to the members and friends of the Park Avenue Baptist church to see how favorably their new pastor, Dr. J. J. Hall, is being received. He seems to grow in favor with the members and the community. At both services held on Sunday the edifice was crowded, especially at night. Many were turned away, the seating capacity of the church having been taxed to its utmost. The doctor held his audiences to the close. Five new members were received by letter.—Norfolk Landmark.

....Dr. Wayland Hoyt of Minneapolis is reported as saying that if St. Paul were on the earth now he would be found editing a religious paper. Perhaps the doctor is right in this and in a good many other things he has said, for he is a very thoughtful and observant man. We feel sure that Paul, if alive, would not neglect so great an agency for influencing men rightly. We have often wondered that so many pastors can be indifferent to the circulation of religious papers in their congregations. A more powerful aid for advancing the Master's cause can hardly be found. Besides, the denominational paper wherever read is helpful to the pastor's work.—Baltimore Baptist.

....While contention, strife and division are to be generally deprecated, we are of the opinion that none of our readers will weep over the present row among the Catholics. With its Pope stripped of his awe-inspiring infallibility (?) and divinity (?) the Catholic church can never hope to maintain that unity which has heretofore made it powerful over men and dangerous to liberty.

....We were glad to read the following good news from the Roxboro Courier: Rev. G. T. Watkins informs us that he closed a glorious series of meetings with Berry's Grove church last Saturday. As a result of the meeting, there were about twenty professions in Christ, six or eight backsliders reclaimed and the church greatly revived. Rev. Mr. Watkins is a most successful pastor as the result of his meeting show.

....On August 3d the widely known Northfield Conference of Christian Workers met in annual session. In the absence of Mr. Moody in Chicago, Dr. A. J. Gordon, familiar to our readers as the father-in-law of Rev. Ed. M. Poteat, assisted by Revs. A. C. Dixon, A. F. Pierson, Geo. Needham, and others, have been conducting the conference with their usual success. On the 9th Mr. Moody arrived and takes charge hereafter.

....Rev. B. F. Hargett has been preaching in Chesterfield and Lancaster counties, South Carolina, reports great revivals and forty-five baptisms within the last month. Rev. M. A. Adams and Rev. D. A. Snider conducted a meeting at Oak Grove last week and had great success in their efforts. Rev. A. B. Caudle and Rev. A. C. Davis conducted a meeting at Stillwell Grove, in Mecklenburg county, and at its close nineteen were received into the church.—Monroe Enquirer, Aug. 17.

....Be sure that in this time of retrenchment you do not begin at the wrong end. The religious weekly is necessary in your home. You cannot well do without it. Cut down expenses somewhere else. Yet more important is it that you do not reduce your gifts to religious objects. Let the ladies spare a ribbon or two, the men smoke fewer and less costly cigars—let the reduction be made somewhere else than in the amounts spent for religious purposes — Religious Herald.

....We were very glad to see Prof. C. L. Smith of the Chair of Political Economy at William Jewel College, Mo., on his return from a vacation, spent partly at Chicago, and partly on the sea-coast of North Carolina. Prof. Smith was at one time connected with the RECORDER, afterwards he became an instructor in Johns Hopkins University, and in his present position is considered one of the leading southern educator. He has met with large success also as an University Extention lecturer.

....The sisters of the First Baptist church, Raleigh, under the name of the "Church Improvement Society," have just completed the repairs of the Sunday-school room of the church at an outlay of several hundred dollars. The room is now a beauty, and one of the most attractive in the State. The Sunday school occupied their bright and cozy quarters on Sunday morning last, after an absence therefrom of a number of weeks pending which the repairs and improvements were made. Superintendent Brewer greatly aided the sisters in their praiseworthy work.

....Rev. J. H. Edwards initiated his pastorate of the First Baptist church, Fayetteville, with instructive, impressive and beautiful services throughout last Sunday. The morning sermon was sensible, practical and very forcible, and delivered with power and effect; in the afternoon the rite of baptism was administered at Mallett's pond, and there were thirteen accessions to the church, eight by letter and five by baptism.—Gazette, Aug. 16. Bro. Edwards is proving to be the "right man in the right place" at the beginning.

...."Churches on Wheels" by the American Baptist Publication Society, is a very interesting little publication on the recent movement to evangelize destitute districts on a railroad car. The two years work of the first chapel car is stated as follows: This car has been used on the railroads, and by their generous favors, for more than two years visiting sparse settlements, frontier towns, and places without religious privileges. It has traveled some twenty thousand miles, visited one hundred and seventy-three places, and in it were held about one thousand one hundred and sixty religious meetings. There were one thousand two hundred and ten professions of conversion reported, twenty one Sunday-schools were formed, nineteen churches were organized and provided with pastors, seven hundred and eighty-seven families were visited, and Bibles, tracts, periodicals, pamphlets, etc., were liberally distributed with excellent results. Efforts are being made to build more of these chapel cars.

....The following from Prof. Noah K. Davis, L. L. D., of the University of Virginia, in the Religious Herald, is a testimony to our College and its President of which we may all be proud: "My attention has just been called to the article in the Religious Herald of July 27th under this title, ('Our Colleges,') by President Charles E. Taylor, D. D., of Wake Forest College, N. C. Dr. Taylor's dignified presentation of the status and animus of this college is admirable, and demonstrates the character and aims of the institution to be of the highest order. This is not news to me, and I presume to hardly any who watch with interest the growth of our educational establishments. Wake Forest College has had many years of usefulness, but especially during the presidency of Dr. Taylor has it enlarged to magnificent proportions, and is doing a grand work, that is a matter of pride and congratulation not only with the Baptists of the Old North State, but of all States, and with all good citizens of every name. I rejoice in its prosperity, its efficiency and its loyalty."

....Mrs. D. S. Vann of Wake Forest has returned from her trip to the World's Fair with Col. E. G. Harrell's party, and expresses herself as highly pleased with the excursion and its management.

....A seven days meeting at Berry's Grove closed on the 11th inst., resulting in twenty-one professions of faith, six or eight reclamations, and nine additions to the church. The pastor, Rev. G. T. Watkins, did the preaching. The Lord is greatly blessing Bro. Watkins' labors at this point.

....The First church, Knoxville, has been living on supplies this summer, but has not starved by any means. During May they sampled—very moderately and judiciously. If the thing has to be done, we commend the First church way of doing it. In June Bro. Ashby Jones supplied; the first three Sundays in July the former pastor, Rev. E. A. Taylor of Utica, N. Y.; the last two, Bro. John A. Wray of Knoxville has filled the pulpit. The last named brother preached his first sermon within the last month, but not his only one, for the churches have been working him freely. He is a young man of strong parts and fine prospects, a graduate of Wake Forest, and is to enter the Seminary at Louisville this fall. You will hear of him again.—Baptist and Reflector. His many friends in this State will be glad to read the foregoing good news concerning Bro. Wray. While at college, Bro. Wray was considered a speaker of no little power, and we are glad that he has turned his talents to the pulpit.

Ho for the State of Buncombe.

If any reader of the RECORDER has gotten his ideas of Western North Carolina from the reading of such authors as Charles Elbert Craddock, he would have had his notions rudely shocked by a visit to the Buncombe county Association, which met last Tuesday at Fairview church. Seldom have I visited a Baptist Association anywhere in North Carolina composed of better material, favored with more interesting discussions, or entertained with more elegant hospitality.

Bro. Brown's introductory sermon, carefully prepared and delivered with force and animation, was a discussion of the several living issues in which the Association was interested. It struck the key-note for the whole session.

The most interesting feature of the meeting up to the time I left were the speeches on Conventional Missions and the Asheville Baptist. Bro. Morgan seemed to be the very man for the position which he holds as Secretary. The strong and tender addresses made by him and Bro. White found their way to the hearts and pockets of the brethren. Bro. Speight announced that plans had been matured for making the Asheville Baptist a better paper than ever before. Within a few weeks it will be printed on heavier paper, with new type, and he will have assistance in his editorial work. The price has been reduced to one dollar a year.

The beautiful Baptist church is not quite finished and the sessions of the body were held in the commodious chapel of the Fairview Academy. This is a large and imposing brick building. As one stands at the door, which faces Hickory Nut Gap, his eye ranges over miles of the loveliest scenery. The name is justified by the location. Bro. Dunford, who was principal of the school last year, has retired, and Bro. A. J. Justice, who impressed me very favorably, will be in charge next session. There is a future of growing usefulness and influence before Fairview, Judson, and Mars Mill. As a Baptist I rejoice that we have such institutions in Western North Carolina. No man can forecast the good that they may do in the future. It was a pleasing surprise to meet at Fairview my colleague, Prof. Lanneau. He and others discussed education and told the brethren about their College at Wake Forest. It is gratifying to know that five or six young men from this Association, now expect to be with us in September.

My kind host in Asheville, Bro. J. H. Tucker, took me through the stately edifice which has lately been completed by the Baptists of that city. I wish that I had time to describe it. Sufficient to say that there is no other church in the State equal to it in beauty, convenience, and seating capacity. They have a membership of eight hundred—a hive of busy workers. It was a joy to worship with them in the Wednesday night service on my way back from the Association. Many words of loving and loyal enthusiasm did I hear about Bro. White, the eloquent preacher and faithful pastor.

To have lingered a few days in the Land of the Sky would have been delightful. But my trip was not for rest or pleasure and I had to hurry away to the Yadkin Association. Your own Caddell will tell of this, so I need not.

Only about a fortnight more, now, and College will open. The hardest and best work of the whole summer campaign ought to be done within these two weeks. There are many places which I should have been glad to visit, but, alas, how can one cover with his personal work a great State like this? I have done the most and the best that I could, and have spent the busiest summer of my life in work for the College. But after all, the College has been built up in the past, not by the labors of any one man or of any half-dozen men, but by the active co operation of hundreds. So it must be now. The pastors, the multitudes of Alumni and other friends of Wake Forest,—they know the young men in their own sections who ought to be encouraged to enter Wake Forest this fall. And it may be that a word of sympathetic suggestion and sympathy to them within the next few days will bring about resolves and action which will change the whole course of their lives and make them grateful as long as they live for the interest in them thus manifested.

I hear of very many new students from this and other States. C. E. TAYLOR.

Some communications are crowded out of this issue.

Wake Forest and Other Matters

Dear Recorder:—The weekly visits of the RECORDER have never been so eagerly looked for and highly appreciated by me as during the last six weeks. Even when my fever was highest, I read its columns with interest and pleasure. I am now at

CARSON SPRINGS.

I am rapidly regaining my strength, and hope to be entirely well before the opening of the session. These Springs are situated six miles from Newport on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad, in a narrow valley almost entirely surrounded by high mountains. The scenery is beautiful. The air is pure and bracing. The temperature, even in the hottest weather, never rises higher than sixty or seventy degrees. The effect of the water is immediate and sometimes almost wonderful. During three days of last week I gained six pounds in weight. I would advise North Carolina invalids in need of health and rest to come here. An excellent hotel is kept by Mr. C. T. Peterson, who furnishes the best of fare and first-class accommodations at very reasonable rates. Persons desiring to come here can address him at Newport, Tenn.

NORTH CAROLINIANS IN TENNESSEE.

Rev. Oscar Haywood, who has served the Morristown church as pastor so ably and acceptably for two or three years, has resigned, and expects to enter the Seminary at Louisville in September.

Rev. J. C. Rockwell is much beloved by his people in Newport. It does a fellow North Carolinian good to hear the many things they say of him. He preached an excellent sermon for us at the "Springs" last Sunday evening.

The Knoxville papers state that in the absence of the pastor, the pulpit of the First Baptist church in that city was very acceptably filled recently by Rev. J. A. Wray, who received his diploma from Wake Forest last June.

Judge B. J. Lee, a native of Caswell county and an honored alumnus of Wake Forest College, at present the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Tennessee, has been seriously ill at his home in Brownsville. His death would be a great loss to the State.

REV. R. R. DAY.

I was greatly saddened by the announcement of the death of this excellent young man. I first met him at a meeting of the Yadkin Association three years ago. I was impressed then with his clear head, and judgment, and wise counsels, and with the fact that the people who knew him best, with whom he had lived from childhood, had unbounded confidence in him. In the following September he entered Wake Forest as a student. From the very beginning of his course, he impressed everybody, Faculty and students, with his firm, earnest Christian character. There were no compromises in his religious life. Faithful in the discharge of every duty, firm in his defence of the right, and strictly conscientious in all his actions, doing good at all times, he was indeed a living, eloquent example of the power and beauty of the spirit of Christ. He frequently came to my room to recite lessons missed while away preaching. At such times I learned to know him as I have known few students. The one theme of his conversation, the one desire of his heart, the one passion that controlled his life, was the glory of his blessed Master's name and the spread of his kingdom. Truly for him to live was Christ. During last session, though burdened with work in his classes, his longing to be at work in the Lord's vineyard and his desire to relieve the Board of Education and thus enable it, with what had been given him, to support another worthy young man, caused him to assume the pastoral care of several churches. His labors were arduous and continuous. He was a preacher of unusual power though a very young man, and gave promise of a life of marked success and usefulness. But he is gone. The soldier, buckling on his armor for the battles of the Cross, has been called up higher to join in the chorus of the redeemed.

WAKE FOREST.

The prospects for the coming session seem bright. The friends of the College, and the students especially, are working earnestly and faithfully. Let them not stop. There are still three weeks before the session opens. There are fifty-eight young men in North Carolina undecided. Let the students and others see these, talk to them, reason with them, answer their excuses and objections, explain to them the advantages of a course at Wake Forest, and not give them up until they decide to go. This is a time for work, for earnest, organized, united effort, and every son of Wake Forest should consider himself bound to labor unceasingly to advance its interests now.

There are three reasons why North Carolina Baptists should send their sons to Wake Forest. The first is because it offers thorough scholarship. The last catalogue shows that the course of instruction in nearly every school has been greatly enlarged and improved, the aim being to attain the highest, broadest culture, and, at the same time, give practical training for the active duties of life. But the College is not forced to rely on the published statements of its catalogues to prove the thoroughness of its instruction. The successful careers of hundreds of its sons in all pursuits and professions, as well the honorable record many of them have made and are still making in the foremost universities of the country, furnish tangible evidence of the practical value and real scholarship of Wake Forest education.

The second reason is that this thorough training is given under distinctively religious influences. The college boy's days are critical days—dangerous days. Subtle and satanic influences threw their seductive charms about him to lead him away from the faiths and convictions of his childhood. Vice lures him, doubt assails him, evil associations entrap him. His habits are being formed, his character established, his destiny written. At this time of all times he most needs the sustaining power of Christian influence. It is the one aim of Wake Forest to throw this blessed influence around all its students. The value of science, the beauties of literature, the lessons of history, the principles of human government, the mysteries of philosophy—all these it seeks to teach its students, but it does it all under the influence and in the light of that grandest of all truths—Christ the Saviour of men.

The third reason is the wonderful cheapness of living at Wake Forest. And this is no mean reason in these times when money is so scarce and the majority of our people are so poor. Good board can be had at from six to seven dollars a month and other expenses are low in the same proportion. Extravagance among the students is almost unknown. Economy is the rule. Students have paid every dollar of their expenses, tuition included, with one hundred and fifty dollars per session. J. B. CARLYLE.

Carson Springs, Tenn., Aug. 15, 1893.

Dr. Willingham's Acceptance.

Editor Recorder:—Please allow me space in your columns to announce that Dr. R. J. Willingham of Memphis, Tenn., has accepted the position of Corresponding Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention to begin September 1st. He is young, strong, ardent, and has very many excellent qualifications for the position but he cannot succeed in it without the active and earnest co operation of the brotherhood generally.

The financial distress all over the country is very materially diminishing collection and at the same time rendering it almost impossible to borrow what we need for sustaining the work in hand. The Board is already nearly $12,000 in debt and drafts at the rate of about $3 000 a week are constantly coming in from China, Africa, Japan, Italy, Brazil and Mexico, while not less than ten excellent brethren and sisters under appointment are ready to go forward to their fields as soon as means can be provided. From all quarters come expressions of sympathy but this commodity, however valuable in itself, is not current with railroads and steamboat lines. What shall we do? Everybody says, and it is unquestionably true, that there is as much money in the country now as there was six months ago but that a large proportion of it has been withdrawn from the channels of commerce. If every one who can would send us a contribution, it would not only help forward the cause of Foreign Missions but would very greatly assist in restoring a normal circulation.

The September number of the Foreign Mission Journal will contain acknowledgments up to August 15th, total in round numbers $16 700 since May 1st. Of this amount only $600 is credited to your State, not enough, you observe to pay the way of Bro. Newton and family back to their fields of labor in Africa. Less than $100 of this came from Western North Carolina.

A Gracious Meeting.

Dear Recorder:—Please allow space in your columns for an account of a protracted meeting held at Pleasant Meadow, Horry county, S. C., commencing on Saturday before the first Sunday in August, conducted by the pastor, Rev. C. P. Bullock, assisted by Rev. J. Harrelson. The meeting continued for ten days, resulting in the addition to the membership of the church of seventeen by baptism, two by restoration, and seven by letter, making a total number of twenty six. The members were greatly revived and made stronger in the Lord. It was a meeting that will be long remembered of the outpouring of God's Spirit in our midst. Fathers and mothers were made to shout for joy to see their children accepting Christ as their Saviour. While some of us can shout for joy, there are others who weep over some that are yet out of Christ.

The congregations were large and attentive to the preached word, and the mourners' bench was filled at every opportunity given. Your brother in Christ,

C. P. BULLOCK.

South Yadkin Association.

This Association will meet at Mocksville on the 31st inst. Parties coming by railroad will come by way of Winston. The train for Mocksville leaves Winston about six o'clock p. m., and reaches Mocksville about eight o'clock p. m. The train leaves Mocksville about 6:30 o'clock a. m., and reaches Winston in time to connect with trains for Greensboro and other points.

Brethren coming to the Association will be met at the depot at Mocksville and sent to homes. If it is convenient, drop me a card and let me know what day to look for you; if not, come right on. Davie county brethren will take care of you. Come to stay from the beginning to the close of the session. C. S. CASHWELL.

Mocksville, Aug. 16, 1893.

Tar River Association.

The next session of this body will be held with the church at Philadelphia, Nash county. I would be glad if the churches, as fast as they appoint their delegates, would send the number and names to Bro. C. P. Harper, Duke's, Nash county, N. C.

Those coming by railroad will be met at Nashville. Philadelphia church is seven miles north of Nashville.

By complying promptly with the above request, you will greatly oblige your friend and brother.

The Association begins on Thursday before the second Sunday in October.

A Partial Explanation of "Rash Statements."

Bro. C. Durham in the RECORDER of Aug. 16th states that Bro. A. J Dickinson said in an article to the Western Recorder, that when he was a student at Richmond College, there was an Episcopalian in one chair, and a German Rationalist in another, and Bro. Durham asks, "Who can tell us the facts?" I was at Richmond College perhaps a few years ahead of Bro. Dickinson, and while I was there, the Chair of Mathematics was filled by Prof. Smith, a member of the Episcopal church, and a most excellent professor.

I know nothing of any professor that was a German Rationalist. Richmond College has, so far as I know, been singularly free from any teacher, or teaching, that would tend to breed skepticism. So far as I know, or have ever heard, it is absolutely free from rationalistic tendencies, from evolution theories, and from anything that would beget skepticism. No college I know of is more free from all such things. In this I greatly rejoice; for I do not think it enough to say that we do not teach in an institution Christian biology, Christian chemistry, or Christian mathematics; I think it is demanded of a denominational school to say we do not teach an anti Christian biology, or chemistry, or what not. Alas! in these days of men, who, like Briggs, determine to foist their deadly doctrine into the minds of the people, we need to open every eye, and catch every sound that betokens the approach of danger. A college that squints towards evolution, or rationalism, or towards any speculative philosophy whose effect is to lead young men into skepticism, into disbelief of the Scriptures; or which even tends to weaken the hold of religion upon their minds, should be severely let alone by all godly parents. I take pleasure in saying that I believe Richmond College to be free from all such things.

JNO. S. HARDAWAY.

Great Revival.

One of the greatest revival meetings has just closed at Cedar Fork church, Durham county, that has taken place since the late war. The meeting lasted eight days. There were twenty five professions of faith, and twenty accessions to the church. There were large and attentive congregations each day. I never saw the Spirit of God more powerfully displayed than was there.

Our pastor, Rev. W. S. Olive, had the assistance of Bro. M. E Yates. They both did some powerful preaching, which made sinners quake and tremble and cry for mercy. I heard many say that it reminded them of old-time protracted meetings before the war. The church was greatly revived.

President Cleveland and the Pope.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Not only the Baptists, but everybody else in this section, are very much stirred up over the alleged autograph letter of President Cleveland to the Pope of Rome. If I am correctly informed, the very highest honor and the greatest act of reverence which the ruler of a nation can do, is to write with his own hand a letter to another ruler and potentate and sign his own name, instead of sending it through cold, official channels of a secretary. This is what the papers allege Mr. Cleveland, as President, has done; that he recognizes the Pope as a prince and a ruler that can treat and be treated with by the President, representing the whole people of the United States. President Harrison refused to take any notice whatever of the golden jubilee of Pope Leo's fifty years as a bishop of the Romish superstitions.

It is time that this truculent homage to a dethroned and despised autocrat—a foreign despot and anti Christ—who, when he had temporal power, allowed no one but Catholics to worship God in Rome except in the house of the minister of the country he represented, should cease. The Pope, at the time when Gen. Cass was American Minister to Rome, notified him that preaching in his parlor must be stopped. Gen. Cass replied that the American flag would protect a Kentucky Baptist and North Carolina Methodist from the Pope's vengeance if they preached in his parlor and under the stars and stripes, and told the Pope to send the police and stop it; that he should not quit allowing American preachers to preach in his parlor under the American flag. The presence of an American war vessel made the Pope drop the matter.

Well, who is Pope here in the United States? I thought Leo had appointed Satolli an Italian priest. But it seems the American Pope and the Italian Pope are quite one and the same. How is it that Cardinal Gibbons is going back and forth to the White House insisting on Romanists being appointed to office, especially here in North Carolina, and more especially in Wilmington?

Dear Dr. Bailey, the people, all the people,—not simply the Baptists,—want to know about these things, and want you to turn on the light, and all the light, and let us know just what the machinations of the Romish bishops and priests are. As a Baptist, I am opposed to the government recognizing the Romish church anywhere, at any time, or in any way. But please give us all the facts—let Baptists at least know.

Yours truly, J. W. BEAVERS
Mt. Pisgah, Chatham Co., Aug. 1, 1893

[We regret that our time and space will not allow us "to turn on the light, and all the light," and that we cannot gratify the desires of "the people, all the people." We do not approve of Catholicism in any form, and with Bro. Beavers think less of Cleveland for his intimacy with, and his seeming subserviency to, the Pope. But it is beyond the power even of an editor to set forth "just what the machinations of the Romish bishops and priests are." Bro. Beavers is right in opposing the government favoring the Romish church anywhere, at any time, or in any way, or any other church, for that matter. All the facts could not be written in twenty volumes, and the RECORDER columns are devoted to more objects than the annihilation of Romanism and the discipline of Presidents; therefore are we compelled to decline to give our readers the entire history of Romanism. From time to time we have endeavored to inform our readers as to the movements of the Catholic church, and shall continue to do so in the future.—ED.]

The Best Nerve Tonic,
Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. A. Monteiro, Richmond, Va., says: "I have used it in many cases of nerve depression, and have always found it beneficial. The exhaustion of debility so prevalent in chronic alcoholism, has been benefited in every case. I consider it one of the best tonics we have, where nerve tone is needed."

Southern Union, Eastern Association.

This Union met with Masonboro church, Friday before the fifth Sunday in July, 1893.

The introductory sermon was preached by Rev. W. B. Oliver from Psalms 43 : 3.

Immediately after the sermon, the Union organized, and having transacted routine business; extended a hearty welcome to brethren O. P. Middleton, S. M. Carlton, M. Teachy, Prof. O. J. Peterson, of the Western Union of Eastern Association; Rev. — Tart, from the Waccamaw Association; Rev. W. P. Crumpler, from Portsmouth Association, Va., and Bro. Laiton, from South River Association, all of whom took part in the exercises.

Revs. F. T. Wooten, D. W. Herring, R. E. Peele, W. P. Crumpler and M. C. Walton preached for us during the session.

We had a lively and interesting discussion of the queries.

The Sunday-school mass meeting presided over by Bro. S. M. Carlton was a grand success, and the choir which had rendered us acceptable music during Friday and Saturday was made more attractive on Sunday by the dear little children joining them.

The contributions were as follows:
Orphanage, $7.47; for ditto, from [illegible] Chapel, E. A., $2.00; for State [illegible] $15.22. Total, $24.69.

The session will be held with Bethel, Pender county, commencing on the fifth Sunday in October.

SECRETARY.

Actions Commendatory'

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Some few days ago a Catholic church and rectory in a New Jersey town were destroyed by fire. The Baptist congregation in that town tendered to the Catholic congregation the use of their church, which was gratefully accepted, and a wealthy Baptist tendered to the priest a handsome residence. Both congregations now worship in the same building. This action on the part of the Baptists was considered so remarkable that the New York Herald, in publishing the statement of the matter, also published the opinions of a number of Baptist and Catholic ministers, all heartily approving the graceful act, one of the Baptist ministers saying, "I am sure Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., would be among the first to tender his church to unfortunate neighbors of any creed."

In the Herald of the 6th inst. the following remarks of a Jewish Rabbi addressed to his congregation attracted my attention:

ESSENCE OF RELIGION.

The Rev. Herman Lustig preached yesterday in Seventy second Street Temple about the Columbian Congress of Religious.

"It will be with deep-felt anxiety," he said, "that thinking men will look toward this rare and unprecedented assemblage of representatives of the different religious sects who will expound to each other views over the religion they teach to their flocks. Here will be Hebrews, Christians, Mohammedans, Buddhists and other religious sects.

"In the midst of them will stand the Jewish minister, the representative of a God believing people, which has suffered unspeakable hardships and persecution for its creeds and laws, to which it has faithfully adhered since Jacob, the forefather of this nation, went to Egypt.

"If present and ordered to speak, I, as a Hebrew minister, would take the following for my text—this passage from the fifth chapter of the Songs of Solomon:—'The watchmen that went about the city found me, they smote me, they wounded me; the keepers of the walls took away my veil from me.'

"Who are those watchmen to whom the royal bard refers? Where is that city? The watchmen are the princes of the nations, the mighty rulers of the cities of the earth. They were faithful and trustworthy keepers and guardians of their Gentile children; but Israel, the mournful and weeping child that fled to their cities, they guarded not.

"There is not a day in the year to which the Hebrews could point, saying, This day is free from persecution, on this day I have not suffered from the brutal hands of my Gentile brother. The Jew has forgiven and forgotten. The Israelite has a commandment in his sacred writ; Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart; thou shalt not in anywise rebuke thy neighbor and not suffer sin upon him; thou shalt not avenge nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people, but thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. I am the Lord!"

THE HEART OF ALL RELIGIONS

Are these not golden words; can anything better be said by any denomination, sect or creed? Are these words not the nucleus of every religion? 'Have we not all one Father? has not one God created us all? Why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother by profaning the covenant of our fathers?' (Malachi, ii)

"Let this religious assembly in Chicago prove a spiritual blessing to mankind. May these religions look upon their venerable mother Israel as their teacher and leader of old and never forget the blessing which she has so bountifully bestowed upon her children. Clasp hands, brethren, and proclaim to the world—'Hear, world, there can be but one truth, and this is, Love thy brother as thyself.'

"The time is not far when religion will be firmly acknowledged as the greatest blessing. Let every denomination and sect do away with its useless schisms and devote itself to enlightening the minds of its followers. You must not only believe but also know the Bible. What a sad and dangerous example we give to the young minds when impeaching a minister whose sole aim was to show that man's spiritual blessing does not exist in mere believing, but also in religious knowledge.

"David, the King of Israel, spoke to the heir of his throne—'Know thou the Lord thy God, and then thou wilt serve him with a perfect heart and willing soul.' We cannot believe at the command of our ministers. Our belief must be the spiritual product of our religious knowledge. Shall only my minister know the religion which he teaches me that I shall adhere to? Shall I not also strive to gain that knowledge?

"Our motto, as the representative of religions, shall also be, 'Enlightenment to the masses, light in our temples, light in our schools, light in our homes.'"

All of which leads me to inquire, Are we indeed entering upon the millennium? the universal brotherhood of man? These are certainly most pleasing incidents in that direction. Respectfully,

ROBT. M. FURMAN.

A Thread of Gold. By Lucie Dayton Phillips. 12mo, 254 pp. Price, $1.00. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

The thread of gold in this story is formed by the character, winsomeness, and Christian consecration of Leslie Hope, its principal figure. We meet her first upon the Rocky Mountains, where she, a girl of ten, gives her Bible to a poor boy who had come for a minister to attend a funeral in the cove in which he stayed. We see her as she comes from boarding school, a simple-hearted Christian girl, much to the disappointment of her worldly-minded mother, and we follow her into the fashionable life into which that mother plunges her. Out of that, and the "valley of the shadow" into which it brings her, we come with her. We see how she gives herself for others, braving ridicule for the sake of "Still Bill," helping to bear the burdens at the parsonage and making them lighter, going in bravely, though tremblingly, amid all the horrors of the yellow fever in a distant city for the sake of a friend, simply, according to her own account, "helping the doctor" and because she could not do otherwise. In "lighter vein," we have her encounter with the "tramp" amid the solitudes of the rock city, whom she identifies at length with the noted professor, and still more significantly with the poor boy of the "Rockies," who has never ceased to cherish her image, and who tells her the "old story," and with whom she goes in wedded love to her own pleasant home on the Pacific slope.

LOOK OUT.

"In peace prepare for war, in health for sickness." This old adage is always wise and timely, especially so just now. Summer is on, with its debilitating influences. Nerves are flagging, appetites failing, energy and strength yielding, even now. Shortly will come decay of vegetation, when malaria will "ride on every passing breeze" and count its victims in every home. Now is the time. Repair the wastes. Restore the vitality. Fortify the system. Ward off the perilous attacks of malaria and pass safely and happily through. You can do this by using DR. KING'S

ROYAL GERMETUER.

It is the best preventive, the best restorative, the most unfailing cure—pleasant to take as lemonade and harmless, unique, matchless, perfect, "the ultima thule of medicines." Try it now. For sale by druggists.

I have used Dr. King's Royal Germetuer for indigestion, and cheerfully say that it afforded me more relief than any other remedy I ever tried. I also used it in my own family in a case of malarial fever with best results. I take pleasure in recommending it.

Letter from Rev. M. J. Willoughby.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I am here resting quietly a few days before returning to my work at Marion, S. C. But why should preachers take vacation? I have seen it stated by some who thought themselves quite knowing, that preachers do not need to rest, and that it is wrong for a church to be closed for several Sundays during the summer. I have thought that these very knowing brethren were right, for they could use such plausible argument. They sometimes even dare to quote holy Scripture to strengthen their argument. They say we do not hear of the Apostles' taking a vacation, therefore preachers to day should not. Well, may be they did not take vacation in those days, but there is no doubt of those early preachers often being forced to stop work awhile, and sometimes oftener than once a year. And while it is not stated distinctly that they travelled for rest and recreation, it is certain that they were sometimes forced to take a journey. These journeys were sometimes taken privately, so that only a few very confidential brethren knew where they were, and they were not certain when they would return. But the Master himself once said "Let us go aside and rest awhile." Jesus himself rested once on a well curb, while the disciples were gone to the town to lay in some supplies. But we must not think of comparing ourselves to the Saviour. Now let those who know so well what a preacher ought to do, and what he ought not to do, try the heart anxiety and strain of a heavy pastorate for a few years, and if they are faithful in the sacred trust, giving themselves without reserve to the care of the souls committed to them, they will change their minds and sing a different tune. Sometime it's a man's highest duty to rest. I find it hard to do when not sick, only tired, and as the physician says, "Strength overdrawn and rest absolutely necessary."

Well, as I said, I am here resting quietly for a few days; but I ought to modify by saying I am trying to rest, because I can't help feeling anxious to be back at my work. I have never before been away from my work so long, and but for a sense of duty for the work's sake, I could not stay away. But I hope, by the grace of God, to be back ready for duty by the fourth Sunday in this month, and that I shall do better work by having stayed away awhile.

CHAUTAUQUA, NEW YORK,

is a delightful place to have spent a month resting and in special study in sacred literature. Dr. Harper, the principal, is a young looking man for the high position he holds as President of Chicago University, but he is a great scholar and teacher. True, he belongs to the class called critics, but not of the destructive school of critics. He upsets some of the old theories of dogmatists, but is a very devout Christian with a deeply solemn reverence for the Bible or inspiration. He is not handicapped by creed and reverence for the Pope, therefore he does not ask Pope or Council what he must believe, or what he must reject. To his own Master he stands or falls. I heard him strongly criticised at the North by those holding a creed, but not by others. The creeds will have to fall before the onslaught of the fearless and faithful critic. I am not yet prepared to accept wholesale all that Dr. Harper says, because I do not know, but I do feel that Dr. Harper is a true, genuine and devout Christian, searching for all the light possible on the question of inspiration. That which is unquestionable he holds to as fearlessly and devoutly as any of us. Did the Pope, or King James and his revisers, or any of the great councils know it all? But I do not belong to the critics, nor will I commit myself, or attempt a labored defense in their behalf. The destructive, skeptical critics I have no patience with, but Harper is not one of them.

The lectures of Prof. Drummond at Chautauqua on the Ascent of Man were learned, but rather nauseating to a healthy Christian's stomach. I did not hear the first two of the course, but have them as reported in the Assembly Herald. His first lecture was "The Evolution of a Body." "According to evolution," he says, "man is not descended exactly from the monkey, but has run up the entire scale of life. The lowest form in the scale of life is the aquatic, and the first living thing must have lived in the sea. By and by the simple aquatic forms become more complex, and were driven by the struggle for existence going on in the sea, to seek food or refuge on the land. From this it is easy to trace the various steps in evolution till the higher orders are reached. The snail is a good example of a land creature carrying a relic of its aquatic life with it—its shell." He said further that the breathing apparatus or "gill slits" of fishes are still manifest in the human body, and that "man has a tail, which is a continuation of the vertebral column and is concealed under the skin. The muscles for wagging it are still there, though usually mere bands of cartilage. This tail is the most conspicuous thing in the human embryo after the head and 'gill slits.' The very fact that we have parted with the most of our tail, is but further proof of our kinship to the monkeys, for all the monkeys which most closely resemble man have long since parted with their tails." He says again that "while club foot has been considered a malformation, it is in fact but a stoppage of evolution."

I give these quotations that the reader may judge for himself. As for myself I can feel but little respect for beings of such an origin. I must confess to a little less respect for Prof. Drummond when I found that he had such an opinion of his own origin. I can never again read what he says in his books with the same interest. If God did not make man and breathe into him the breath of life, he is but little better than other animals, and Christ would hardly have died for a mere animal. Evolution may make a body, but only God could bridge the chasm between mere body or matter and life—life is the important thing.

I felt anxious, after hearing the foregoing, to hear some one lecture on the descent of man. On the third Sunday in July that wish was partly gratified by a sermon preached by Bishop Alpheus Wilson of Baltimore, and again by Dr. H. Johnson, who took occasion to condemn "science falsely so called."

Resolutions Commendatory.

Resolved, That the Camden and Currituck Union learns with sincere regret that our ever efficient co-laborer, Rev. J. B. Harrell, contemplates moving beyond our limits. We have found him an interesting and sound preacher of the gospel; a diligent and thoughtful pastor; a Christian gentleman without hypocrisy, a man and a friend without guile. His work has been successful in his field in converting souls, in bringing peace where there was discord, and in deepening the spiritual tone of his churches. We admire him for his ability, and we love him for the charm of his personality, in which the spirit of our Master is seen by all.

We ask that the BIBLICAL RECORDER publish this resolution.

I baptized one into the fellowship of Selma church on the 9th inst.

Our house of worship has been very much improved by changes in the roof and the erection of a new bell tower. We have a new bell also to ring out invitations to our place of worship. These things indicate a spirit of improvement and a sign of love to God, we hope.

Rev. Worley Creech of Hare's Store is working on quietly. He had a good meeting at Bethany church from the fifth Sunday in July to the first Sunday in August; and thence to Carter's chapel from the first Sunday in August to the following Lord's day. It was the writer's pleasure to be with this man of God and preach to his people two days at Carter's chapel. I scarcely know how to word my expressions so as to convey exactly the thought begotten by contact with "brother Creech." Perhaps about as follows: "There are some ministers little known on earth who are doing a good work for God and their generation. There may be some ministers known over all the earth and heaven may know but little about them. These unknown preachers, at work in retired places and among poor people, scarcely heard of while they live or when they die, will they never be known? They will not be known as great preachers and workers here. They will not be written up as having achieved great success in this life. They will not be talked about and pointed out as men of commanding influence. They will never be widely known here; but could the world and poor churches get on without them? Like Jesus, they don't care what people say about them—make themselves of no reputation—and are concerned only to do the will of the Father and finished his work. As these faithful men work on faithfully, are not the angels present to report their doings on high? Have they not a record there—over there?"

Thanks for Help Received.

Dear Recorder:—Will you please allow us, through the columns of your paper, to thank those brethren who so kindly helped us to pay a debt of one hundred dollars on our church at Oregon.

It was a hard and an unjust bill to pay, but, thank the Lord, it is paid every dollar, and we have the receipt, and now we want to get ready and give it to the Lord.

Please allow me to say to any and all who think of building a Baptist church, for the Lord's sake, build a Baptist church and not a school house. Don't give the public any interest in it for what little money they may give; if you do, the matter will come to grief. I know whereof I speak.

Sincerely, W. S. KELLY.

The Higher Motive for Home Mission Work.

The emphasis heretofore put upon the needs of the field sought to be covered by the Home Board is none too strong—in fact not strong enough. Let the needs be reiterated; let the appeal be made stronger; let the Baptists hear the saddest cry of distress.

This is the objective argument. But let us put a still greater emphasis upon the subjective argument; and let us remember that we are Christians in proportion as we have in us an interior impulse, thrusting us out to search for the world's plague and heal it.

Before Paul had the vision of the man of Macedonia and heard his pathetic entreaty he had been traveling towards him, urged by Christ—"who liveth in me"—and guided by the Spirit. He was compelled to be a missionary because he was a Christian, and that, too, apart from any special urgency of external appeals.

The objective arguments have been heretofore the strongest and most familiar, for the object is a needy humanity; we are coming to find a still stronger subjective argument, and God grant that it may become very familiar.

God's love streams out by a necessity of its nature—because he is what he is—to fill every vacuum into which it can enter. When "the love of Christ constraineth us," and because Christ is within us—his heart beating in ours—we are urged out by a power within to search for the lost and save them.

God thus discovers to us our mission, supplies the motive for it, and determines the method. This is the reason our workers go to the field.

In the field of the Home Board the objective argument is strong enough to almost discourage us. Twenty millions of people, and only two and a half million of them Baptists. Others are Christians of various names, but probably one-third of them with no religion at all. Of them are 7,000,000 or more negroes, and they are, as as whole, in a deplorable religious condition. We owe a debt to them.

In this same field are the Indians of the territory, and other Indians not yet evangelized. All the sentiments of pity, mercy and justice unite in calling us to their aid.

We have within our territory all the distress, danger and wickedness in the large cities. We have a growing foreign population. Among them there is illiteracy, there is superstition, there is poverty, there is awful wickedness. In all of them there is darkness as to "the light of the world" and the heaven above. They are fellow citizens; they are our neighbors; many of them are business associates and personal friends; some of them our wards for whom we are trustees. In addition, every sentiment of self-preservation demands that we bring them to Christ. Now with these arguments for work, it ought to be easy for us to do our whole duty by them.

The point of the whole argument is to show what is involved in the saving of a soul, and to show that nothing in the world can lead us to do and endure all that is necessary to accomplish it but Christ and the compulsion of his love.—Rev. J. S. Kirtley, in Our Missionary Helper.

The Home Board.

The Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention is an agency for good. It will help us in our study of the Board to consider in the outset its origin. Where did it come from? Did the Board create itself, and then ask all the Baptists of the South to recognize it, and work through it? Nothing of the kind. The Baptists of the South in Convention assembled were grappling with the great question of destitution in our own borders—a necessity was laid on them to do something to send the gospel to the perishing of our own people. As a means of doing this, they, the Baptists of the South, mind you, under the pressure of this sore need, created the Home Board. They were seeking to do the best thing that could be done. The Board then is a creature of our own making. It is not a master that wants to rule us, but a most obedient servant, and it is what it is, just because we said it must be.

Work Among Colored People.

The need for this work is imperative and immediate. If Protestants do not seek to help them, Romanists will. The latter are laying broad their foundations through sisterhoods, colored priests, industrial schools, and unlimited money, aiming ultimately to secure control of the colored vote. Ought we to be less anxious to secure salvation for their immortal souls? Mothers' meetings and sewing schools have proved successful agencies to interest, aid and instruct the colored women and children. Patriotism and religion cry aloud for this effort.—Baptist Courier.

EPILEPSY OR FITS

Can this disease be cured? Most physicians say No—I say, Yes; all forms and the worst cases. After 30 years study and experiment I have found the remedy.—Epilepsy is cured by it; cured, not subdued by opiates—the old, treacherous, quack treatment. Do not despair. Forget past impositions on your purse, past outrages on your confidence, past failures. Look forward, not backward. My remedy is of to-day. Valuable work on the subject, and large bottle of the remedy—sent free for trial. Mention Post-Office and Express address.

Letter from Rev. J. M. White.

Dear Recorder:—I have had a pleasant visit to my North Carolina home, and am now back in Edgefield, S. C. During my visit home I attended the Western Union of the Raleigh Association. After a very free discussion there of "annual or indefinite calling of pastors," a rising vote showed the fact that the brethren favor indefinite calls, only two brethren voting to the contrary. I hope the churches will act accordingly in the near future, the usual time for calling. In said Union the pastors were conspicuous for their absence. As I thought over the situation I found that the churches were largely supplied by pastors outside of the Raleigh Association, and very naturally they were attending their own Unions. I also thought of Dowell, Booth, Hunter, Blanchard, and others, who belonged to that Association, and why they had taken other fields. The fact is patent that the churches had not given adequate support to the pastors. This state of things needs to be remedied, or else the old Raleigh Association will go still backward. What shall be done? Allow me at this distance to suggest a thing or two.

It need not be said that the people are financially depressed, but the churches must strain a point and offer as liberal support as possible, and the pastors must make some sacrifices, and meet the churches on half-way ground, during these hard times.

Another point of the utmost practical importance, and that was well discussed at the Union, is, that churches in the same community ought to group themselves into a pastorate, act in concert and locate a pastor in their midst; buy or build a parsonage, and if in the country, have a few acres attached for truck patches. The church which has the pastor right among them will have more of the pastor's help, and can afford to give more liberally to his support. If our country and village churches everywhere would co operate on some plan of this kind, it occurs to me that the benefits arising from it would soon be seen and felt.

I hope I shall never lose a personal interest in the prosperity of the Raleigh Association. I regretted to see what seemed to me signs of loss in those churches, and danger ahead of a decline unless some better plans are adopted.

My engagements here are only until Christmas. After that I propose to give my entire time and labors to the pastorate, here or there, or wherever my services are called for, and the Spirit seems to approve. Very naturally my attachments are to North Carolina, though the past year here has been a very pleasant one. The brethren I have met here have impressed me most favorably.

Now, Bro. Editor, I hope that you will improve physically as the hot weather gets behind us and you enter the autumn season. With best wishes, I am yours,

J. M. WHITE.

Sanitary Aspects of Bread Making.

Dr. Cyrus Edson, Health Commissioner of New York, in an article published in The Doctor of Hygiene, the organ of the New York Board of Health, calls attention to the general danger of conveying disease of a contagious character in ordinary yeast made bread. Dr. Edson has won high position as an authority upon all questions connected with the food supply, having made a specialty of investigating processes of manufacture while in charge of the Food Division of the Health Department.

Disease germs, the doctor shows, are always present in the air. They find lodgement upon furniture, utensils, or other things ordinarily and continuously handled. Yeast made dough because it is mixed, kneaded and moulded with the hands and manipulated for so long a time in the open air, is quite liable to become contaminated with these germs, and because of the warmth and moisture of such dough and the putrefactive action which is always present from the yeast, it is a particularly favorable medium for their ready propagation and rapid increase.

The doctor mentioned from his official observation cases of journeymen bakers suffering from contagious cutaneous diseases, found working the dough with naked hands and arms. Any person who has ever kneaded dough understands the way in which the dough cleans the hands. This means that any germs which may have found a lodging place on the hands of the baker before he or she makes up the batch of bread are sure to find their way into the dough, and once there to find all the conditions necessary for subdivision and growth.

The longer any substance to be eaten is exposed to the air, the greater the chance that germs will be deposited on it. Bread raised with yeast is worked down or kneaded twice before being baked and this process may take anywhere from four hours to ten. It has, then, the chance of collecting disease germs during this process of raising and it has two periods of working down or kneading during each of which it may gather the dirt containing the germs from the baker's hands. As no bread save that raised with yeast, goes through this long process of raising and kneading, so no bread save that raised with yeast has so good a chance of gathering germs.

The health Commissioner says he does not wish to pose as an alarmist, but he has not the slightest doubt could we trace back some of the cases of illness which physicians meet in their practice it would be found that germs collected by the baker have found their way into the yeast bread, that the heat has not been sufficient to destroy them, that the not thoroughly cooked yeast bread has been eaten and with it the colonies of germs, that they have found their way into the blood and that the call for the physician's services which followed has rounded off this sequence of events.

Dr. Edson notes the mechanical action of yeast in producing fermentation, and that the process uses up a portion of the nutrient elements of the flour.

If it be possible, therefore, says the Doctor, to produce a light, porous loaf without this destruction, and without the kneading process which fills the dough with germs and filth, and without the long period during which the raising process goes on, the gain in food and the gain in the avoidance of the germs is exceedingly plain.

The Health Commissioner recommends the substitution of Royal Baking Powder for yeast in all kinds of bread making. This leavening agent is mixed thoroughly through the flour, both in a dry state, after which salt and water, are added, the dough made up quickly, moulded into loaves, and baked.

This avoids the long period during which yeast made dough must stand to rise, as well as all contact of the hands with the bread materials. When the bread is placed in the oven the heat acts upon the Royal Baking Powder, the leavening gas is given off, and the powder uses itself up, as it were, in the process.

Dr. Edson warns bread makers against the use of other baking powders, the impurities of which are liable to aggravate the very dangers intended to be avoided. He says that "the Royal is the best of all the baking powders. It contains absolutely nothing but cream of tartar and soda, refined to a chemical purity, which when combined under the influence of heat and moisture produce carbonic acid gas, and having done this disappear. Its leavening strength has been found superior to other baking powders and as far as I know it is the only powder which will raise large bread perfectly."

"This," says the Commissioner, "is the most perfect of all conceivable methods of raising bread. There is no chance for germs of diseases to get into the dough and thence into the stomach; more than that the bread is necessarily sweet, there having been no time during which it could sour. Bread so made will keep longer, as it is less likely to become contaminated by the germs that affect the souring process."

Dr. Edson asks: "Is it not the part of wisdom to watch with the greatest care all that we eat and drink, and to see that none but the safest and best methods are employed in the preparation of our food? To me it seems as though there could be but one answer to questions like these."

"I have shown the danger of using the yeast raised bread, and with this I have shown how that danger may be avoided. The ounce of prevention which in this case is neither difficult nor expensive is certainly worth many pounds of cure, and the best thing about it is that it may be relied on almost absolutely. Those who eat bread or biscuits or rolls made at home with Royal Baking Powder may be sure they have absolutely stopped one channel through which disease may reach them."

Three workmen were seriously injured by falling from a scaffold in Greensboro last Wednesday week.

Letter from Rev. J. R. Jones.

Dear Recorder:—Have you heard anything about hard times down your way lately? In this part of the land we have not heard much else for some time. Prices of produce are low, trade dull, and money exceedingly scarce. But we are looking for better times times, and are hopeful that it will not be long before they put in an appearance. It is likely that some of the large amount of money now daily flowing out from Washington will flow this way.

Notwithstanding the scarcity of money, the churches in the Beulah Association have done about as well in their contributions to the Master's work as usual; and at the late session of the Association in Greensboro, there was very little, if any, falling off in their pledges. We rather expect more from the churches than they promised, as we are going to reorganize our Union Meetings and use them for all they are worth. That is the way the Executive Committee and the pastors talked about it in a meeting we held just after the adjournment of the Association; and all that was said was meant. In this meeting the question of employing a missionary-colporteur was discussed, and all agreed that it would be the thing for us do, and we almost see our way clear to employ the man at once and put him to work. It will likely be done before a great while. If we can secure the right man for the place, there is no doubt but what it will prove a wise step. The plan is to have the missionary to preach regularly at about four points, and then do all the colportage work he can besides, in the Association.

We had then accessions at Shiloh last Sunday by baptism. This church is doing fairly well, but we hope to do better. We are very much in need of a better house, and when some of the brethren see the need as it really is we shall have it; for the church is able to build just such a house as we ought to have.

In Yanceyville and Milton we are going forward slowly. These are small towns, and there is not much outside material to work on, and our growth must of necessity be slow. We hope to baptize ten or twelve into the Yanceyville church next Sunday.

Bro. Howell keeps the work upon his field. You know he is always busy at work or planning for the advancement of the Master's kingdom. Bro. W. F. Watson is a new comer to our Association, and his brethren speak of him very kindly. He has two churches in our Association. Brethren Howard at Reidsville and Thomas at Greensboro are full of life and energy and keep things lively about them.

Upon the whole, the old Beulah is doing well. We hope to enlarge our territory, and if we succeed, we shall do still better.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT NEAR MILTON.

Yesterday morning (16th) about 2:30 o'clock, while the east bound passenger train on the A. & D. R. R, was crossing County Line creek about one hundred and fifty yards from the depot, the bridge, which was some forty or fifty feet high gave way, and three cars, the first and second class, and the sleeper fell through and were completely wrecked. Six person, the conductor, three other white men, one colored man, and one colored woman were killed. Five of them were taken out of the wreck dead, and one died soon after he was taken out. Six persons were injured, but only one seriously. These were the conductor on the sleeper, one other white man, one lady and her two little children, and two colored men.

All the killed, except the colored woman, were in the second class car. This car was turned bottom upwards and smashed into fragments, with the first class car also a complete wreck, lying across one end of it, and lodged up against the sleeper, which was broken to pieces and lying sidewise and partly in the water. The colored woman that was killed was in the sleeper, and was found with her head and a part of her body through the window and in the water. It is supposed that she was drowned.

To look at the wreck, one can hardly see how any one on board escaped instant death. There were ten passengers on and five of them were killed and five wounded.

I have not yet heard any decided opinion as to the cause of the wreck. The engineer says that he felt the bridge give way as soon as the engine ran on it, and at once threw on all the steam he could, and by doing this ran the engin over safely.

His presence of mind is doubtless what saved the life of himself and fireman.

Railroad bridges ought to be closely looked after. J. R. JONES.

King's Mountain Association.

The King's Mountain Baptist Association will convene with the Boiling Springs church (Cleveland county) on Thursday before the fourth Sunday in September, 1893. Messengers and visiting brethren will be met at Lattimore's Station with conveyance upon giving notice to the undersigned, stating whether they will come on the two C's or three C's train, and whether going east or west, and date of arrival. Both trains go east in the a. m. and west in the p. m. Respectfully, Saron's Great Revival.

Dear Recorder:—Owing to the very cold weather last winter, Saron as well as many other country churches became cold. It is sad to make such an announcement, but that sadness is now turned into gladness and great rejoicing. God has wonderfully blessed the church and community. Bro. K. R. Homer aided me. He is earnest, pleasant, and practical; and has completely captured my people.

There were forty three bright conversions. Sunday morning last I baptized nineteen young men and young ladies. The greatest joy of all my work is dipping happy converts as they were. About fifteen, perhaps more, are to be dipped the first Sunday in September next.

Blessed Redeemer, glean the field, already tilled by thy Spirit and Bride, and gather the golden grain into thy heavenly garner.

Sincerely, I. S. BOYLES.

Strange—Surprising.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Being one of the members of the Board of Trustees who stopped at Greensboro, please allow me a few lines in reference to the attack of Rev. C. A. G. Thomas upon innocent persons who have to stop at Greensboro in pursuit of their duties. I stopped there two nights and a day, and do not know even now whether there is a bar attached to the hotel where I stopped.

It looks strange to me that a preacher should be watching his brethren for the purpose, as his letter shows, of publishing an implied slander against them. A Christian spirit would have suggested a very different course. I was very much surprised at the egotistical spirit exhibited through the entire letter. I have known the brother in years gone by, but never saw him as this letter shows him in the capacity of a spy.

I am satisfied with Bro. Mills reply for the present, and will say no more just now.

Respectfully, R. D. FLEMING.

DIED.

GRISSETT—Died at his home in Brunswick county, N. C., July 26th, 1893, Bro. Mayham W. Grissett, aged sixty-two years and nineteen days, leaving a wife and six children, and a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn his loss. He was a member of Beulah Baptist church, and for several years was deacon in said church. Bro. Grissett was in many respects a model Christian, a devoted husband, a kind father, a good neighbor, and upright, honest and truthful in all his dealing with his fellow-man. But the chief and shining characteristic of his life was his devotion to his church and the cause of Christ. He was pre-eminently noted for his care and devotion to the sick and suffering, not only among his neighbors, but far and wide was his presence sought for to attend the sick and afflicted. His kindly presence and cheerfulness has cheered many a drooping and despondent heart. He was a great sufferer for some time before he died, yet he never was heard to complain, and when the summons came was ready, and died in the full triumph of the gospel faith.

The writer preached his funeral to a large and sorrowing congregation on the 27th, after which we laid him to rest until the morn of the resurrection. The Lord gave and the Lord taketh away, blessed be his holy name.

JAMES A. MINTZE.

To the Memory of Miss Mattie Jones, who Died July 27th, 1893.

The happy birds so sweetly sing,
The twinkling stars gleam bright,
But none of these give joy to us,
Since day has changed to-night.

A cherished one too dear for earth
Was called to heaven above;
Ah! little did we think that God
So well our Mattie loved.

But to our Heavenly Father's will
We must submissive bow.
Sometime a blessing this will prove,
Which causes sorrow now.

Her work on earth was very short,
But done with her whole heart;
God called her to a higher work,
Where loved ones never part.

Brothers, sister, parents and friends,
Weep not for this dear one;
Another jewel shineth bright
In God's own summer sun.

Tributes of Respect.

GADDY—Mr. D. M. Gaddy, aged twenty-seven, died at Wake Forest College, June 1, 1893, after an illness lasting ten days. Mr. Gaddy had been a student of Wake Forest College for the past three years and was awarded the degree of B. A. a few hours before his death. Throughout his career there he had always deported himself as an earnest, hard-working, unassuming student. He made no enemies, and was blest with many faithful friends. He died, as he had lived, in the faithful service of his God. The funeral services were held on the day after his death in the Memorial Hall, after which his remains were transported to Polkton, where the interment took place. At the funeral touching addresses were made by two of his more intimate friends in testimony of the love and esteem in which he was held. At the last meeting of the Senior Class the following resolutions of respect were adopted:

"WHEREAS, Our Father has seen fit to take our class-mate, Brother D. M. Gaddy, from our midst; therefore be it

Resolved, first, That while we deeply feel our loss, we recognize the all-wise dispensation of God, and bow before his will.

"Second, That we take this means of attesting to the true worth and sterling character of the deceased.

"Third, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the grief-stricken parents and other relatives.

"Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to his parents, to the BIBLICAL RECORDER and The Wake Forest Student for publication. J. W. B., Chm'n Com."

Life's Lesson.

Life is a lesson. Count all joy, all pain,
No more than part of that the soul must learn
In this great school, the world. Though you should yearn
For one brief, blessed pause; though you would fain
Forego the tales of war and bloodshed vain,
Remember—you were born to teach! Discern
Strange secrets with unshrinking eye, nor spurn
One principle which makes the lesson plain;
One lesson, so your training be complete
Herein lies life's deep truth, then hold it fast;
Failure and loss are better than they seem;
No heart so brave as that which bears defeat!
He acts the hero's part who wins at last
In life-long battle with his vanquished dream.
Grace Pearl Macomber in the Ladies' Home Journal.

Give Your Leisure to Mother.

"I have offended the girls in my class," said Miss Travers to the superintendent of the Hope church Sunday-school.

"I trust not so seriously as to sever your connection with them. How did it happen?"

"It was this way. They are, you know, thoughtless young working girls from sixteen to twenty-two, fond of gayety and of congregating here and there, sometimes at each other's homes, but oftener on the street or at some place of amusement. They are fond of admiration, and not too particular as to who bestows it. They are not in any way bad girls, but giddy, and needing a guiding hand.

"For all they are so fond of attracting the attention of the opposite sex, they say, as it seems to be a fashion at present for young girls to say: 'Oh, I shall never marry. I shall stay with my mother. I am sure I shall never meet any one whom I shall love so well as I do my mother.' I had heard every one of them reiterate this statement, and thought it was in accord with the sentiment of yesterday's lesson to beg of them if they were so fond of their mothers, to show it by their devotion to her. 'Give her your leisure,' I said, instead of bestowing it upon some indifferent person. Pass your evenings with her instead of promenading the streets. Read to her. Help her with the family sewing and mending. Stay in and put the little ones to bed, and thus give her time to go out. If you love her so very much, sacrifice something for her. All your life she has been making sacrifices for you, and it is good for us all to sacrifice our own way occasionally. It may give us a conception of the true meaning of sacrifice, and a better understanding of the character of the Christ who gave himself for us that we might have eternal life."

"And they were offended?"

"They seemingly considered that I would better keep to the lesson, and not make personal applications—all but that little Susie Flossing; her eyes filled with tears, and she said: 'I wish some one had said that to me before my mother died.'"

"Well," said the superintendent, "you have done your duty, and Susie's little assent has set a seal upon it. Now leave it with the Lord, and have no fears."

Miss Travers tried to do this. For the next Sunday or two she fancied that the girls were more quiet than usual, and wondered if it meant that they were offended. But the next Sunday the giddiest girl in the class said:

"We are sure, Miss Travers, that you will be glad to know we have given up going to the dime concerts on Tuesday evenings, and that now we call that 'mother's night,' and each spends the evening at home; and poor little Susie, who has no home, visits us in turn, so that will bring her to see us each once in ten weeks. The ten cents we have been in the habit of spending for the cheap show, we now give to our mothers, and, do you know, my mother has set up a missionary box."

"And so has mine."

"And mine has begun writing letters to friends long neglected, because she could not spend time nor money for them."

"And mine is to keep the dimes until she has enough of them to buy a shawl that she badly needs."

After a few months one of the girls said:

"You will have to tell us something else to do for a sacrifice, for our 'mother evenings' have learned us to love home, and we now often stay in, and are much happier than we were before."

"And we feel now that we have the approval of God," added the giddiest one, with a radiant smile that was reflected on all their faces.

"And I have ten homes and ten mothers," said Susie, gratefully.

And the teacher replied, with dropping tears: "That is your reward for speaking quickly and promptly in approval of my heart-felt advice, as dictated by the Spirit."—Annie A. Preston, in The Sunlight.

Just full of improvements—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. To begin with, they're the smallest, and the easiest to take. They're tiny, sugar coated anti-bilious granules, scarcely larger than mustard seeds. Every child is ready for them.

Then, after they're taken, instead of disturbing and shocking the system, they act in a mild, easy, and natural way. There's no chance for any reaction afterward. Their help lasts. Constipation, indigestion, bilious attacks, sick or bilious headaches, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels, are promptly relieved and permanently cured.

They're put in glass vials, which keep them always fresh and reliable, unlike the ordinary pills in wooden or pasteboard boxes.

And they're the cheapest pills you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

You pay only for the good you get.

Hints on the Care of the Eyes.

Color has a great effect on the eyes. Green is the most soothing and restful of all the colors; red the most trying. Black is restful, white, especially with a strong sunlight on it, is very trying. Persons with weak eyes should avoid light clothes, but should wear dark colors, and rest the eyes on dark-colored objects as much as possible; especially when in walking some light colored object has come into view, as a white house, or a sheet of water with the sunlight shining on it.

The walls of a sleeping apartment should never be white or very light, nor should the room itself have much light admitted to it while the occupant is sleeping. The eye is very sensitive to light, and is conscious of its presence even when protected by the eyelid. Plenty of fresh air should be admitted to the room, but the light should be excluded. Some medium tint of paper, green, gray, blue, or brown should be chosen for the walls, and the ceiling should be tinted. For very weak eyes a dark paper is best.

Green is the best color for the furnishing of the room of one who has any weakness of the eyes, as this color is always restful. Eye shades should be lined with green, and the light should always fall on the book, or work, from the back and over the left shoulder, especially if one is sewing.

Never use the eyes a moment after they feel in the least tired, and never read in the twilight, or in bed. When reading, a person should always sit erect, holding the book in a vertical position, and on a line with the eyes.

Never wear dotted veils or tight shoes. Strange as it may seem, the foot covering has a decided influence upon the eye, as there are cords in the foot that connect with the eye, and any pressure on these cords will affect the sight.

At night always either bathe the eyes with cold water, or else drop cold water into the eyes by means of an eye dropper, or from the tip of the finger, letting the water flow over the eyeball. Many a person, by this very simple method, has preserved his sight to old age.—Elgarda Williams, in Our Young People.

Associating With Inferiors Only.

There is nothing so bad for a man or a woman as to live always with their inferiors. It is a truth so important that one might well wish to turn aside a moment and urge it, even in its lower aspects, upon the young people who are just making their associations and friendships. Many a temptation of laziness and pride induces us to draw towards those who do not know as much or who are not in some way as strong as we are. It is a smaller tax on our powers to be in their society. But it is bad for us.

I have known men intellectually and morally very strong, the whole development of whose intellectual and moral life has suffered and been dwarfed, because they only companied with their inferiors; because they have not lived with men greater than themselves. Whatever else they may lose they surely must lose culture of humility.

If I could choose a young man's companions, some should be weaker than himself, that he might have the full freedom of friendship; but most should be stronger than he, that he might forever be thinking humbly of himself and be tempted to higher things. And this principle, which is surely the true one in the association of men with one another, is elevated to its perfect application when we think of man humbled and incited by the constant presence of God manifested both as majesty and love in Christ.—Phillips Brooks.

A Singular Horse.

A funny story is told of Dean Swift, who was a witty man, and fond of a joke at the expense of other people, as most witty people are. One very cold night, when he was travelling, he stopped at a little inn. There was only one fire in the house, and the guests of the inn, crowding about it, left no place for the new comer.

With a solemn face Dean Swift called to the hostler, and told him to get a peck of oysters immediately and take them out to his horse.

"Will your horse eat oysters, sir?" asked the astonished man.

"Just take them out and see," said the horse's master.

The people around the fire stared at the man who owned this curious horse, and nearly every one of them left his seat and went out to see the remarkable horse eating oysters.

Then the cunning Dean made himself comfortable in the warmest corner, and ordered his supper.

Presently back came the hostler, with the disappointed crowd after him.

"He won't touch them, sir!" cried the hostler.

"Then take the foolish animal all the oats he can eat," replied Dean Swift. "You can bring the oysters here. I'll eat them for supper myself."—Harper's Young People.

"Awfully Queer."

One is very apt to judge all others by the standard which he himself makes. If one is more particular than we, she is "fussy" or he is "a dude;" if less so, they are slovenly. If they know more, they are pedantic; if less, they are ignorant; and, in general, if they differ from us, they are "queer."

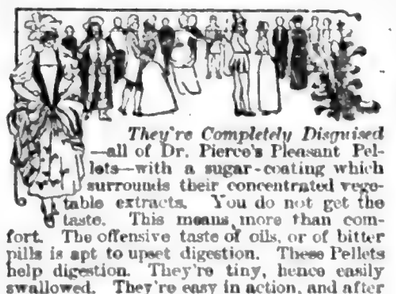
A certain young man has always been "the odd stick" of his family, never doing anything like other people or seeming to be amenable to the same laws of nature in mind, body or estate, having had the measles three times in childhood as a small evidence of this fact.

One day recently an aunt was lecturing him on his peculiarities, making a vain endeavor to persuade him to be more like other people in dress, idea and deportment. He listened patiently while she urged upon him the merits of conventionalities, and then, going up to her and putting his arm about her, with an affectionate smile, he said, "Aunt Sarah, I love you dearly, you are as good as gold, but you are awfully queer. I think all my family relatives are queer, I wonder what makes them so?"

"Well, Tom," said his aunt, after recovering her breath from this surprising countercharge, "I am glad we have at least one person in the family who is never on any account queer."—Mary B. Dimond in the Advance.

On Airing the Bed.

This is one of the important matters in household management to which too little heed is given. Beds should be aired, and well aired, every day. With regard to the length of time the airing should continue, Good Housekeeping says: Just as long as possible. A good way to air the clothes is to place two chairs at the foot of the bed, two or three feet away, then draw the clothes from the bed over them smoothly, leaving the mattress bare. In this way the mattress is aired and the clothes have a better chance than when thrown over chairs. The pillows are beaten up and placed in the air, but not in the sun, as that makes them smell oily.



They're Completely Disguised—all of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets—with a sugar-coating which surrounds their concentrated vegetable extracts. You do not get the taste. This means more than comfort. The offensive taste of oils, or of bitter pills is apt to upset digestion. These Pellets help digestion. They're tiny, hence easily swallowed. They're easy in action, and after using them you feel well instead of Bilious and Constipated; your Sick Headache, Dizziness, and Indigestion are gone.

Good nature belongs to an active liver; irritability to a morbid liver. Take Pleasant Pellets that you may cultivate good nature, happiness, and health.

They're the cheapest pill you can buy, because guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

It's a permanent cure, that you get with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. The makers offer $500 reward for an incurable case.

THE seriousness of the situation intensifies day by day. At first it was a "rich man's panic," and gambling speculators were the only losers; next the banks began to fail; then the merchants and manufacturers were compelled to dismiss their employees, and close their doors to honest and worthy labor; to-day the streets of our greater cities are filled with the murmur of the hungry multitude. New York has heard their cry, and seen their wild demonstrations as no city has since Paris heard it a century ago as its threatening roar rang out of the suburb of St. Antoine.

In the same city on the same day, four yachts, costing over a million dollars each, contended for a cup worth hundreds of dollars; on the same day, within hearing of that murmur of the hungry multitude, men were entering horses, which had cost them hundreds of thousands of dollars, to race for purses, which, distributed among the people, would have filled thousands of hungry mouths and relieved untold suffering. On the same day in Chicago, where 200,000 worthy and willing laborers are tramping the streets in vain quest of employment, that they may provide the necessaries of life for starving wives and babes, a low spectacular theatre was so popular that tickets of admission were in demand at $2 each a week in advance—a shame on a civilized century. Such times and such conditions do not take long to make communists out of patriots, anarchy out of government, chaos out of order. How can a nation hope to prosper when the rich man, the gambler, and the low pleasure-seeker continue to spend large sums in vain, unprofitable, and ungodly enjoyments, while honest men cry for bread to feed their children? Could Almighty God sanction such conditions with prosperity? There is but one solution to the situation, and that is found in the simple faith, hope and charity of Jesus Christ. The whole order of human society must be founded on his injunctions before our nation can be said to be safe. We are not of communistic tendencies, but we believe that Christ's words to the young rich man, "Sell all thou hast and give to the poor," are directly applicable to a certain extent in these troublous times.

IT STRIKES us that the machinery of government at Washington, proverbially slow and ponderous, if not always conservative, is slower and more ponderous than ever in this extraordinary session, when the maxim quoted by the President, "He gives twice who gives quickly," is so forcibly appropriate. Not many days since it became apparent that whatever bills one faction may introduce one of the others is going to use all its powers to delay and obstruct its enactment. There are as many plans as there are Congressmen, but none meet the approval of a majority. One wants an amendment, and another expends his oratorical powers to strike out a provision. They have agreed on but one thing so far: to pay themselves mileage. The representatives should know that they were placed where they are to relieve the people, not to consider their personal interests. This is no time for dilly dallying with personal and partisan interests. The country calls loudly for relief, and must have it.

"THE mountain hath groaned and brought forth a mouse" well expresses the result of the labors of the international tribunal, appointed some months since to settle the long disputed question of the relative rights of the United States and England to kill the seals which frequent the Pribylof Islands off the coast of Alaska, in the Behring sea. After five months of seemingly interminable discussion, the tribunal has decided, first, that no seal shall be taken by either nation within sixty miles of the Pribylof Islands, the home of the seals; second, pelagic sealing is allowed outside the sixty mile limit from August 1st to May 1st; third, in no case can fire arms be used in taking seals; fourth, these agreements are to be observed in both the North Pacific Ocean and the Behring sea; fifth, the United States to pay a sum not yet agreed upon (it is thought $2,000,000) to the Canadian sealing vessels which heretofore have been denied the right to take seals in Behring sea.

The decision fails in two instances to accomplish the purpose for which the tribunal was constituted—the preservation of the seals. No provision was made to prevent other nations, particularly Russia, from taking seals whenever they wanted them, as, under the terms of the decision, neither of the contending powers has authority to prevent other nations entering the seas and taking seals at any time and by any means; second, it allows seal-taking in the month of August, which is the height of the breeding season, in which the female seals are particularly helpless, and when killed destroys her offspring. The decision is far more favorable to Britain than to the United States; but we could have been content if it had insured the preservation of the seals. In another aspect the tribunal is a pleasing testimony to the progress of civilization in the settlement of a dispute which would have thrown the interested countries into war a hundred years ago. As such the nations deserve credit, not the tribunal.

A PERUSAL of a large majority of our daily papers would lead one to believe that there is nothing else in this country but misery, poverty and oppression. It is not that bad. Comparatively few are actually suffering, and in many instances we have evidence that "gentle charity" has not yet deserted our land. A metropolitan newspaper instituted a system of free ice dispensaries sometime since through which many of the fortunate have shown their disposition to relieve suffering. By means of this system more than twelve thousand people are daily supplied with ice free of cost, which is a great blessing to the sick in the present humid weather. It is perhaps insignificant to the casual observer, but it shows that people still have kind hearts.

Talks on Medicine—No. 1.

FROM A RETIRED PHYSICIAN.

FAMILY MEDICINES.

There is a good deal to be said in favor of "family medicines." Many times properly trained families can do much in the way of driving off disease by the judicious use of many of the remedies which can be used with impunity without the aid of a physician. It must be borne in mind, however, that while family prescribing has its place, it also has its dangers. Perhaps it might be said with safety that more lives have been lost or endangered by over indulging in "family medicines" than have been saved by them. But this is not to be used as argument for the entire obliteration of the art of family prescribing, but rather to help the judgment of the prescriber to trust himself only when and where he is absolutely sure the remedies can do no harm, and when there is unusual delay in getting a physician. Now, then, with this principal ever before the reader, can we talk to him about some things we have learned. We are prepared at least, we trust, to do no harm.

RULES TO OBSERVE.

There are besides the great principle announced at the beginning, certain special rules to be observed in dealing with the sick.

1. See that the patient is sick. It is not everybody that whines that is sick. We have read many stories of men who, when called out to battle, would suddenly be stricken with some terrible ailment and call for medicine. But the day of "battle sickness" has not past. Although the smoke of the bloody days of '61 has cleared away, still there are other battles sometimes calling for the exhibition of more nerve and genuine heroism—the battles of life. Many are the struggles through which we are to pass in life and strong must be the nerve to fight them. And sometimes in these struggles, men and women suddenly succumb to "battle sickness" and call for skilful management. I remember being sent for once to treat such a case. It was something like this: Mr. A. had a very industrious wife. She moved herself and made everybody else move in proportion. Mr. A., however, was the laziest man I ever saw. It was said of him that he would sit any time and let the chickens roost upon his legs rather than expend a little force in driving them away. At any rate, he was exceedingly lazy. One hot summer day his wife wanted to go to her father's, and the husband must go to carry the baby. It was too hot work. Toting a baby in the hot sun through sand is no pleasant work. But despite his pleadings, she would go. And knowing that such would not do, allow her to take the baby and he remain at home in the shade. He decided to get sick; consequently a bad case of colic was hatched up. I was sent for and soon was upon the scene of suffering. I was young and inexperienced at that time—thought everybody who grunted needed "physic." And so without much examination, I administered a heavy dose of powdered ipecac and to make a long story short, he tested the extreme muscular capacity of the lower end of his stomach for several days. Be sure your patient is sick before you give medicine. Many a mother has resorted to calomel, salts, oil and the like when there is no need for anything. Sometimes a strong rebuke or a little muscular exercise would be the remedy. Many a child has been ruined—made a dyspeptic for life or brought to an untimely grave by the recklessness on the part of their parents in giving medicine when none was needed.

2. Be sure you know what they need. After you have ascertained as to whether or not your patient is in real need of medicine, then the next step is to find out what kind of medicine he needs. Much harm has been done by wrong diagnosis not only by the "laity" but by the doctors themselves. People have a crazy notion that certain drugs are needed anyhow, makes no difference what is the matter, and hence when one of the family gets sick regardless of his symptoms, they pour in their pet drugs, such as calomel, salts, &c. Why, some mothers keep calomel all the time and give it for all the ills of the flesh!

AN AWFUL MISTAKE.

To show how much harm is sometimes done by making this false diagnosis and basing treatment upon it, I was called one night so see a man in great haste. Arriving upon the premises, I was met by his wife, a "doctor woman." She gave medicine to the neighborhood—was a very wise woman, as she thought—would not hesitate to hold an argument with Gross on Surgery or Bartholow on Practice. She said, "O, Doctor, he is dying! he is dying!" "O, no," said I, "you are scared." "Me scared! No, sir." "What's the matter?" said I. "It's his liver, his liver, doctor—it's his liver. I've given him salts and oil, Tutt's pills and calomel, and he is vomiting more bile than you ever saw." By this time I was in the house; soon found my patient had agina pectoris, a deadly form of heart disease. His stomach had been torn all to pieces, and with every effort at vomiting, he would scream as if death was near. O, what a pity she had not let him alone until the doctor arrived!

So I conclude this paper by making an earnest plea for proper diagnosis—find out what kind of medicine your patient needs, if he needs any at all. If not possible for you to do this, let him alone until you get the doctor present, or else content yourself with using simply externals and harmless teas, which, while they may do no good in themselves, may do no harm;—and thus allow nature and your doctor to have a fair chance at curing a sick patient, and not to have to bear the blame of your blunders by being accused of ignorance in his profession, which is to the doctor his "stock in trade." And no man who has not been there can give any estimate as to how these little things influence his success and thus his reputation.

Information Given.

Editor Recorder:—Bro. Durham asks information about Bro. Dickinson's statement about the Professors at the Seminary.

I think I was at the Seminary with Bro. Dickinson, and at the time Prof. Hawes taught elocution in the Seminary, and I think he was a Presbyterian, but had nothing to do with teaching theology or anything pertaining to the Bible. Perhaps if Brother Dickinson's whole statement had have been quoted, he would have been better understood and his remarks have caused no comment. I know not how this may be, but know I myself have suffered from garbled extracts from what I have said and giving to my remarks an entirely different meaning from what was intended. For instance, the quotation from Bro. Dickinson might leave the impression that a Presbyterian was teaching theology in a Baptist seminary, when in fact he had nothing to do with Bible doctrines, and perhaps not half the students knew the fact that he was a Presbyterian, as I heard incidentally myself. I found him a Christian gentleman, and that forbade him intruding any of his theological views upon the class in the study of elocution.

The propriety of thus selecting a Presbyterian even in this capacity I was fully satisfied to leave with the able faculty.

Should any one misunderstand the quotation, they need have no fears of Presbyterian doctrines being taught at the Seminary.

These are my impressions about Professor Hawes being a Presbyterian, but I may be, as Bro. Dickinson may be, mistaken; if so, I would gladly be correctly informed, and feel assured that Bro Dickinson would, and that he would not under any circumstances intentionally misrepresent either institution.

"The Virginia Plan."

Dear Recorder:—In your last issue you say editorially that "every now and then some brother with only a partial knowledge of the facts, seems to think it would be better for the Baptists of this State to adopt the Virginia plan of work in State Missions."

As I am the only brother who has publicly advocated the "Virginia Plan," I desire to submit some facts for the consideration of your readers, and I am perfectly willing for them to judge whether I have "only a partial knowledge of the facts."

You quote an item from the Religious Herald, embracing a statement from the Corresponding Secretary of the General Association at the Dan River Association, that "there had been no practical advance in State Missions in three years," and then you proceed to make a comparison with our work in North Carolina, but why did you go back ten years in our history? Why not confine yourself to the same period of time? The reason is not far to seek—the same is true of North Carolina—there has practically been no advance in State Missions since the year we met in Shelby. We are no better off than our brethren in Virginia so far as advance is concerned, although there has been the stimulus of a large deficit and frantic appeals for money to pay "our missionaries" who had to go half of the next year before they received their money, while there was a surplus of $1,500 in the Virginia treasury.

But the "Virginia Plan" includes something more than State Missions. You say that "the Virginia Plan requires four men to do what our Corresponding Secretary does in the State."

Suppose we look at some of the facts in the case:

1. As to the number of Baptists in each State. North Carolina has 150,000 white Baptists, and in Virginia there are 90,000, a difference of 60,000 in favor of North Carolina.

2. As to the contributions to the four objects under our Corresponding Secretary, viz., Sunday-schools, State Missions, Foreign Missions, and Home Missions, North Carolina gave for these four objects last year, including profits on Supply Store, $33,864.23, while Virginia gave for these four objects, including profits on sale of books, $48,999.51, or $15,135.28 more than we. If we had given the same per member as they, we would have given $82,500 in place of $33,864.23, and we are abundantly able to do so.

3. As to the cost of collecting and disbursing this money, it cost the Virginia brethren with one Corresponding Secretary receiving a salary, not exceeding $3,000. It cost us, with one paid Corresponding Secretary to do the same work, $5,345.70, or, in other words, Virginia paid out six per cent. of her income to carry on the work, and North Carolina paid out for the same purpose sixteen per cent. of her income. You say that it took four men to do what our Corresponding Secretary did, but that is the very thing I have been pleading for—put the Foreign Mission work of the State in the hands of the Vice President in the State, and the same of Home Missions as they do in Virginia. The beauty of their plan is the division of labor, and that was contemplated by the appointment of Vice-Presidents of the Home and Foreign Mission Board. Virginia paid out for Colportage work last year $6,000; we paid out $128.

It needs no great wisdom to see the advantage of the "Virginia Plan" over ours. I have no axe to grind in this matter. I am not working to "oust" our Corresponding Secretary. I believe in his efficiency, but I don't think we need a traveling Corresponding Secretary in this State. I am sure that it would be better to have some one in the office simply and throw the responsibility of raising this fund upon the pastors, where it belongs. I believe that our Association has made as much advance in the last three years in proportion to their ability as any in the State, and the Corresponding Secretary has not been worth anything to us.

It may be said that I am a new man in the State and ought, therefore, to keep quiet; but I could not stop my mind from working because I happened to be born in Tennessee in place of North Carolina; neither could I stop my conscience from working. If it is a mistake not to have been born in the old North State—don't lay it to me—I was not consulted as to where I should be born.

If I was doing nothing to support the Convention, then I would have no right to speak, but I am serving a field that is giving five times as much to the cause as it did when I came to it, and not only that, but is giving more, in my judgment, in proportion to the taxable valuation of their property than any other field in the State; at least, I am willing to compare. I am not bragging on myself or field, but vindicating my right to speak on this important question, although a new man in the State.

With malice toward none, but love for all, I am yours in the work,

M. P. MATHENY.

Lincolnton, N. C.

From Penelope, N. C.

Dear Recorder:—Our cause appears to be advancing in this section of the State. The hard times financially seems to make the people realize that help must come from higher power than political parties or even the United States government.

I am now pastor of two churches that are commencing to build new houses of worship. In the near vicinity are two more new houses just completed and the fifth and sixth in contemplation. I am serving a mission that would have built a house and taken permanent growth if the Board of Missions had seen clear to make an appropriation for a preacher for them.

The meeting just closed at Warlick's Chapel was, in many respects, the best meeting I have ever conducted. The influence was so far-reaching that nearly every service revealed surprises to us, as the work of the Spirit was made manifest in leading so many old and middle-aged people to confess their sins and embrace Christ as a Saviour, who before had always been indifferent. The services continued through nine days and seven nights. Results—thirty eight baptized, four restored; the church membership fully united for future work in all departments; a new house before the end of the year, and a pastor called with a larger salary than ever offered before in the church's history. They have been without a pastor for several months, and many troubles and great coldness were rapidly pushing them into do-nothingness.

Will the brethren pray with us that this may become the banner church of all this section? Sincerely,

C. M. MURCHISON.

Can't Go as a Missionary at Present.

Dear Recorder:—Some one has gotten the idea from a resolution passed by the Missionary Society of the Second church, that I am going right off to China. The brother who wrote up the resolution did not intend to leave that impression. He meant to say that when I got ready to go, that the Society would then do what the resolution stated. Please state that I cannot go now. I have had no intention of going right away. I wish I were ready to go. It is the desire of my life to be there and preach the gospel to the heathen in their own language; and, with God's help, I am going as soon as he opens the way for me. But I do not think I shall be able to go under three or four years. Yours in Christ,

A. A. BUTLER.

Durham, Aug. 17, 1893.

To Sunday-school Superintendents and Treasurers.

Send in your order for Sunday school supplies for the fourth quarter, early in September. Of course, you are going to order from the Sunday-school Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, our Board.

Please do not send bank checks if you can possibly help it. They are not available at present. Send by post-office order, postal note, registered letter, or by Express.

Try to get your orders in before the middle of the month. This will help us and you, too. Yours truly,

T. P. BELL, Cor. Sec.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 30, 1893

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

NOW WE HAVE IT.

In glancing over a recent Baltimore paper we noticed that a minister of a certain denomination, located in that city, selected the following subject for a regular Sunday discourse or sermon: "Christ's bosom the unsurpassed summer resort." This subject was of course announced in the papers of the city, and as it was one of undoubted novelty, the preacher expected many to come to hear it discussed. This subject was discussed in connection with the text, "Come unto me all ye that labor," &c.

This plan of selecting startling subjects, advertising or announcing them beforehand, is a part of the modern system of sensationalism in the pulpit. If this preacher succeeded in drawing a large congregation to hear this particular theme discussed, and sent them away saying "that was a brilliant sermon," he doubtless received or had his reward. We suppose it was quite a secondary consideration with him whether souls were saved under that sermon or not. That idea, we fear, is often relegated to the background by sensationalists. In this case the crowded house, the praise of the multitude, the big salary, receive due and undue attention.

Well, what did the preacher mean by selecting such a subject? We have not the advantage of consulting him in person. We do not propose to communicate with him by telegraph or by letter. So we are left to surmise. Why did he call Christ's bosom a "summer resort?" Does he mean that souls may go to Christ only during the heated term? If we understand the gracious invitation contained in his text, "Come unto me," &c., souls are welcome to come at any time, summer or winter, in youth or old age. And reason as we may, when we hear these words "summer resort," we think of heat and dust, the rush of great crowds to cooling shades, the rounds of pleasure, the light of the ball-room, and the giddy mazes of the dance. We are apt to think of the fun and frolic, yea of the elegant leisure and social abandon of fashionable society. These are rather strange ideas to be placed in close contact with the thoughts suggested to the minds of those who are tired of sin, when they hear or read Christ's gracious words, "Come to me." It is quite strange that the preacher could see no incongruity here.

And then when we speak of summer resorts we think of places that cannot, as a rule, be reached by the poor of the land. Seldom can the poor toiling sons and daughters of Adam visit these elegant and costly abodes of luxury and ease. So the idea of the preacher may have been that the rich are more welcome to Christ's bosom than the poor. That may be his idea of religion, but it is not ours. "Unto the poor the gospel is preached," is a marked peculiarity of the New Dispensation. Does not the Master guard us against any such idea in the words that immediately follow, and in fact form a part of the text the preacher selected, "For I am meek and lowly in heart," etc. It is a fact that the poor of this world accept Christ more readily than the rich, and very few of them hear or accept the gospel at summer resorts.

Or did the preacher mean that Christ's bosom was a kind of sanitarium for the sick and afflicted among men, whose cooling shades and healing waters were not specially needed by the strong and vigorous sinners about him? Reason as we may, the mention of the summer resort will, in addition to the train of ideas already suggested, sometimes cause us to think of sunken cheeks, diseased bodies, broken constitutions, &c. It is true that many who are strong and vigorous seek the summer resort, and yet it is equally true that many who are enfeebled and diseased seek its benefits. Some may infer from the preacher's subject that he thinks it wise for people to serve Satan while they are strong, but when they are done sowing their "wild oats," they may hie them to Christ's bosom. Strange idea, that, that Christ should be continually gathering into his bosom the broken down hacks of sin! The worst of sinners are welcome, even the broken-down debauchee, if he comes with penitence for his sins; but surely the invitation of the Savior is to all—the young, the strong, the beautiful. He who created has a right to accept the best gifts of his creatures.

And why did the preacher use the word "resort?" Does he mean that Christ's [illegible], as a summer resort, has many and [illegible] competitors? Is Christ's bosom [illegible] around on head bills like the [illegible] of the nostrums of the patent medicine man, or those of a star actor in a theatrical troupe? The whole thing is nauseating, and smacks strongly of patent medicine, charlatanry, money-making, &c. What a confused idea some people have of religion anyway! We must confess that we do not love this modern system of jumbling religion with so many other things, with which it has no fellowship. We have seen some of it in evangelistic meetings. We doubt the wisdom of the hymn book man permeating a congregation continually during a meeting to vend his wares. He is naturally followed by the pea nut man, the lemonade man, and then—what next?

It would be well for these sensational brethren to ask themselves the question, then, "How will this theme sound to those who are at a distance?" There always has been, and always will be, a large class of persons (and "may their tribe increase,") who are in the habit of taking words at their usual meaning. We benighted folks afar off then, Mr. Preacher, are simple enough to put a natural construction on your subject, and, in doing that in this case, we have a jumble of such ideas as the above, and many others that might have been mentioned, that leave us all "at sea" as why you selected such a theme. Your esoteric exposition might have been quite stunning, and may have caused sundry exclamations of delighted surprise on the part of your enrapt hearers; but you must remember that we are not so fortunate (?), and we modestly suggest a little more care in selecting your themes.

Would it not be well for this preacher, and all others who are similarly affected, to study more closely Christ's method of preaching and his plan of work, and also that of his apostles. Did Christ send messengers before his face to Jerusalem announcing on the street corners that he would preach in the temple on his bosom being a first class summer resort? Did Paul preach at Ephesus on "the man that kicked at the moon," or any similar subject?

There is one comfort about this thing of sensationalism in the pulpit, and that is that it, like any other fad, will find an end to its day. That end would come sooner if sensible and conservative Christians would rebuke, by word and example, this morbid desire for the new and startling in religious work and methods. If the whole thing were relegated to a few light-headed preachers and the few that really love such methods, they would be set aside for something more sensible and scriptural.

ETHICS OF MONEY-MAKING

There is now a good deal of excitement in financial circles. Promising business men are making assignments; banks are suspending, and some are predicting worse things yet to come. One secret of it all is, we think, that the mania for gold is so general and has so permeated the trading centres of our population, that many have resorted to questionable means to acquire wealth. Honesty, more than gold or silver, is the basis of all financial transactions. Where the rules of honesty and fair dealing are disregarded, and men hasten by doubtful means to accumulate fortunes in a week, that their plodding but honest grandsires accumulated only after a life time of honest toil, may expect a reaction and a turning of the wheels of justice, so that they will see plainly the hand of an honest God, who will rebuke the sin of dishonesty and the sin of covetousness, as he always has done. We do not fear the financial future of our great country. Let us not be frightened by the outcry of some who go to the wall; and considering their methods, ought to have gone there long ago. Let us deal honestly with our fellowmen, and let none make haste to be rich, especially by questionable means.

We can but express regret that some who have dealt fairly and honestly, are suffering with the guilty. These would do well to study Solomon's maxims as to money and debt-making.

SOME of our esteemed contemporaries are zealously discussing the advisability of establishing a Chair of Bible Study at each of our denominational colleges, and making a thorough course in that department necessary to a degree, and, we are glad to note, there are but few, if any, dissenting or discouraging voices. To us the wonder is that there should be need for such a discussion. Surely our young men should be acquainted with our accepted guide of life. Surely they should learn of the times and the people who first knew the laws on which the welfare of our government rests to day, and on which our national life depends. More than this the life of Christ is accepted even by infidels as the one ideal of human existence. Its simplicity and purity should be a guide to the student of science and literature alike. Certainly this is worth studying. And yet the remark is true that many of our college graduates receive their diplomas with only a Sunday school knowledge of the Bible.

A systematic course of study of the Bible, under charge of one who analyses in order to demonstrate and establish, rather than to falsely criticise and tear down, would be far more valuable to our college students than many subjects which they are compelled to take in order to fill out their course. All this is aside from the religious view—it is extremely practical.

An effort was well under way last spring to establish a Chair of the Bible at Wake Forest, and the movement received the heartiest approval all over the State, but a lack of funds prevented its establishment. Wake Forest needs this Chair to day. Her ministerial students need it, and her scientific and literary students need it. The day is passed when only pastors are expected to be acquainted with the Book of Books. Its truths are worthy of the careful study of all. May God speed the day when Wake Forest may announce that she has established the "Wm. Royall Chair of the Bible."

....Dwight L. Moody has succeeded in raising $35,000 more for his Northfield Seminary. Just now Mr. Moody is in a suit in which an heir sues for money which, it is claimed, the evangelist obtained from an irresponsible man.

....We would greatly appreciate the co-operation of our subscribers in obtaining new subscribers just at this time. It may only cost you the trouble of a few words to a brother, but it helps wonderfully, and may result in great good.

....Dr. Thos. Hume of the State University has been at Chicago for some weeks delivering a series of lectures on "Shakespeare and the Nineteenth Century Poets." We were pleased to read an interesting account of one of his lectures in the Chicago Standard.

....The Charlotte Observer is responsible for the following: Rev. A. C. Dixon, pastor of the Hanson Place Baptist church, Brooklyn, who is now on his vacation in Europe, contemplates resigning his pastorate in order to devote himself to general evangelical work.

....Mr. L. T. Wilkie of Lincolnton died this morning of intussusception of the bowels. He was one of Lincoln's most highly esteemed citizens, and has been treasurer of Lincoln county for the past eight years. He was also a prominent member of the Baptist church and a Knight of Honor.—Charlotte Observer.

....The pastor of the First church of Asheville, N. C., Rev. J. L. White, preached at Brantly on last Sunday, to the joy of two large congregations. Bro. White is a very interesting preacher, and is said to possess some of the strong points of Rev. A. C. Dixon. He will preach at Brantly again next Sunday.—Baltimore Baptist.

....Of late we have had several complaints from subscribers that the RECORDER does not reach them regularly. Errors are always likely to occur in a large subsciption list, and we would be glad to correct all that may be called to our attention. If you fail to receive the RECORDER promptly, drop us a postal, and we will see what is the matter.

....A young lady teacher in a Chinese mission school in Vancouver, Washington, has married one of the Chinese. The teaching in such schools should be done by "men only." If the Chinese refuse to go unless every Chinaman can have a young girl to teach him alone, let them stay away. That refusal is proof that the gospel is not the attraction.—Western Recorder.

....Rev. W. A. Barrett has been a busy worker in the fields lately. He held a meeting at Arbor church in Vance county recently, and as a result twenty-five persons professed faith in Christ; another at Deep Creek church, Moore county, where twenty-four professions of faith were made. At present he is with Bro. Baldwin at Pine Grove church, Moore county.

....Rev. G. W. Hicks, assisted by Rev. T. J. Taylor of Warrenton, had a good meeting at Sharon church, Warren county, recently. Nine united with the church, and others may follow. Brother Hicks writes: "The brethren and friends are going to work at once to improve our house of worship. We have large and attentive congregations, and the outlook is hopeful."

....In this time of financial depression it is well for churches and individual Christians to inquire the reasons for religious depression. Many churches are doing nothing in the week of soul-saving. They need a revival of religion. A great spiritual awakening is the crying necessity of the times. Let us not be satisfied, as Christians, with only material prosperity.—Christian Secretary.

....Rev. Dr. N. B. Cobb writes from Archer Lodge, Johnston county, N. C., as follows: "We are having a great meeting at this place. Over fifty penitents last night, and a large number at Clyde's Chapel. Bro. C. W. Scarborough and I are aiding Bro. O. C. Horton, pastor, in meetings at both places, and the interest is increasing daily at both places. About two hundred unconverted people in the congregation last night. Surely this is a great field for ministerial work. I have to leave to attend funeral of my brother-in-law, B. J. Cobb, at Wilson, N. C., who died on yesterday."

...."He who helps quickly helps twice," in these times, is a saying that we want to impress upon our subscribers, and especially on those who are in arrears. We need the money that our delinquents owe us; we need it now, and we cannot wait. "A friend in need is a friend indeed." Can't you send us your subscription as soon as you read this notice.

....Dr. Wm. H. Williams, editor of the Central Baptist of St. Louis, dropped dead Aug. 24th in St. Louis. He had been attending the Baptist Convention at Kahoshia, and had preached a sermon before the Convention on the evening before his death, which was due to heart disease. He was a man of whom his denomination was proud, and one of its ablest editors.

....Rev. Sam J. Porter of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, one of our most promising young missionaries, writes in a private letter: "I am anxious to hear from North Carolina, and most especially to see the RECORDER." He is pleased with the country, and is making good progress in learning the Portuguese dialects. We will publish a letter from him in an early issue. Bro. Porter's address is, Rev. S. J. Porter, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Caixa 352.

....Bro. Stallings is preparing for a large attendance at the Blue Ride Institute, Low Gap, N. C. The school is beautifully situated in full view of the Blue Ride mountains, in the midst of the most beautiful scenery. The institution is open to both male and female, and instruction is given in all the popular branches. The rates are very low. Elder K. Thompson, M. D., is treasurer of the Board of Trustees, and all money should be paid to him.

....Bro. A. J. Wood writes under date of the 28th: "Our revival series of meetings at Apex Baptist church closed on Saturday the 26th. The meetings were conducted by Rev. I. T. Newton, our pastor, assisted only by the brethren. Two converts were baptized and added to the church yesterday. While we had no great outbursts of our religion, we feel that our pastor, brethren and sisters feel generally better to know they have at least done something for Jesus."

....The next degree established for preachers should be the degree of B. B.—back-bone. Baptist preachers, of all others, need it to aid them in stemming the great and increasing tide that is flowing back toward Rome; and all preachers need it to strengthen them for the conflict with the liquor traffic which hangs crape on more doors this year of our Lord than in any year of the history of the human race. God help us all to be men—sure enough men.—Texas Baptist Standard.

....It is with pleasure that we present to our readers this week the first of a valuable series of "Talks on Medicine," by a retired physician, who desires us to withhold his name for the present. Before retiring from his profession, this physician was counted one of the most successful and promising doctors, and held honorable positions in the North Carolina Medical Society. Since that time he has been engaged in the successful prosecution of the duties of another calling, in which he is no less promising.

....In the few days that remain before the opening of Wake Forest College, let the brethren and sisters all over the State lend their energies in its behalf. Let them "talk up" the College; its Faculty, its course of study, and its alumni, are excellent subjects. Have personal interviews with all young men who you think should go to college; urge upon them the necessity for and the value of an education, and the advantages of Wake Forest. There are three hundred boys in North Carolina who should be at Wake Forest this fall, and work will bring them.

...Dr. T. P. Bell in endorsing the appointment of Dr. Willingham to the Corresponding Secretaryship of the Foreign Mission Board has the following very timely words to say: "But well qualified as he is for the work, let us remember that no one man can make a success of this work. He may be the best Secretary the sun ever shown on, but unless we, the people, rally to his help, sustain him by our prayers and hold up his hands by our gifts, he can do nothing. Would it not be a pleasing thing for the Baptists of the South to have their new Secretary go into office in the early fall to find the Board free of debt, and a working balance on hand?"

....Rev. J. B. Marsh writes: "My church has granted me a vacation, which I purpose spending at my old North Carolina home. They say, "Go, but don't preach." I do not see how I can go, there is so much to do here. At least one hundred rose for prayer after last night's sermon, and how can I go and leave them? And yet I need rest. I attended S. S. and preached three sermons yesterday. Over one hundred have been added to the church, and yet they come. The Lord's work. I must have the RECORDER at my resting place." Bro. Marsh will rest at Abernethy, N. C., for two weeks, whence we hope he will return much strengthened for his work.

....The following from the American Baptist will strike a responsive chord in the breast of many denominational editors just now: "We dislike very much to be continually reminding our subscribers of our needs, but their negligence compels us to follow this course. Pressing and urgent obligations which have accumulated during the winter are now due, and if we had one half of the money due this office we could pay every one of them and have a handsome surplus. This does not apply to those subscribers who have paid up, but those who are in arrears owe it to themselves, they owe it to the denomination and to us to pay what they owe at once. Please do this now, and save us from further embarrassment. Don't delay, but send it this very day."

Letter from Wake Forest College.

The golden rod is blooming, and the leaves of the elm trees are turning yellow, and the Professors are flocking home, and the servants are scouring the buildings and weeding the campus paths. All this betokens that play-time is nearly over. Ere long the bell will ring, and the boys must come into the school-room again.

With bronzed faces and hardened hands, many will leave the fields; with quickened zeal and spiritual joy some will come from mission work and well filled pulpits, with a thirst for knowledge greater than ever; others will relinquish the teacher's desk and ferule. I earnestly pray that all, come whence they may, will come with the desire and purpose to make '93-4 the best session in the long history of the College. A very large percentage of our old students will return. A few are going to drop out for a year in order to teach and make the means with which to complete their course. I honor their manly independence. At least three, perhaps others, will go to another institution. Some relinquish the purpose of continuing their College course any longer. They may know best, but I fear that they will regret their decision hereafter. For, as I wrote not long ago, I have known many a man to be sorry that he failed to complete a course of liberal study, but I have never yet found the man who did so and regretted it afterwards. I hear of a large number of new students. It is always difficult to make an accurate estimate, but this year it is almost impossible. Money is very scarce everywhere, and new elements have been introduced into the competition for patronage of North Carolina colleges. But on the other hand, more and better work has been done for the College than ever before by its numerous friends, and I shall be surprised and disappointed if there is not a large matriculation of new students.

Students from the West, coming by Greensboro, will do well to spend the night there. They can leave that point at 7:30 a. m. and be at the College without loss of a night's rest by 12:15 p. m. There is a delay of about thirty minutes in Raleigh.

Those coming from points on the Carolina Central and Seaboard Railroads ought to take the regular mail train, and not the Atlanta Express.

It may help new students in making their arrangements for rooms and board to have the following information:

There is room in the Dormitory Building for about 100 students, two to each room. These pay $3 each per term for unfurnished rooms. Students can usually buy at small cost the furniture already in the room, and can sell it at but slight reduction when they finally leave College.

The following parties have unengaged rooms: Mrs. Watson, for 4 students; Mrs Vann, for 4; Mrs. Dickson, for 12; Purefoy Hotel, for 20; Dr. Fowler, for 6; Mrs. Carter, for 3; Wake Forest Hotel (at depot) for 8. There are a number of other rooms in very desirable private families.

Cost of furnished room and servants' attendance for each student: Vann and Dickson Houses, $2 per month; Fowler's and Timberlake's $1 to $1.50.

Furnished room, servants' attendance, fuel and lights, Mrs. Dickson's, Mrs. Carter's, W. F. Hotel, each $2.50.

Table Board. At the three Club Houses, about $6 50 a month. These are presided over by ladies. Everything is neat. The food is abundant, well served, and in sufficient variety. Mrs. Rabon's, $8 per month; Mrs. Watson's, Mrs. Vann's, Mrs. Dickson's, Dr. Fowler's, Purefoy Hotel, and W. F. Hotel, $3.50 per week.

Remember that College will open on the first Wednesday in September (Sept. 6th.)

CHARLES E. TAYLOR.

Do You Desire to go to College?

There are many young men who are trying to settle this question now. Some will readily answer, "Yes, it is my earnest desire to go to college;" others are undecided. To those who really desire to go, I would say, follow your desire and go. "Well," you say, "what inducements do you offer?" A chance to go to college if you really wish to do so.

First settle in your own minds that a collegiate education is worth all the toil, the sacrifices, and the money necessary to obtain it. Next decide whether you desire it enough to make the efforts necessary to secure it; for, in its best sense, it requires an honest manly character, unceasing perseverance, and a great deal of courage to grapple with difficulties successfully. Having decided these two things in the affirmative, a great step has been taken toward its attainment; then, to those who have the money it is only a matter of time and patience.

But there are many who are not favored with money sufficient to take a course at college. What of them? To them I unhesitatingly say as at the beginning, take what money you may have, "follow your desire and go." Wake Forest College will give you a chance to fulfill your desire. Men who are to make history for our State, and whose influence is to be most potent in every good work, do not wish to be surfeited by "inducements." They ask only a fair chance. With their own muscle and brain they will work out their own destiny under the guidance of divine wisdom. "Inducements" are very good things, but there is sometimes danger that a young man may surrender more than he may gain from the "inducements."

A child who ought to take some preparation good for his health, with the various members of the household gathered around with inducements—rattle, candy, sugar-plums, a ride in the easy-carriage, etc.—is, to a young man of much individuality of purpose, a picture not very conducive to courage at least. Wake Forest will give you an honest, manly chance. Can you wish for more? It has the love of the people who are friends of true education to sustain it, and it is determined to be in the front rank as an educator and helper of the young men of the country. Do you wish to prove the mettle of which you are made? It offers to you the prestige of a long line of men with a lofty individuality and a noble self-reliance who have won fame and affluence of which any may well be proud.

Of course some money is absolutely necessary to staying at college. A trustworthy economical young man can make a very little go a long way. The writer well remembers with what fear and trembling he went to college with sixty-three dollars—all his fortune—in his pocket. How he could pursue a course of four and a half years with only that to begin with was a problem he could not solve. True to its history, the college was his friend, and with the favor of others whose names will always be dear to him, and with much hard work, the years solved the problem for themselves. Of course there was a debt incurred, but to pay it was his first glad duty. Wake Forest will ever be enshrined in his love because it lovingly gave him an opportunity. It offers to determined aspiring young men a hand of welcome and sympathy. Are you one of them? Are you courageous? Then start while times are hard. Take what money you can and trust to your own efforts, to your friends, and to God for a successful achievement of a worthy ambition.

[Abridged from News-Observer-Chronicle]

A new feature in Christian work for this State was the assembling of Sunday workers at the Baptist Sunday-school Chautauqua at Mt. Vernon Springs, Chatham county, on Tuesday, August 22d, at 11 a. m. Arrangements had been made for reduced rates for board at the large hotel, kept by Mr. J. M. Foust, and the members are quartered there. A large Baptist church near by is the place of meeting, and its members and the people of the community generally are generous and kind in making every needed provision for the comfort of the visitors.

Rev. W. H. H. Lawhon, pastor of the church, in a short address warmly welcomed the members and visitors, and said no body had ever assembled in this State with a grander mission.

Rev. O. T. Edwards read the one hundred and third Psalm and offered prayer.

Dr. C. A. Rominger of Reidsville explained the objects and aims of the Chautauqua and and expressed the hope and belief that its influence would be far-reaching and helpful. The secular teachers, he said, had their annual gathering for studying how to do their work more perfectly, and it was even more important for the teachers of God's word to meet for the same purpose.

Dr. Rominger was followed by others in brief statement of hopes for the meeting.

Mr. N. B. Broughton of Raleigh gave an address on "The Holy Spirit our Teacher."

The morning session closed with the benediction by Rev. Mr. Lawhon.

At 3 p. m., the Chautauqua assembled and engaged in a series of songs for half hour.

After prayer, Mr. T. S. Sprinkle of Winston, taught the Sunday school lesson for August 27th, illustrating how to teach adults.

This was followed by a discussion of teaching methods and some exercises on invisible black-board work, and the afternoon session closed.

The enrollment of members for the first day numbered eighty-four.

At 8 p. m., a large audience assembled to enjoy the song service set for the evening.

Rev. Baylus Cade of Louisburg read Scripture lesson, and prayer was offered.

A brief address was made by Prof. Wood on the value of song service to the Sunday-school, and gave exhibitions of ways of doing the same.

Wednesday morning opened very disagreeable and threatening. A good rain had fallen, and although it did not suit the program of the Chautauqua, it wonderfully helped the corn and potatoes.

The Baptist Chautauqua commenced its exercises at 9:30 a. m. Dr. Rowe of Greensboro read and gave comment upon the first chapter of James. Mr. J. R. Rodwell of Warrenton offered prayer. Mr. M. A. Allen of Reidsville taught a primary class the lesson for September 3rd, "Paul Shipwrecked," and did it so admirably as to receive the highest commendation. We heard persons who have seen some of the foremost primary teachers at their work, and they thought Mr. Allen was not surpassed by the best.

Primary room methods and needs were discussed, followed by a short song service. Questions asked and answered was the next order, and was one of the most spirited and interesting of the meeting. A good number of new members reported for membership, and the morning session closed.

In the afternoon, after a delightful song and devotional exercise conducted by Prof. Wood, the President introduced Mr. Josiah Crudup of High Point. Mr. Crudup took up the next item on the program, being the Sunday-school lesson of Sept. 10th, "Paul at Rome." He first defined the method of teaching, that of asking and having answered questions bearing on the subject in hand. The great difficulty in teaching the Bible, said he, is to realize what it is. He then formed a class of a dozen ladies and gentlemen, and took up the lesson in its regular form, drawing from it in a simple manner the great truths taught therein.

The following central truths were drawn from the lesson by the teacher at the close of his lesson proper:

N. B. Broughton: "God buries the workman, but the work goes on." Mrs. Dr. Rominger: "The best way to teach Christ is to love Christ." M. A. Allen: "The sect of the Nazarenes everywhere spoken against were not ashamed or afraid to acknowledge their identity." Prof. Sprinkle: "Paul's independence; at Corinth he made tents, and in Rome he preached in his own hired house." Rev. L. G. Broughton: "Some believed; encouragement in the work." Rev. B. Cade: "Those who reject Christ do it at their own peril." Mrs. T. M. Tucker: "God does not require us to teach men to come to Christ, but to love Christ, and thus teach men." Rev. O. T. Edwards: "Persecution does not hinder, but always helps the gospel." Dr. Rominger: "Study how to ask questions so as to bring out the thought in the pupil's mind."

Song by the congregation: "Shepherd of love."

"The Teacher's Preparation," by Rev. Baylus Cade of Louisburg was the next subject taken up. The speaker gave his ideal of a specially prepared teacher. No man ever reaches his ideal except a 'smart Alec.' A narrow man or woman cannot be a great teacher. The teacher should be of a large, liberal heart and mind. God is the Father of us all, but of the Christian especially. We want wide views of the universe and of him who rules it. He must not only have a wide view but a correct view. A man who has no faith in his fellowman has none in God. Not only a wide and correct view of the subject, but a broad, catholic sympathy for man as man. A man's value is not in his clothes, but in the man. The teacher's preparation should be extensive. He ought to be master of the text; to know what the Holy Spirit says and means. Study how to tell it; make the lesson simple.

Solo, "Your Mission." After singing "There's a crown in heaven for you," Rev. B. Cade pronounced the benediction.

At night the church was filled to listen to Rev. B. Cade discourse from John 12: 20-28. Subject—"The Law of Living is Dying."

On Thursday morning, the organization of the body was gone into, with the following result: President, N. B. Broughton of Raleigh; Vice-President, Dr. C. A. Rominger of Reidsville; Secretary and Treasurer, J. C. Birdsong of Raleigh.

The first subject was the lesson of September 17th, on "Personal Responsibility," illustrative of how to teach grown people, conducted by Mrs. T. M. Tucker of Reidsville. Clearly, distinctly, and beautifully the teacher drew out of the lesson our great, personal responsibility to God, each for himself. The following central truths were given from the lesson:

M. A. Allen: "Love to our Brother." Miss Laura Boner: "That we Should so Live as not to be Stumbling Blocks." Mrs. Smith: "Love one Another, as Christ Loves Us." J. M. Broughton: "Destroy not Him With thy Meat for Whom Christ Died." J. C. Birdsong: "Go to our Brother and Strive to Help Him." Mrs. Rominger: "We Ought to Pray Every Morning that we May not be Stumbling Blocks." Dr. Rominger: "Industrial Responsibility; Every Tub Must Stand on its Own Bottom." Mrs. F. M. Tucker: "Be Careful not to Offend One of These Little Ones."

Song—"Throw Out the Life Line."

Prof. E. P. Moses of Raleigh next lectured in an interesting manner on the care and conduct of a Sunday school Library.

In the afternoon after a devotional and song service Rev. W. H. H. Lawhon, pastor of Mt. Vernon church, stated that during the recess of the Chautauqua, the citizens of the surrounding country had a meeting, and had raised about sixty-five dollars to help pay the expenses of the Chautauqua, and that they had authorized him to invite the body to meet here again next year, and if the body should make this its permanent home, he was authorized by a citizen to say he would give all the land necessary.

A collection was then taken to raise balance of $100 expense.

On motion, a vote of thanks was tendered to the citizens of the community for their kind expressions and liberal contributions.

On motion, the invitation to meet with this church next year was accepted.

On motion, Tuesday after the third Sunday in July was fixed as the time for the next meeting.

Rev. C. E. Taylor, D. D., President of Wake Forest College, was then introduced to the body, and received with the Chautauqua salute. He discussed "Defective Methods in Teaching." First, it was a defect to have too much method in teaching, in getting into "ruts." No one way was the best way; it was refreshing once in a while to break up programs and have everything new. It is a defect to lecture too much—for the teacher to talk and not have the pupil to talk back to him. Teaching is defective that does not encourage the children to learn by heart Scripture and many of the old-fashioned hymns. The greatest defect, he believed, lay in the fact that we do not bring away from the class enough of the Word of God in the very letter it was written. By the faithful teaching of the Word to the child, we bring it to Christ.

At night Rev. L. G. Broughton preached on "Personal Responsibility," a sermon of great earnestness and power.

Seeking Rest.

Through the kind insistence of one of the biggest Baptists in North Carolina, Bro. Noah Biggs, August 1st, found me en route to Scotland Neck, to "supply," while resting during the absence of the beloved pastor, R. T. Vann. A cordial greeting was accorded me in Raleigh by brethren N. B. Broughton, the pastor's assistant of the Tabernacle church; C. T. Bailey, faithful and beloved editor of the BIBLICAL RECORDER; and, C. Durham. Dear Durham, with all his faults and imperfections, which the brethren have been so industriously seeking out, is the grandest, the strongest, the most abundant in toils and sacrifices of any man in our denomination in the State.

I spent the night in the hospitable home of Bro. Broughton. After tea we went down to the Tabernacle, where we met thirty young men gathered for the purpose of studying and praying over the Sunday-school lesson for the following Sunday. A dozen talks on the lesson, with about as many prayers, and more hymns—all practical, short and crisp—constituted one of the most enjoyable, uplifting and infilling young men's meetings I was ever in, and furnished for me a solution of the problem what to do with our Baptist young men. O for more such pastor's assistants.

August 2d at five p. m. found me in Scotland Neck. I had heard of the place before. It was associated in my mind with the big-hearted and big-pursed Noah Biggs; with the faithful, laborious, eloquent Hufham. But that was only with the hearing of the ear. Scotland Neck, to be appreciated, must be visited. I went, I saw, they conquered. I am about prepared to agree with the little fellow at the Thomasville Orphanage, who, when asked which was the largest city in the State, promptly replied, "Scotland Neck." Such cordial, unstinted and unaffected hospitality! Such beautiful, unostentatious culture! Such high, noble, gospel born morality!

I attended the Temperance Society. Almost every respectable citizen, male and female, from ten years old and upward, is a member. It has gone on with unabated interest for five years. The pledge, taken on becoming a member, is to refrain from the use of all intoxicants as a beverage while one remains a member of this society. The result is, a sentiment has been built up against drink; not by flaming prohibition speeches, but by this social, entertaining weekly meeting. Few drink in Scotland Neck except the worst class of negroes. The bar-rooms in town are the most solitary looking places I ever saw. One failed the first week I was there for want of patronage.

But time would fail me, and patience would fail the reader, were I attempt to write of the generous entertainment provided for the "Supply." The rides, the hunts, the barbecues, the fruits, the melons—I repeat, Scotland Neck, to be appreciated—reader, you must go for yourself.

Next week I want to say something of the church.

Meetings in Mt. Zion Association.

We began a series of meetings at Olive Branch the 5th Sunday in July and continued four days. We trust that much lasting good was accomplished. The church was right much revived, but there were only two or three conversions.

The meeting at Bell's church, beginning on the first Sunday in August, was a success. The church was much revived, and several made professions. Only five as yet have been baptized, but others are expected to follow. Rev. Jno. O. Gough of Lumberton, N. C., assisted us at this place. Bro. Gough preached with power, and the Lord seems to bless his every effort.

Bro. Gough also assisted us in a meeting at Mt. Carmel, commencing on the second Sunday. The meeting at this place was also a success. There were many conversions, and the church was much strengthened.

We have one other meeting yet to hold and are trusting to the Lord for success.

God bless the RECORDER which has done and is doing so much for our people. I don't see how a Baptist family in North Carolina can well get along without it.

Gracious Meeting at Piny Grove

Dear Recorder:—A grand and most interesting revival meeting ever held in the Yadkin Valley was that which closed Aug. 23d at Piny Grove, which lasted twelve days. It was conducted by Rev. J. H. Nelson, the church's pastor. The result was twenty-eight conversions. Fifteen accessions were made to the church, thirteen of whom were buried with Christ in baptism in the Yadkin River, where a large crowd witnessed the scene. All Christian denominations were cordially invited and shared liberally in the blessings of our Lord and Saviour during the meeting.

It has been said—and is no doubt true—that Piny Grove was a hard place for a preacher, but it is hoped that it will never be so again, as Bro. Nelson has stirred up the Christian people to a complete sense of duty.

With such union of members and earnest efforts we are not surprised that God blessed us. Bro. D. C. Henley, a Quaker, did good work, and we must express our thanks to all for help rendered. The Holy Ghost was present, and the Spirit of Christ united Christian workers.

This meeting was signalized by remarkable displays of divine power in the awakening of sinners and sanctification of believers. Indeed, Bro. Nelson's language and whole appearance had something in them more than human, most manifestly indicating that his soul glowed with ardors of love somewhat related to those of angels. He has a hearty outspokenness about his style which is as refreshing as a dip into a mountain stream on a hot summer day. His beautiful classic style, vivid with fire from heaven, never appeared more advantageously. His views of the divine being, and especially of the power, glory and fullness of Christ, were overflowing.

The news of this good work soon spread across the country to adjoining neighborhoods, and people flocked in, and were constrained by the Holy Spirit to believe on the Lord Jesus. Even some who had not been to preaching for a long time were in attendance. Thanks be unto God for this glorious work. May he speed the day when there shall be more of it in our land.

Attention is called to the advertisement of the Raleigh Male Academy in this issue. This school cannot be surpassed as a preparatory institution for young men who intend entering college or business life. Professors Morson and Denson are gentlemen of scholarly attainments, whose long experience as teachers has placed them among our foremost educators.

From Alcolu, S. C.

Dear Recorder:—As your paper was a happy greeting in that far off country, and as it is much loved, I desire to acknowedge through its columns a debt of gratitude to the people of Alcolu. It was through their liberality and generosity that I was enabled, financially to pursue my work at Wake Forest College last spring. It is from a grateful heart that I wish to express my sincere thanks to that kind people.

A few days ago they invited me down to hold a few days of meeting for them and I was more than pleased to see a people so kind and benevolent. God wonderfully verified his promise that, "And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." Matt. 21: 22. The brethren and sisters had been praying for the Lord to bless their fields and neighbors, and how happy we all were when noble young men and young ladies broke from the ranks of the evil one and joined in with the people of God. But the happiest time of all was when I preached my last sermon upon the "Christian's Reward" from Rev. 22: 12. "And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." We were happy because our friend a few days ago, who had no reward except that of the wicked, could rejoice with us in the Christian's hope and reward.

Again I wish to extend my sincere thanks to the people of Alcolu for their kindness to me. May the Lord keep by his own love and power those that believe in him there and shield them from temptation.

Yours in Christ, T. B. HILL.

Green River Association.

This Association will convene with the Mountain Creek church, six miles from this place, on Thursday before the first Lord's day in October. Parties stopping off at this place will be provided with conveyance to the place of meeting.

We extend a special invitation to brethren Durham, Newton, Herring, Bryan, Caddell, J. C. Scarborough, W. R. Gwaltney, Dr. Taylor, T. H. Pritchard, M. P. Matheny, J. H. Mills, and everybody else who may feel an interest in the Lord's work. Especially do we want all the brethren who have charge of, or are in any way connected with, any department of our religious work.

Let everybody come, as ample provisions will be made for the entertainment of all who come. Come on, brethren, we want to see and hear you.

C. B. JUSTICE, Pastor.

King's Mountain Association.

The King's Mountain Baptist Association will convene with the Boiling Springs church (Cleveland county) on Thursday before the fourth Sunday in September, 1893. Messengers and visiting brethren will be met at Lattimore's Station with conveyance upon giving notice to the undersigned, stating whether they will come on the two C's or three C's train, and whether going east or west, and date of arrival. Both trains go east in the a. m. and west in the p. m.

Respectfully,

AN UNPAID AND UNBIASED REVIEW OF A NINETEENTH CENTURY WONDER IN THE FIELD OF CURATIVE SCIENCE.

A FRANK AND UNPREJUDICED REVIEW WHICH THOUSANDS MAY READ WITH PROFIT.

CRITICAL EXAMINATION INTO THE RECORD AND STANDING OF J. HILL DANIEL, M. D., SPECIALIST IN TREATMENT OF CANCER AND SCROFULOUS AFFECTIONS, DUNN, HARNETT COUNTY, N. C.

In response to numerous inquiries, we have made thorough and unbiased examination into the record of this physician, and as a result of such impartial investigation we cannot but bestow our heartiest approval and commendation. As the investigation was conducted without the aid, and even without the knowledge, of the subject of this report and is based altogether upon facts furnished from the highest and most disinterested sources, and from confidential expressions of representatives of the financial and commercial interests of the community, its fairness may be implicitly trusted, and its suggestions safely acted upon by those seeking highest ability and superlative skill.

This journal neither solicits nor accepts paid "write-ups" of any physician, and serves no interest save those of its readers, but it is always ready and willing to proclaim rare and phenomenal merit wherever such is found. In this case an overwhelming array of competent testimony was freely offered to prove ability of the highest type which has achieved success bordering upon the miraculous. Indeed, all the evidence was unanimously in favor—nothing against—not a single note of discord to jar upon the harmony of universal praise. Leaders in the marts of trade; highest officials in the banks; the heads of industrial institutions—all when questioned heartily conceded tribute in words so eulogistic that our representatives could not but believe that a master of his profession—a physician of paramount skill—had impressed his inherent worth upon the people. Case after case was cited wherein the ability of the local practitioner and family physician was unavailing—where every means proved impotent and vain—where as a last resort—almost in desperation—this masterful skill was sought, and as a result immediate and permanent relief was obtained. This has been repeated until it has ceased to excite wonder—until the community regards it an every-day affair. The pages of this paper would not contain an enumeration of the cases of the afflicted who have appealed to this "court of last resort"—all other hope dead—and now gladly proclaim their restoration to health and happiness—to home and friends—who in their gratitude and joy gladly spread the tidings that others who are falling faint and foot sore to die in despair, may look up and catch the glorious hope which shines down upon the disease stricken as does the golden orb of day into the cimmerian darkness of chaos.

But there are those who are still ignorant of this great healing power, who know not how near at hand is surcease from suffering, and ready cure for the most obstinate ailments, complicated diseases and chronic complaints which have withstood every known power, and baffled all ordinary skill. To those unfamiliar with this New Hope we would come with words of good cheer, bringing promise of the blessings of health, obtainable, we know, from no other source save this. To this class of unfortunates these words should come like unto a new gospel of physical regeneration bringing sweetest comfort to those grieviously afflicted, who, having exhausted all known skill, are ready to give up in despair. To such we would say that we know whereof we write when we state that we have satisfied ourselves beyond the slightest peradventure of a doubt that a cure is here obtainable when no other hope exists on earth.

We will cheerfully and promptly answer any and all letters from readers concerning this eminently successful practitioner, but would suggest that correspondence be sent directly to his office, as thereby much valuable time will be saved and the writer be placed in touch with the most marvelous curative power of the day. Whilst we will willingly respond to all inquiries we can not more strongly emphasize our words. It would be impossible to speak more emphatically regarding this beneficent power to heal, and in the light of investigation we could not honestly say less than we have. We have found where cure can be obtained when all lesser skill fails, and in common justice make such facts known to thousands who will gladly avail themselves of this masterful ability. For these reasons we bestow the unqualified endorsement and approval of this journal. Upon the worthiness of such commendation we willingly rest the confidence of every reader and the prestige gained in seventeen years of honorable and unbiased journalism. This we do without money and without price—not even asking the gratitude of the physician, but solely and alone that our readers, whose interests we represent, may secure the choicest blessings of health from this sure source when every other has been appealed to, and appealed to in vain.—Editorial correspondence Chicago Trade Journal and Trade Review.

Just Here.

Just here, where threads this narrow way,
One task must toil from morn till night;
Yon yonder where that royal road
Winds up along the sun-crowned height.

Keep to the road that dazzling path,
Its splendors half afraid,
Shall eyes every gaze at us
Looking for the peaceful shade.

—S. S. Times, in the Companion.

Put a Prayer Under.

There are some loads for the back, and some that must be lifted and carried with the hands. It tires the arms and makes the back ache when the loads are heavy, and if some one comes along who will put his shoulder under or lift with his hands, what a comfort and relief it is!

A young girl was once carrying a market-basket that was much too heavy for her strength, and another girl, in passing, noticed it and said, "Let me help you." Then she took hold of the handle and lifted half of the load. It was easy to carry after this. The young girl who was overworked never forgot the kindness of this stranger.

But there are weights that can never be carried in this way. They rest upon the heart. The load may be fear, anxiety or care. It may be a heavy sorrow. How can one help another to bear such burdens? Ah, there is a way. Put a prayer under the load that presses.—Journal and Messenger.

Neuralgia of the Stomach.

REV. A. N. FERGUSON A SUFFERER FROM THIS SERIOUS TROUBLE.

LAURINBURG, N. C., May 29th, 1893.

My Dear Sir:—Yours in regard to the new book of directions, &c., is to hand. Find enclosed four cents for a copy. I am very favorably impressed with the Electropoise. I commenced the use of it last February a year ago. Previous to that time I had now and again severe attacks of neuralgia of the stomach, especially during fall and winter months. At times I would scarcely pass a day free from pain, and not unfrequently for several days in succession would suffer most excruciating pain. The past winter is the first for several that I have passed without attacks of more or less severe suffering, and I believe under the blessing of God, that the Electropoise has been the preservative means. When troubled with symptoms of an attack, I apply the Electropoise for two nights in succession, and in a short time the threatening symptoms pass away. I would not be without it for twice its cost. Yours truly,

REV. A. N. FERGUSON.

The Effects of Alcohol on the System.

The immediate effect of a moderate amount of alcohol is a feeling of increased vigor. Ideas are increased in quickness, but lose in concentration. The system soon demands the stimulant more frequently. Abstinence is followed by suffering. The hand loses its steadiness, the brain its clearness. Insomnia adds to the drain on nervous forces, and the patient instinctively resorts for relief to the poison which is the direct cause of his condition. In time these symptoms become intensified, and evidences of chronic degenerations manifest themselves. Scarcely an organ in the body is exempt. Alcohol in the stomach retards digestion by paralyzing terminal nerves and by a chemical action on the pepsin of the gastric juice, produces changes in the secretions of the liver, and vitiates the processes throughout the whole alimentary tract, by causing a perverted action of the sympathetic nervous system. Partially-digested food passing from the stomach to the intestines becomes subjected to abnormal fermentations. As a result, poisonous products designated by modern chemists as ptomaines and leucomaines are formed. Elimination is retarded by alcohol; consequently these products are absorbed into the system and an anto-poisoning results. The lungs and skin undertake to assist in relieving the system of effete material, as shown by the peculiarly disagreeable odor of breath and perspiration persisting for days after cessation from the use of alcohol. These patients will be found to suffer from chronic catarrh of most of the mucous membranes, notably the stomach, and chronic liver and kidney changes leading to cirrhosis and Bright's disease. Degeneration and resultant weakening of the walls of blood vessels predispose to rupture (usually in the brain), producing apoplexy.—Dr. E. F. Arnold, in North American Review.

The man or woman who is profitably employed is generally happy. If you are not happy, it may be because you have not found your proper work. We earnestly urge all such persons to write to B. F. Johnson & Co., of Richmond, Va., and they can show you a work in which you can be happy and profitably employed.

"Prison Reform."

Much is being done in the work of "Prison Reform." Many wholesome plans are in operation for proper management and for educational and religious influences among convicts. But it sometimes happens that the institutions themselves need reforming as well as their inmates. For instance, in a certain penitentiary professing to be a reform prison, a convict, whose crime was stealing, is compelled to labor at cutting out pieces of pasteboard which are put between the outer and inner soles of shoes and sold for solid leather!—Sabbath Recorder.

What folly! To be without Beecham's pills.

It Looks Bad.

It looks bad to be absent from every prayer-meeting, but present at every sociable.

To have a sick spell the Sunday that a collection is to be taken.

To fill your table with secular literature, and take no church paper.

To cry "Amen" when the preacher hits the Mormons, but be as silent as the grave when he denounces your besetting sin.

To do or be anything in short but a consistent, consecrated, circumspect, cheerful Christian.—Omaha Advocate.

A Dark Sick-Room.

Dr. B. W. Richardson says that the first words of most physicians when they enter sick-rooms in private houses should be Goethe's dying exclamation—"More light! more light!" It certainly is true that generally before the doctor can get a good look at the patient he has to ask that the curtains be raised, in order that the rays of a much greater healer than the ablest physician may ever hope to be, may be admitted. If the patient's eyes are so affected that they cannot bear the light, a little ingenuity will suffice to screen them, and at the same time allow the cheerful light to enter. A dark sick-room must be an uncheerful one, and now that it is known that light is one of the most potent microbe killers, let us have it in abundance.—Watchman.

Borrowing Trouble.

At this moment, when so many are unable to borrow money on what would ordinarily be considered good security, every man finds himself able to borrow trouble without putting up any collateral. Trouble is to be had in every market, and every man can take as much as he chooses. The more he borrows, however, the less likely will he be able successfully to deal with what actually comes to him. It is a fact of experience which we are slow to learn that the trouble we borrow never would have been ours in any other way. We appropriate what would never come to us otherwise. The real troubles of life are numerous and hard enough, but they constitute a very small proportion of its trials in comparison with imaginary troubles. To deal successfully with the real troubles, we must refuse to consider the imaginary ones.—Christian Union.

LOOK OUT.

"In peace prepare for war, in health for sickness." This old adage is always wise and timely, especially so just now. Summer is on, with its debilitating influences. Nerves are flagging, appetites failing, energy and strength yielding, even now. Shortly will come decay of vegetation, when malaria will "ride on every passing breeze" and count its victims in every home. Now is the time. Repair the wastes. Restore the vitality. Fortify the system. Ward off the perilous attacks of malaria and pass safely and happily through. You can do this by using DR. KING'S

ROYAL GERMETUER.

It is the best preventive, the best restorative, the most unfailing cure—pleasant to take as lemonade and harmless, unique, matchless, perfect, "the ultima thule of medicines." Try it now. For sale by druggists.

I have used Dr. King's Royal Germetuer for indigestion, and cheerfully say that it afforded me more relief than any other remedy I ever tried. I also used it in my own family in a case of malarial fever with best results. I take pleasure in recommending it.

Notes from Caldwell County.

Dear Recorder:—I am so glad the report that Brother E. F. Jones, late of Watauga county and pastor elect of Gastonia Baptist church, was shot in Dixon, Cal., is false. I have not been able to learn how the rumor originated, and I am surprised that so many papers published the report. The Watauga Democrat was the first paper to publish the rumor, but corrected it in the same paper, and yet the papers go on publishing it as a fact. Bro. Jones can enjoy a privilege that few men ever have—that of reading his own obituary. I am glad so many good things have been said of him, for he is truly a good man and one of the best gospel preachers I have ever heard.

Bro. L. P. Gwaltney spent a few days with us in a meeting at Lower Creek, beginning on the fifth Sunday in July. The people were much pleased with his preaching, and regretted he had to leave so soon. The congregations were good, and considerable interest was manifested on the part of the unsaved, but only two, so far as we know, professed faith in Christ. One united with the church by letter, and three were received for baptism. These I baptized last Sunday morning. Some repairs have been made on the house of worship at this place, and others are needed and are in contemplation.

The propriety of consolidating the Caldwell and Catawba River Associations was discussed at the last session of our Union Meeting, and the query was laid on the table. Some of us thought it might be best to consolidate, but others thought not. The discussion clearly developed the fact that the Caldwell Association was not ready for consolidation. The Catawba River brethren would be glad to have the union effected, but they have not, at any time, pressed the matter. They have done nothing more than to extend a cordial invitation to us to unite with them.

Bro. Thomas Blalock of Mitchell county, one of the missionaries who purposes going to China in November with Bro. D. W. Herring, is visiting the churches in this Association. I heard him last night at Lower Creek. He is very conservative, having no thrusts to make at the Foreign Mission Board or any one else. He preaches the gospel and then states fully the proposed independent plan of Foreign Mission[illegible] and invites all to co operate with t[illegible], if they see it to be more Scriptura[illegible] the Board method; if not, he urges all to continue to work with the Boards. Bro. Herring, last spring, visited a number of the churches in this Association, preaching and lecturing to large crowds, and made a profound impression for his views wherever he went. Our people here are conservative, and will take no step rashly. They are anxiously waiting the coming of the Association, hoping to hear both sides of this question discussed in the spirit of fairness and brotherly love.

Our beloved Brother Geo. W. Greene has in last week's Lenoir Topic an able article in defense of our present plan of Foreign Mission work. I hope no strife will be engendered in the great Baptist family of North Carolina over this or any other matter; and I further hope we will all be more careful how we speak and what we write. Let us not criticise every thing and every body. None of us are perfect. Discussion is a good thing, but let it not be done with bitterness, but in a spirit of fairness and brotherly love. No brother ought to fly into the papers simply for notoriety. Let us all remember that we are brethren, and one is our Master, even Christ.

I will conclude with a cordial invitation to all who can, to visit us at the next session of the Caldwell Association, to be held at Granite Falls, eight miles north of Hickory on the Chester and Lenoir Railroad, beginning on Thursday before the second Sunday in September. We hope, with the blessing of God, to have a large, enthusiastic and profitable meeting. I. W. THOMAS.

Hibriten, Aug. 15, 1893.

My Answer to the "Watchman's" Question, "What is Civilization Anyway."

Webster says, first, "The act of civilizing or the state of being civillized; refinement; culture."

Now if this meaning is to hold true, and we as English speaking people are to understand, accept, and practice it, then the question is, in what light shall we see it accomplished? Upon this point there will doubtless arise many views and various opinions. But I aim to answer the question in a few words: True civilization is that noble accomplishment which the sovereign grace of God bestows, and this grace, and it only, has power to confer the degree of civilization. It is not a mere professing to be a Christian, not the claiming to be a subject of grace, that makes a person a civilized one. I have seen many who claimed great things, and who had done much in the way of good acts, turn away from them all and act the part of a barbarian and savage. It is not altogether literary attainments, nor the accumulation of wealth, nor an advanced knowledge in the fine arts, nor the blessing of learning how to appear pleasant, social, and even exceedingly agreeable in society, that is to be taken for civilization. The heathen, and even the savage, have in all these to a greater or less degree possessed these. But the true aim, and the great end which grace aims, is civilization. The true Christian, the person saved by the grace of God, is one who has been set free from all worldly and ungodly lust, and lives soberly, righteously and temperately in this world, hence he learns to renounce all the hidden things of dishonesty, and walks in the light of God, such a character is the noblest creature of God—being born again, not of corruptible things, as silver and gold, but of the precious blood of Christ which liveth and abideth forever. This is the office of the gospel of our dear Saviour, to civilize all nations, and to make one grand nation of all the nations that dwell upon the earth, and when the gospel shall have accomplished its great work upon earth, then there will remain nothing more of a higher type of civilization for men of scientific learning to do but to enter in and enjoy the fruits of their toil.

Can Deacons Petition for License?

Dear Bro. Bailey:—A few days ago I was talking with a deacon of a prominent church in our Association about the whisky traffic, and how humiliating it was for Christians, who were trying to live after the example of our Lord and Master, to be guilty of encouraging the traffic, and then he asked me if it was wrong to drink in bar-rooms? I told him yes. I also told him the man who went in bar rooms had no right to sit in conference and expel a man for drunkenness. Then he told me that he had been going in to the bars drinking whenever he wanted a drink. He further told me that he signed the petition for a bar-keeper to get license to sell whiskey.

Now what I want to ask is, Has that man any right to vote to expel any man for selling whiskey? Has he any right to vote to pass a resolution in his church to forbid any man selling apples to distillers? I think every man who reads this will say no. All the churches in my Association have passed rules (which I think good ones) not to keep in their fellowship men who distil or manufacture or sell spirituous liquors as a beverage; and yet there is a deacon, who should be a shining light for God, has stooped so low as to sign a petition to the county commissioners to grant license to a traffic which he condemns.

I hope his eyes will fall on this, and that he will go to his church and acknowledge his guilt. If there is a Baptist in North Carolina who is guilty of begging for license for men to sell the vile stuff, let him go to his church and ask his brethren to drop his name, and let it remain dropped until he is converted, for I fear that he has never known God in the pardon of his sins.

Work at Berry's Grove.

Rev. G. T. Watkins, pastor of Berry's Grove church, closed a most excellent meeting at that place on the 11th inst. It lasted seven days. During that time the church was much revived. Twenty-one professed faith in Christ, six or eight backsliders were reclaimed, and nine united with the church. Others will follow. Failing to get any aid, Mr. Watkins did all the preaching. Large congregations attended every day, his sermons being listened to and enjoyed by all denominations, for they are declaiming him to be the best preacher in that section of country.

The work at Berry's Grove is steadily increasing, and we hope to see in the near future a body of Christians there whose influence for good may be seen and felt throughout that community. One thing very striking to a visitor is the devotion of the entire congregation to the minister.

Mr. Watkins made a sacrifice when he took charge of that church, and the Lord is greatly blessing his labors, and may he continue to do so, and see fit to let him remain with these people much longer, for we believe him to be the embodiment of that which is great, good and true.

A FRIEND.

The Book Will Tell.

A real Christian will be a true lover of the Bible. There is scarcely a better test. If the novel or the newspaper take the place of the Bible on his table or in his mind, then it is clear that the world has taken the place of God in his heart. If a man's Bible be clean and bright, and unsullied by use, undefiled by contact with daily life, his soul is not. There is no better spiritual barometer to test the true condition of the soul's atmosphere. He to whom the Bible seems wearisome, monotonous, uninteresting, has good cause for alarm. The neglect of it springs from coldness of affection towards its author, and dislike of his rebukes. Whoever wants to grow in grace simply must study the Bible. It is the way to gain stability of doctrine, so as not to be carried about with every wind of opinion. It is the way to commune with the noblest spirits that ever lived and be stimulated by their example. It is the way to become familiar with the loftiest precepts, receive the truest counsels, and come under the power of the holiest motives. Only he who studies the word can be strong.—Christian Standard.

Difficulties in Christian Experience.

Young Christians are apt to find difficulties to their progress in the Christian life arising from their own personal experience. There is apt to be a decline in the intensity of the feelings which usually accompany the acceptance of the Saviour. In a little while the old thoughts and desires come back again to trouble the heart. Doubts as to the reality of the great change creep into the mind. There is no longer the tender sympathy from others which was one of the sweetest things connected with coming to Christ. These things are apt to discourage the young disciple, and to make him wonder whether he is really a Christian.

But we should remember that it would be unnatural for the vivid feelings which accompany conversion to remain. We should remember, too, that our standing with God does not depend upon our feelings, but upon his unchangeable love. Nor should the consciousness of inner struggle affect us. All of the greatest saints in the history of the world, from Paul to our own time, have assured us that the flesh lusts against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh. Doubts are of the devil, who thus seeks to regain his lost throne. It is better for us to learn by lonely struggles the value of the experience into which we have come. Let us not then be discouraged, but press bravely on toward the goal.—Our Young People.

The New Bread

As endorsed and recommended by the New-York Health Authorities.

Royal Unfermented Bread is peptic, palatable, most healthful, and may be eaten warm and fresh without discomfort even by those of delicate digestion, which is not true of bread made in any other way.

To make One Loaf of Royal Unfermented Bread:

1 quart flour, 1 teaspoonful salt, half a teaspoonful sugar, 2 heaping teaspoonfuls Royal Baking Powder,* cold boiled potato about the size of large hen's egg, and water. Sift together thoroughly flour, salt, sugar, and baking powder; rub in the potato; add sufficient water to mix smoothly and rapidly into a stiff batter, about as soft as for pound-cake; about a pint of water to a quart of flour will be required—more or less, according to the brand and quality of the flour used. Do not make a stiff dough, like yeast bread. Pour the batter into a greased pan, 4½ by 8 inches, and 4 inches deep, filling about half full. The loaf will rise to fill the pan when baked. Bake in very hot oven 45 minutes, placing paper over first 15 minutes' baking, to prevent crusting too soon on top. Bake immediately after mixing. Do not mix with milk.

 Perfect success can be had only with the Royal Baking Powder, because it is the only powder in which the ingredients are prepared so as to give that continuous action necessary to raise the larger bread loaf.*

The best baking powder made is, as shown by analysis, the "Royal." Its leavening strength has been found superior to other baking powders, and, as far as I know, it is the only powder which will raise large bread perfectly.

Biographical Sketch of Elder Benjamin Lanier.

This aged servant of God passed to his reward August 5th, 1893. His death was not wholly unexpected; for many of us knew that he was only lingering here waiting for the summons to come up higher: yet those who knew and loved him will feel most keenly their bereavement. He was born July 26th, 1807, and was therefore eighty-six years and nine days old.

He was married in his twenty-first year to Miss Anna Stuart. Ten children were born to them, six of whom survive them. His beloved wife preceded him to the better land in November, 1880.

Bro. Lanier was converted in March, 1831. Immediately thereafter he felt "Woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel," and the church at Tom's Creek—his mother church—licensed him to preach in November of the same year. He was a minister nearly sixty-two years—an ordained minister about sixty years. His best pastorate was with Pierce's Chapel church (now Jackson's Creek) and concluded with December, 1879. He was actively engaged in preaching up to his forced retirement, on account of rheumatism. He was called to the pastorate of Tom's Creek church from what we can glean from the old records about 1833. From this on he was pastor till 1861—making thirty-one consecutive years. He served two years again in 1875–6.

His opportunity for education was meagre indeed; six months would probably include the whole time spent in school.

He was not regarded as a big preacher but averaged well with the preachers of his day. Our churches were always glad to secure him as their pastor. As a "funeral preacher," few were more popular than he. Many times he has been called upon by people of other denominations, in preference to their own pastors, to preach the funeral sermon of their dead.

Perhaps few men have done so much preaching and received so little pay. He would work on his farm till Friday. Saturday morning he would start on horseback to his appointment. He would return on Sunday evening ready for work. His preparation was made by reading his Bible at night by a pine-knot light and then study between the plow handles. In all this struggle to preach Jesus, his companion was at home helping to care for the dear ones there.

While he was not regarded as a "revival preacher," yet I have seen vast multitudes swayed and melted to tears under the power and pathos of the gospel as he preached it. Many who will read this will at once recall many of the texts which he used. He was Moderator of the Liberty Association for seventeen years. His brethren always delighted to honor him whenever they could.

He preached extensively in Davidson, Randolph, Montgomery and Richmond; besides traveling much in other sections.

It was under an earnest, faithful sermon by Bro. Lanier, that the writer of this sketch was made to realize his last condition and come to Christ for salvation. His memory will ever be a precious boon. He was a ripe Christian. His way was bright and clear.

His remains were followed by a large concourse of friends and relatives on the first Sunday in August (August 6) and laid to rest. Often, during his his confinement, he spoke of death and longed to be at home. Let us rejoice that he is with his Saviour whom he loved so much.

Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep
From which none ever wake to weep.

Taking Napoleon to St. Helena.

The Century has just come in possession of one of the most unique and important historical documents of the age. It is the record of the daily life of Napoleon Bonaparte on board the English ship which bore him into captivity at St. Helena, as contained in the hitherto unpublished journal of the secretary of the admiral in charge. The reports of many conversations held by the admiral with the deposed Emperor regarding his important campaigns are given with great fullness, and there is much about the bearing and the personal habits of Bonaparte during the voyage. The Memoirs of Las Cases containing the story of the Emperor's deportation as told by a Frenchman and a follower; this diary is an English gentleman's view of the same memorable journey, and of the impressions made by daily contact with the man who had had all Europe at his feet.

The diary will be published in early numbers of The Century.

What Gov. Tryon Wrote.

Bro. Bailey:—We have noticed of late several articles in the News and Observer-Chronicle about the persecution of the Baptists in North Carolina before the Revolution. We simply wish to quote from a letter written by Gov. Tryon in 1769 to "The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in America" as follows:

"The Presbyterians and Quakers are the only tolerated Sectaries under any order or regulation; every other are enemies to society and a scandal to common sense."

Island Creek Church.

Island Creek church of the Flat River Association has recently had a good meeting. Rev. J. S. Hardaway of Oxford aided the pastor, greatly pleasing and edifying the people by his faithful services. There have been sixteen additions to the church—fourteen by baptism, three by letter, and one restored.

The church has again shown her appreciation of her pastor by presenting him with a fine lot of flour, for which the pastor desires sincere thanks to the dear people of the church.

Dedication.

Mr. Editor:—The handsome new buildings of South West Virginia Institute will be dedicated for the purpose of Christian education at Bristol, Va. and Tenn., on Sept. 14th, 1893—the opening day of the session.

Distinguished speakers have been invited, among them Gov. Northern of Georgia, Dr. Ellis of Baltimore, and Dr. Hatcher of Virginia and others; and it is expected that a large number of Baptists will be present.

Special rates have been made with the hotels, and we will endeavor to secure reductions on all railroads centering here. Let all of our Baptist people come and see what is said to be the largest Baptist school in the South.

The Realization of Sin.

I can see indications of sin in my soul; but to be conscious of my sin; to understand how wicked I am; so to feel my own wickedness that I can turn away from it—many a man will bear testimony with me that to do this is no easy thing. You take a paper and make a catalogue of your sins. Then you rise up and your conscience tells you that you are not so troubled with your sins as you ought to be. You do not hate them with all of your soul. Again and again you go through the reiteration of this after cataloguing your sins. Where is the difficulty? It seems to me just here; I shall never know how sinful I am by simply thinking over the sins I have done. I can come to know that only by coming into some atmosphere where I may understand what God intended me to be. Only so can I confront my sinfulness as I want to and escape from it into the glory of the resurrection. Cataloguing sins may help us to this. Unless it does I think more and more that it has very little use and purpose. In itself the mere reckoning of wicked things done can never make a soul hate its wickedness.

If we think of sin as something which is going to receive vengeance by and by, it may make us tremble and shudder to think how the lash is to be laid on the soul; but that is not real repentance. Real repentance is only the soul's hatred for the absolute condition of wickedness because the soul desires and loves and longs for the condition of holiness.—Phillips Brooks.

Defences Against Temptation.

There are many ways in which we may assist others with their temptations. A big-hearted man will often be doing so without being aware of it. His very presence, his attractive manhood, his massive character, act as an encouragement to younger men to hold them up. I do not know anything to be so much coveted as in old age to have men coming to say, Your example, your presence, your sympathy, were like a protecting arm put round my stumbling youth, and helped me over the perilous years.

Many are helping the young against their temptations by providing them with means of spending their leisure innocently and profitably. Our leisure time is the problem. Whilst we are at work, there is not so much fear of us; but it is the hours of leisure—the hours between work and sleep—that temptation find men and they are lost; and therefore I say there is no more Christian work than providing men with opportunities of spending leisure profitably.

But by far the best way to help men with their temptations is to bring them to Christ. It may be of some service to a man if, in the time of trial, I put round him the sympathetic arm of a brother; but it is infinitely better if I can get him to allow Christ to put round him his strong arm. This is the effectual defence; and no other can be really depended upon.—Rev. Dr. James Stalker, in "Men and Morals."

Talk to Your Horse.

When a horse becomes frightened, demoralized or otherwise rattled about something he encounters, but does not understand, a good way to quiet him down is simply to talk to him in a quiet tone of voice. If a horse gets frightened at something he sees in the road, stop him at once and give him a formal introduction to it, telling him in the meantime how very foolish he is to let such a little thing disturb him. Nothing can be worse than to whip a horse when he is frightened. He doesn't get frightened because he wants to. It is only because he has seen or heard something that he is not familiar with. After he once gets thoroughly acquainted with the object of his uneasiness it will never frighten him again.—Selected.

A Card from Col. Harrell.

RALEIGH, N. C., August 24.

The violence and persistence of the attacks made on me, by certain parties in the State, is my excuse for making this plain statement of facts, which I respectfully ask the press to copy.

There were two grounds of complaint in regard to my management of the Teachers' World's Fair trip.

1. Some members of the party failed to secure sleeping car and other accommodations on the route. This was due to the fact that a large number of persons joined the party on the day of departure, without previous notice, thus swelling its number beyond my power to provide necessary accommodations. It was perhaps an error to permit them to join without notice, and I frankly confess it.

2. I had received money in advance to pay bills in Chicago for members of the party, but, on reaching Chicago, I was unable to pay these bills, because I had deposited the funds in banks in Raleigh and Newbern, to be drawn by certified checks while in Chicago as needed. To my surprise, neither of my checks or those of others were accepted in Chicago, owing to the financial stringency, and I then asked the parties who had paid me to advance money for their bills until I could get currency from Raleigh in the shortest possible time, which they did. As fast as possible, I have refunded all these advances, and every member of the party is repaid, except a few persons whom I have not yet heard from. It has required time to ascertain the amounts due each one, and I have been very busy with a great variety of work connected with my official duties and my ordinary affairs.

This statement will, I hope, explain the matter to people who are willing to do justice. Like all men who serve the public, I have some enemies and rivals who have gladly seized this opportunity to distort my conduct, and slander my character. They are deriving evident satisfaction from their own malicious performance, and I assure them they are welcome to enjoy their dirty occupation.

E. G. HARRELL.

New Church Constituted.

Bro. Bailey:—On the 13th of August, 1893, the writer was met by Elder C. [redacted]ebb of Randleman, N. C., at Welch's [redacted] mission station in Randolph county, [redacted] the midway between Ashboro and Troy, N. C., where we held a meeting of five days. Bro. Webb did most of the preaching, and did it very acceptably. It was old-fashioned gospel—plain, forcible and true, and it captured the hearts of all the good people present, and did untold good for the Baptists in that section. There were only two confessions of faith during the meeting. It continued to grow in interest, and on Thursday evening at eight we met, when Bro. Webb occupied the pulpit and preached from Matt. 16: 18, a very able sermon on the New Testament church and its ordinances and privileges. After which a small number presented letters from Eldorado Baptist church, and others, which were read by Elder G. M. Webb. Then the Baptist church covenant was read; also articles of faith, &c. The holders of said letters consenting to the same, they were given the right of fellowship and pronounced a New Testament church—a Baptist church.

This little band has been struggling here for the Lord's cause for about eighteen months. They have a very good house, 25x48, closed in and seated, pulpit, &c. The present number of members is thirteen, and one approved for baptism. Several more will join soon. To God be all the glory.

JNO. A. SUMMEY.

P. S. From this point I went to Liberty church, Davidson county, to assist my beloved pastor, Elder J. M. Hilliard. I reached here Monday at 10 a. m. The meeting continued until Sunday, the 20th. It was one of the best meetings the church has ever enjoyed. The pastor baptized sixteen on Sunday at 10 o'clock in Uwharrie. There are others to follow. The church was greatly revived. The pastor, Bro. Hilliard, is much beloved by the church, and also by outsiders. He is doing a good work here. To God be all the glory.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT OF THE LATTER MEETING.

I wish to give a few items about my work at Liberty church, Davidson county. I took charge of this church in January, 1893. I found a large membership, but not very active in the Master's work. We have been building up a little since I first went among them, and on Saturday before the second Sunday in August we commenced a meeting with the church, which lasted nine days. There were some twenty or more conversions during the meeting, and on the third Sunday we baptized sixteen noble young men and women, and we hope to baptize others soon. I had baptized two young sisters at our meeting in June; so we have baptized eighteen in, all and restored one.

Rev. J. A. Summey was with me in the meeting and did some pure, gospel preaching, and is a brother much beloved among his own people.

We believe the brethren and sisters of old Liberty church are going to come to the front in the Master's work and show the world their faith by their works.

Rocky Springs Church.

Rev. J. J. L. Sherwood, assisted by Rev. Mr. Patton of Bristol, Tenn., has been engaged in a two weeks' meeting at the Rocky Springs Baptist church, which closed Sunday night. Eight persons made a profession of faith. Six were baptized into the fellowship of the church: probably more will unite hereafter with the church.

The meeting was much enjoyed and I hope may prove a blessing to the church in several ways.

Speaker of the house Crisp has announced the new committees. Sayers replaces Holman as chairman of the Appropriations; Wilson replaces Springer on the Ways and Means, and Bland retains his chairmanship of the Finance.

The French elections were held on Sunday the 20th. All the Cabinet ministers were re elected, a victory for the Republicans which keeps President Carnot in office six more years. The elections was more orderly, and the vote was smaller than usual.

In Washington on Monday, the 28th, the House of Representatives voted for the Wilson bill providing for the repeal of the Sherman act. The vote stood 239 ayes, 109 noes. Mr. Bland's amendment for the free coinage of silver was defeated by a vote of 174 yeas and 273 nays—a larger majority for this defeat than was expected. The House also voted against any change of the present ratio of 16 to 1. The silver men in the House became disheartened, and a spirit of listnessness spread throughout the hall. The bill now goes to the Senate.

The following from the Watchman sums up the work of August for the past few days: Both branches of Congress have been occupied chiefly with hearing speeches of more or less brilliancy. Most of the speeches are addressed to the galleries and to the columns of the Congressional Record, and it is doubtful if a single vote will be changed by the most brilliant effort. The important in the Senate has been the action of the committee on finance in reporting a bill for the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman Act, accompanying it by a declaration in favor of bimetalism. The bill was drawn by Senator Voorhees. The minority report favored free coinage at the ratio of 20 to 1. The Senate has also found time to vote several large appropriation bills. The attention of the House has been taken up in watching the ebb and flow of oratory on the silver question.

The unemployed workmen of New York and Chicago are holding meetings daily, and in several instances serious rioting has taken place.

DIED.

McLEMORE—Died in Moore county, May 1st, 1893, J. R. McLemore, in the eighty-seventh year of his age. He had been a member of the Baptist church forty years, and had been many years a deacon. He raised a family of eight children, six of whom are members of the Baptist church. He was a successful farmer, having accumulated by energy and industry a good property unencumbered to his children. He was ever ready to assist in all benevolent objects of the church, and we doubt not he has ere this received the plaudit, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

A FRIEND.

RANES—Brother Isaiah Ranes, a beloved member of Forestville Baptist church, died June 29, 1893, being considerably past eighty years of age. He joined the church late in life, but has left behind him a character and name through which, though dead, he speaks. The Lord comfort the sorrowing ones, and especially the devoted daughter who so faithfully nursed and served him.

R.

KIVETT—Died, in Lillington, N. C., July 28th, 1893, Addie, daughter of A. J. and E. A. Kivett, in the seventeenth year of her age. She was a member of Lillington Baptist church, and a true Christian. To know her was to love her. She leaves a mother, two sisters, four brothers, and a host of friends to mourn their loss. May the Lord comfort them.

M. B. B.

ALBRITTON—At Mt. Olive, N. C., Aug. 20th, 1893, of heart failure, Matthew Albritton died, in the eighty-first year of his age, in the full assurance of Christian faith and the blissful hope of glory and immortality. How appropriate was the time of his departure—at the close of a long Christian life, and at the close of a lovely Sabbath day! Although I am nearly fifty-eight years old, I cannot recall the time that my revered father was not a Christian. It was also meet that Rev. C. J. Nelson, his life-long friend, who had known him over sixty years, through the first half of which the two had been intimately connected in business relations, should conduct the burial service. After appropriate Scripture reading and some well-timed and impressive remarks by Bro. Nelson, the body was laid away to await the resurrection.

JNO. T. ALBRITTON.

HORNE—Bro. M. T. Horne, a faithful and valuable member of Sharon Baptist church, departed this life at his residence in Chinquepin, Duplin county, August 13th, 1893, in the forty-third year of his age. Probably no citizen in this county would be missed more than Bro. Horne will be, for he was a benefactor to many of his less favored countrymen.

He was among the best of neighbors—kind and obliging—never turning a deaf ear to the cries of suffering humanity. As a citizen, he was faithful and true, decided and firm in his convictions of right, though he did not censure those who differed from him. By industry, perseverance and economy, he had acquired a good share of this world's goods—but his earthly possessions did not cause him to feel that he was better than his poor brethren. Religion with him was principle—actuating his entire life—an Israelite indeed, in whom there was no guile. It is needless to say that he was liberal in giving to the cause of truth. The new house of worship at Chinquepin stands as a monument to that fact, for he was the prime mover and the most liberal contributor in its erection.

He leaves a wife, four children, several brothers and an aged mother to lament their loss. May the God of all grace comfort and bless the bereaved in this their hour of trouble, and may they be enabled to see in the death of their dear one the hand of him who does all things well.

Heaven.

[A TRUE INCIDENT.]

The lesson hour was nearly past
When I asked of my scholars seven,
"Now tell me, each one, please, in turn,
What sort of a place is heaven."

"Oh, meadows, flowers and lovely trees!"
Cried poor little North Street Kitty;
While Dorothy, fresh from country lanes,
Was sure 'twas "a great big city."

Beasy, it seemed, had never thought
Of the home beyond the river:
She simply took each perfect gift,
And trusted the loving Giver.

Then up spoke Edith, tall and fair—
Her voice was clear and ringing,
And led in the Easter anthem choir—
"In heaven they're always singing!"

To Esther, clad in richest furs,
'Twas a place for "outdoor playing;"
But Bridget drew her thin shawl close,
For "warmth and food" she was praying.

The desk-bell rang. But one child left,
My sober, thoughtful Florry:
"Why, heaven just seems to me a place—
A place—where you're never sorry!"
—By Willis Boyd Allen, in Sunday-school Times.

Undoing a Wrong.

Bruce Harvey was a young man of more than ordinary intelligence, and when he decided to prepare himself for his life-work by seeking a thorough education, everybody said he would be sure to make his mark in the world. He was come of honest, God-fearing people, and it was his parents' one ambition to hear him preach the gospel. Although he had not fully decided what profession he would enter when he started to college, he was aware of the wishes of his father and mother, and he had it in his heart to serve his Master in the way he knew would best gratify them. He took a high position in his class, and soon won many friends among the students. One of the juniors, who had the reputation of being somewhat skeptical, worked his way into the new boy's good graces, and before the year closed their friendship was regarded by the students as something akin to that which once existed between David and Jonathan.

Carl Hollis was considered the leading student in the institution, but his culture was more of the brain than the heart, and he was wily enough not to shock Bruce's sensitive nature by forcing his objectionable beliefs upon him too suddenly. At first it was disapproval of some portion of the sermon preached weekly in the chapel; then it was a sharp criticism of some passage of the Bible, or a sneer at the inconsistent example set by those professing to be followers of Christ. Afterward the poison was administered through the agency of skeptical books, and all the while poor Bruce, unconscious of the subtle influence at work, was being drawn deeper and deeper into the treacherous snare that had been set for him. Carl was an acknowledged leader, and in young Harvey he found a very willing follower. Step by step he drifted away from the God of his fathers, until at the close of his college course, he graduated from the institution, a more hardened infidel than his teacher ever professed to be.

After Carl received his degree, he began the study of law in the office of a celebrated barrister in a Western city. The second winter of his stay there the place was visited by a wonderful revival, and among others who were brought to Christ, the name of Carl Hollis was written. He at once resolved to consecrate himself, body and soul, to the Master's use, and shortly afterward gave up the profession of his choice, and entered a divinity school for the purpose of preparing himself for the ministry. He wrote to Bruce Harvey, telling of his new-found hope, and begging him to forsake the path into which he had led him. A mocking answer came back, and thus the correspondence ended.

Two more years passed away swiftly, and then, one bright October day, Bruce was brought home to his mother—to die. He had been injured in a railroad disaster, and the doctors agreed that his death was only a matter of a few days at most. Then it was that in her agony the heartbroken mother dispatched to young Hollis, to come and undo the wrong he had done her boy. He came at once, but neither his prayers nor his tears were of any avail.

"Give me back my faith which you destroyed," cried Bruce, the death-damp upon his face. "You led me away from the God I was trying to serve! You taught me to despise the religion in which I had been raised, and now, with death knocking at the door, you come to me and entreat me to return to my first love! Bah! do you suppose that after all I have said and done against my mother's God, I will come cringing back like a cur, at the last moment? You taught me how to live by your false creed, now show me how to die without the Christian's hope, the Christian's faith."

In vain did the young minister point out the plain path of salvation; in vain did he plead and pray with his dying friend to give up all and cling to Jesus. In utter helplessness he was compelled to sit by the bedside of the youth he had led astray, and listen to his despairing cries. With bitter self-upbraidings, he watched the death shadow settle down upon the face that had once been so full of hope and gladness; and then without a word or prayer, without even a sign of repentance—with only a gasp, and a shudder—the eyelids quivered, and closed, and the [illegible] spirit went back to the God [illegible]

[illegible] he looked upon that dear [illegible] still in death, did Carl Hollis [illegible] a terrible thing it was to lead [illegible] God. He would have given worlds had he possessed them, to have been able to undo the wrong he had done.

"Oh, God! must I be held responsible for deeds that I can never undo?" he cried, remorsefully, as he listened to the reproachful words that fell like burning coals from the lips of the heart-broken mother. "If I only could live over the past again!"—Belle V. Chisholm, in Our Young People.

"Only a Printer."

"He is only a printer." Such was the sneering remark of a leader of aristocracy—the codfish quality. Who was the Earl of Stanhope? He was only a printer. What was Prince Edward William and Prince Napoleon? Proud to call themselves printers, says the Century. The present Czar of Russia, the Crown Prince of Russia, and the Duke of Battenburg are printers, and the Emperor of China works at private printing almost every day. Wm. Caxton, the father of English literature, was a practical printer. What were G. P. Morris, N. P. Willis, Jame Gale, Charles Richardson, James Parker, Horace Greely, Charles Dickens, James Buchanan, Simon Cameron and Schuyler Colfax? Printers all, and practical ones. Mark Twain, Amos Cummings, Bret Harte and Opie Reid are plain, practical printers, as were Artemus Ward, Petroleum V. Nasby and Sut Lovinggood. Senator Plumb was a printer, and so is James S. Hogg of Texas, and the leader of science and philosophy in his day, Benjamin Franklin, made it his boast that he was a printer. In fact, thousands of the most brilliant minds in the country are to be found toiling in the publishing houses of our cities and towns. It is not every one that can be a printer—brains are absolutely necessary.

Had Philosophy on her Side

"Spell toes," said the mother, who was teaching her little daughter, seven years old, to spell.

"T o z-e," answered the little child.

"No, dear, that's not right. T o e s spells toes."

"But it sounds like t o z e."

"I know it; but you cannot go by the sound."

Then, in order to enforce this proposition, the mother called on her daughter to spell froze.

"F r o e s," said the child.

"No, you're wrong again. This time we do use z and spell the word f r o z e."

"Huh!" grunted the child.

"Now spell rose," said the mother.

The child hesitated. Finally she said: "I don't know whether to say r o z e or r o e s, and really I don't know that either would be right."

"Spell it r o s e," said the mother, "though there is another word pronounced just like it that's spelled r-o e s. That word is the name of the spawn of fishes."

The poor little child looked very miserable.

"Just one more word," said the mother. "Tell me how you spell blows."

"Well," said the child, who had had quite enough nonsense, as she viewed it, from her mother, and had suddenly made up her mind to pay back in kind, "I spell it three ways. I spell it b l o s-e for breakfast, b l o e-s for dinner, and b l-o z e for supper.

"I spell it b l-o-w-s all the time," said the mother.

The child said nothing for a minute or two. Then, looking up, she solemnly remarked:

"I think, mamma, that the English language was made for persons very, very well educated."—Kind Words.

Meat Eating and Bad Temper.

"In no country," declares Mr. Ernest Hart, in the London Hospital, "is home rendered so unhappy and life made so miserable by the ill-temper of those who are obliged to live together as in England. If we compare domestic life and manners in England with those of other countries where meat does not form such an internal article of diet, a notable improvement will be remarked. In less meat eating France unbanity is the rule of the home; in fish and rice-eating Japan harsh words are unknown, and an exquisite politeness to one another prevails even among the children who play together in the streets. In Japan I never heard rude, angry words spoken by any but Englishmen.

"I am strongly of the opinion that the ill-temper of the English is caused in a great measure by a too-abundant meat dietary combined with a sedentary life. The half-oxydized products of albumen circulating in the blood produce both mental and moral disturbances. Brain workers should live sparingly, if they would work well, and live long. Their force is required for mental exertion, and should not be expended on the task of digestion, for 'they should remember that the digestion of heavy meals involves a great expenditure of nerve force.' The healthful thing to do is to lead an active and unselfish life on a moderate diet, sufficient to maintain strength and not increase weight."

A Prominent Lady Arrested much attention at a Washington ball by her remarkable appearance of health. The glow of health and the charm of beauty need not depart from so many women, when a certain remedy exists in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for their functional and organic diseases. It properly cures nausea, indigestion, bloating, weak back, nervous prostration, debility and sleeplessness. Strength is renewed, energy returns, and beauty again blooms. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless. Druggists have it.

What Our Women Need.

A good rule to live by in these days when there is such a mental strain upon women, as well as upon men, is to go out in the evening as often as you stay at home, and stay at home as often as you go out. We want to alternate things a little in this world. Variety is not only the spice, but the medicine and tonic of life. A change is good for us all. Live in a rut and you will think in a rut. Going out evenings does not necessarily imply the expenditure of money if the domestic purse will not bear it. We need not go to the theatre, to a concert, to a lecture each time that we venture out. The best society in this world is that of our friends—those whom we know to be our friends, to be sympathetic with our beliefs, to be in touch with our surroundings. An evening at the house of friends, or they at our house, is relaxation and diversion from the day's thoughts. Unfortunately in our larger cities we know so little of this neighborly feeling, so little of that community intercourse that makes life in smaller places so much the better worth the living. In the greater cities it is the exception, rather than the rule, that we know those who live next door to us. The people living in the same house with us are often as far removed from us as if they lived in Honolulu. But friends we all have, some more, some less, and the very fact of seeing other faces takes us out of ourselves, lifts us into new spheres of thought, gives us new ideas, and takes us away from what we have to face on the morrow.—Edward W. Bok in, Ladies' Home Journal.

IT SHARPENS the appetite, improves digestion, and restores health and vigor; all the organs of the body are roused to healthy action by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. More than all, the liver—and that's the key to the whole system. You have pure blood or poisonous blood, just as your liver chooses. The blood controls the health, the liver controls the blood, the "Discovery" controls the liver.

You can escape just about half the ills that flesh is heir to, by being ready for them. Brace the system up with this medicine, which prevents as well as cures. For all diseases caused by a disordered liver or impure blood—dyspepsia, biliousness, the most stubborn skin, scalp and scrofulous affections, the "Discovery" is the only remedy so certain and effective that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back.

SOMETIME since it was announced that a company of Waldenses had emigrated from Southern Europe to Burke county, in this State. While our contemporaries have generally remarked upon this movement as significantly complimentary to our State, we have seen but little written concerning the past history of these people, or their peculiar religious beliefs and practices. This is not due to a lack of history on the subject, for we find that they have a history that is at once voluminous, worthy and interesting. The Waldenses made their first appearance as a sect of reformers in 1160, and were most numerous in the Swiss canton of Vaud. Their leader was one Peter Valdo, a rich merchant, who being zealous for the advancement of true piety and Christian knowledge had employed a priest to translate the gospels from Latin into French, in order that he might read and interpret them as they were. At once he perceived that the religion which was then taught by the Roman church differed in many most essential points from that which Christ and the apostles had inculcated. Struck with the glaring contradiction between the doctrines of the pontiffs and the truths of the gospels, he abandoned his vocation, distributed his wealth among the poor, and became a public teacher, instructing his people in the true doctrines and precepts of Christianity as he understood them. He was undoubtedly sincere in all his efforts, and throughout the most vigorous opposition and inhuman cruelty of the Catholics maintained with his followers a purity and simplicity of religion, a spotless innocence of life, a noble contempt of riches and honors, that not only overcame the efforts of Rome, but increased the number of his followers daily. To-day their life is much the same as it was in the days of Peter Valdo. They despise the forms of ecclesiastical government as practiced by Rome. They hold that all Christians have equal power as ambassadors of God, and that preachers should procure a subsistence by the work of their hands. Their rules of life are founded on the sermon on the mount, and it is said that many of them live strictly according to these rules. Anciently they denied the obligation of infant baptism, but at the present day they are doubtful on that point, some rejecting water baptism entirely. However that may be, they compose a sect that is worthy of our State, and which should be welcomed for the noble history that they have maintained through hundreds of years of the cruelest persecution.

LAST MAY the President instructed the Secretary of Treasury to break the gold reserve of $100,000,000 to pay the obligations of the government. It was the first time such a course had been pursued since the institution of the fund. Immediately the newspapers began the cry that the United States was financially unsound. Firms began to fail, the people began to hold on to their earnings as they had never before. A general distrust prevailed. Our nation stood in daily expectancy of a general crash. And the papers cried that the lessening of the gold reserve was the cause of it all. To-day the fund has been restored several weeks, and has a good surplus besides, and still the situation is not improved. The cry of the newspapers, which their readers were so eager to believe, was false. The breaking of the gold reserve was a result and not a cause of the present crisis, as was shown when it was restored. The causes of the present trouble might be traced to a hundred origins, and ninety-nine of them would be wrong. Our papers should not be so quick to form an opinion, and the people should not be so eager to believe the papers; for papers are but the representatives of editors, who are mortal, and therefore imperfect and liable to error. He who ties himself to one paper, and forms his opinions according to its editorials, shows a weak mind, a lack of self reliance, and a tendency to a slavery of thought and opinion, which, if widely cultivated, would make America a nation of demagogues, and her people no better than the unwilling subjects of despots. It is a far better policy to learn the facts from reliable sources, and then form your own opinions.

THE destructive wars that have infested South America and hindered the progress of her people during the last quarter of a century, are striking testimony to the wisdom of the maxim, "In union there is strength;" and more than this, perhaps, an evidence that a republican form of government is not by any means conducive to prosperity; and still more significant is the result of their policy of almost unlimited States rights. For the past few years South America has been a continent of petty republics, blest to a large extent with an abundance of natural resources the equal of our own. Yet during these years it has been a continent of incessant internal wars, of retrogressive, rather than progressive tendencies. It is true that our "Southern sister" was not settled by a people, who equalled the English and the French in industry or perseverance; it is true that Rome has largely hindered her progress; but from the fact that otherwise her settlers have enjoyed equal advantages, and that her aborigines were by far the superiors of the North American Indians, we should expect her republics to take a higher stand among nations. Rome couldn't have prevented the formation or destroyed the future grandeur of our government if she had had the power at the beginning. Our people were possessed of that unity of interest and that hatred of despotism which insured our future. And in that lies the secret of the backwardness of the South American republics. They are all small, and individually have but little interest in one another. Their States rebel on the least provocation. They are always looking for a new leader, deposing one administration, inaugurating another—in continual revolution—in a vain effort to secure a prosperity which is destroyed by these very movements. Were South America divided into two great republics it would not be many years before Rome would be relegated to the background, rebellion would cease, and a prosperity, born of a unity of interest, smile on the land, whose people are now torn asunder by war, dismantled of their rights, and all but destroyed by their own folly.

From Rev. D. W. Herring.

Dear Recorder:—Suffer me to write some things about our "gospel mission" at this stage of its development. Dr. Harris' circular letter published in your columns is sufficient occasion. I have refrained from writing, not caring to enter into a controversy; but now that it seems to be abating, and men are coming to discuss the question on its merit, as Dr. Harris has done, I can afford to do so. I am glad Dr. Harris writes in such a way as to establish confidence in the Foreign Mission Board and its work. I am only sorry that in doing so, he reflected at all on the "gospel mission." And yet I know from my own experience that it is difficult to advocate one side without reflecting on the other. But these departments of Foreign Mission work are consistent, and we shall see it when the principles in each are understood. Let us not be alarmed about the difference of opinion as to how this great work shall be done. We shall have the desired concord not by covering up these differences, nor by trying to make believe they do not exist, but by knowing and appreciating them. True union is based on a knowledge of the facts and principles and a satisfaction therewith. Organic union without union in spirit is not real and is therefore not efficient.

Now, the principles—every one of them found in the New Testament underlying our movement—are worthy of consideration and respect; they are quite sufficient not only to take us through the opposition naturally arising when a change is to be made, but to sustain us and bring us to glorious success when the opposition has ceased. These principles may be seen in the object of the mission, is seen in our printed prospectus, viz.: (1) To preach the gospel; (2) Accepting from the churches (directly) a support; (3) While wearing the Chinese dress and living in the Chinese houses. (In this prospectus these propositions are elaborated and explained. I will be glad to furnish any one desiring it with a copy.)

Without discussing them, I may indicate the following principles found therein—that of adaptation; to the people here who support us by reduction of expense; to the Chinese, not only by reduction of salary to a simple living, but by wearing the dress and living in their houses. Paul expresses this in his saying "All things to all men." Also, the principle of building up Christ's spiritual kingdom by spiritual means, such as preaching the gospel, carrying out in its broadest sense, too, the command given in Mark 16: 15, and Matt. 28: 19, 20. And again, we honor the local church as the divinely appointed institution for giving the gospel to the world by establishing direct responsibility between it and the missionary.

Dr. Harris fears we of this mission lean to some peculiar doctrines as to the millennium advocated by Drs. Gordon and Pierson. I reckon it is because they favor the church movement, and Dr. Gordon has been known to speak favorably of our gospel mission. No, we are fully in line with the Baptists of the South. There is nothing peculiar about what we regard as the "aim of missions." It is our aim to preach the gospel to the heathen and (using his own language) "to labor to save souls, to train converts, to establish churches as centres of influence—candlesticks in the midst of darkness."

Others have got the idea that we are going to run over the country simply proclaiming the good news. It is our definite purpose to string a line of mission stations from Shantung in North China to Szchuen in West China, hoping to build up witnessing, self-supporting churches at all these stations. We do believe that giving the "gospel of the kingdom as a witness to all nations" is preparatory to the Master's coming, and that coming we wish to hasten.

Yes, we are modeling our mission after the China Inland Mission in some respects; we try to be like them in adapting ourselves to the natives and in appealing to the liberality of the people at home by our self-denial. We also humbly hope by honoring God with more direct dependence upon him to be characterized by their faith and spirituality. But that mission is interdenominational, while ours is Baptist. If we succeed—and succeed we will—we will vindicate Baptist principles as nothing has done since the days of the Apostles. Yes, they have their board of directors (equal to bishops) and their "manager"; but we cannot, and be consistent with our Baptist principles. Now, confining ourselves strictly to the work the Master said do, we may do it with the means he prescribed and through the organization he gave us. We shall not even have to depend on a great personage like Hudson Taylor. Making the Lord our Master in reality, each one of us has just as much right to claim the Lord's support in what he tells us to do as ever Hudson Taylor had. We shall each be on equal footing, as Baptist preachers should be, and one cannot assume any control over another, as every one is entirely independent of the rest, receiving his support straight from his church or churches. We shall co-operate as Baptist preachers do here of course. If Christ cannot keep a Baptist preacher straight and constrain by his love to work, nobody need try.

We and our movement have been said to be opposed to all boards, associations, conventions and organization generally. I wish we could be clearly understood here. We do not want to forsake the assembling of ourselves together in associations and conventions. I do think if we could liberate these meetings from some of the so called business by letting it devolve upon the churches and pastors, these meetings might serve a better purpose in stimulating zeal and deepening spirituality. No; we are not opposed to boards where boards are needed. We are orthodox here, too, for Baptists have them as a mere expedient: they are not held to be an essential part of our organization. To do the work our Southern Baptist Convention has in the foreign fields, a board is needful, a down-right necessity; schools are run and there must be somebody to direct the work; property is owned, churches and houses are built, and this requires a board with a general fund to disburse. And I want to say that this Foreign Mission Board of ours is the best board I ever saw. But the "gospel mission" has no general fund; each man's money is raised for him and sent to him; we have no secular work, build no houses and own no property, hence we of our mission (not speaking at all of other foreign mission work) do not need a board. And a board is not in this case, and for many reasons, an expedient. In order to keep from seeming to break ranks, and to be fully in line with the work of the Convention, and to avail ourselves of the same medium of communication, we sought at the very first to get this department incorporated in the Board's work. Another attempt was made at the instigation of some pastors at the last Convention, when we went so far as to offer to pay our part of the Board's expense—thus offering to pay for machinery upon which we do not depend. We failed in this attempt, and it may be best now in the beginning for us to work it entirely apart from the Board, for it will emphasize the directness which we are trying to establish between the church and the missionary.

On the other hand, like Dr. Harris, some think to have a committee through which a "group of churches" may act is to have a board, only on a smaller scale. Now, it does seem to me the difference is real and ought readily to be seen. We have no objection to such a committee, or even a central committee, (we may have one as the work enlarges), if that committee is not vested with responsibility—is only a medium. Now, the churches of the South have delegated the whole responsibility to the Board. We are in favor of co operation (co operation versus outside organization.) In every co operative company every party in it shares in the responsibility. So in this "group of churches" each church becomes responsible for a certain part—it is precisely the same relation the pastor sustains to his churches. But that $1,700 interest on borrowed money reported at the last Southern Baptist Convention shows plainly the churches do not share in the responsibility. Now, the lamentation all along has been "the churches do not feel the responsibility." They do not and will not feel it until it is theirs, neither do the pastors generally; they feel that the salvation of the heathen devolves upon the Board and its agents. Alas, so many of them are content to let things go on as they are, whether the heathen are saved or not, on the principle that the easiest way is the best way. By the way, I have observed that in many instances when they say, "I am in favor of the 'old way,'" it is not that they love the work through the Board more, but that they love it all less. It seems to me when churches come to be able and willing to undertake their own foreign mission work our Board ought to hail it with pleasure; they can then transfer to these churches not only some of the financial burden under which the Board is groaning, but also the care and responsibility. Think, too, how this responsibility will vitalize the churches. Dr. Harris thinks for the Board to yield up this responsibility would be for the Board to commit suicide. Well, what is true of the Board is true of the churches. May not this lack of responsibility, then, account for the lifelessness of churches in this work? Now, the Board cannot turn over this responsibility to the churches unless the churches are willing to assume it. But where they are willing they ought to take it as a God-send, especially as the churches then do more—that this is true cannot be doubted. Now, the aim of all Boards—State Boards, Home Boards, and all—is to help churches until they come to be able to do their own work, and then they turn the work and the responsibility over to them. This is the goal, and the sooner they arrive at it the better. That some have been feeling this to be true of foreign mission work, witness the BIBLICAL RECORDER, May 23d, 1888. In commenting on a letter in which Dr. Yates said his forty years' experience led him to believe we should never convert the heathen world through a central board, because the missionaries were too far removed from their constituents, the editor says: "Such a course would double our contributions to foreign missions. It is not strange that the minds of so many of our brethren have been turned in this direction. It is a most sensible and business-like view to take. The tendency is in this direction, and the time may soon come when many of our district associations and some of our leading churches will have their own missionaries in foreign lands, and when their treasurers shall pay their salaries direct from home."

Now, the indications are that that time has come, and as fast as the workers, called to go to China, rise up in the name of the Lord and say to the churches, "Here am I, send me," they are going to send them.

Now, why should some of the brethren, as in the BIBLICAL RECORDER last week, out of their love for us, wish we could come back to work under the Board as we used to work, when we will do the same work as missionaries, and when the churches that will be required to support us in this direct way didn't use to pay to the Board one twenty-fifth part of what we cost the Board. I have been afraid they wished to produce doubt as to our sticking to this undertaking. No, with the success that has crowned our efforts so soon, with every token of God's favor, with a deepening of spirituality as well as liberality on the part of the churches that go into it, we have no occasion to turn back. We love the principles we have espoused as we love our life, and we would give up the one as quickly as we would give up the other. By the way, Dr. Harris has an idea that I think some lives must be sacrificed. Why, I have no idea that churches that have spirituality and life enough to undertake this support of a missionary will let him suffer—they go at with a determination that forbids failure. Dr. Harris probably came to this conclusion because he heard me say, when insisting that the responsibility of the churches be actual and the dependence be entire, "if he starve, let him starve." But the man who said, "Let justice be done if the heavens fall," didn't mean to express any fears about the heavens falling. No; all this talk about sacrificing the lives of missionaries is not called for. Again, others have asked, "Why do you kick against the Board? Didn't you have a good place, and didn't they treat you well?" I am not kicking against the Board. Is a "good place" and to be "treated well" all we want? God forbid! while the churches are doing comparatively nothing, and the heathen dying and going to hell; while the command of our Master is not fulfilled. Loyalty to boards and conventions is good, but let us talk more of loyalty to Christ and obey his command and give the gospel to the heathen in every lawful way.

I hope to conclude next week with a few words showing that our "Gospel Mission" is designed to do a special work in a special field, and does not conflict with other work.

Difficulties in Christian Service.

Every young Christian feels that he ought to be doing something for Christ. But he soon finds lions in his path. Perhaps it is his own timidity, or lack of education which stands in his way. Or it may be that his associations are unfavorable. Or he may really not know what to do in the way of religious work. He may have too high an ideal of the efforts he desires to make. He may be discouraged by failures in his first efforts, or by the indifference and ingratitude of those for whom he is toiling. He may be disheartened by the rebuffs and sneers of those that are older. One or more of these difficulties usually meet the young disciple, and not infrequently paralyze his early zeal.

But the young Christian must remember that some of the noblest workers in the church of Christ have had first to overcome their own timidity, and the hindrances arising from their surroundings. They should remember, too, that if they will only walk in the path of duty, God will show them how they may be useful. It is a great mistake to suppose that we can serve Christ only by speaking in meetings. A holy life is the best sermon that can be preached, and the invitation of others to the meetings is often more effective than glowing exhortations. Nor should we be discouraged by failures. The greatest men in all ranks of life have at first met with failures, and have gradually risen to their pre-eminence by learning useful lessons from their failures. We need not be discouraged because those for whom we toil seem indifferent, or prove ungrateful. Ample rewards will come after a while. Then, too, we ought not to allow the opposition or sneers of others to prevent us from doing our duty. If we thus act, our life here will be worth the living, and will glow forever at God's right hand.—Our Young People.

Reproving Church Disturbers.

A clergyman was annoyed by people talking and giggling. He paused, looked at the disturbers and said:

"I am always afraid to reprove those who misbehave, for reason: Some years since, as I was preaching, a young man who sat before me was constantly laughing, talking and making uncouth grimaces. I paused and administered a severe rebuke. After the close of service, a gentleman said to me: 'Sir, you have made a great mistake; that young man was an idiot!' Since then I have always been afraid to reprove those who misbehave themselves in chapel, lest I should repeat that mistake and reprove another idiot." During the rest of the service there was good order.—Ex.

It makes my heart sick to hear brethren say with boasting glee, that they have had a revival in their church, by turning out thirty or forty members. It simply means that they have turned their backs on thirty or forty souls, and left them to perish in their sins. Of course, there are exceptions, but it seems to me they should not be taken until our most earnest efforts have proved unavailing. "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted."—Dr. Wharton.

THE BIBLE IN OUR COLLEGES.

A good deal is being said and written now about the propriety of using the Bible as a text book in our colleges, male and female. Some think it would not only be wise thus to use the Bible, but also to demand a pretty correct knowledge of the contents of the Bible as a condition of graduation. Others again think that all of our larger schools should have a regular theological department of study.

The wisdom of teaching the Bible in our colleges is so evident that the plan of using it as a text book hardly needs discussion. The best manner of using it thus, is a question on which good and wise men may differ. Would it be best for each college to have its chaplain whose business it would be to conduct morning and evening prayers, teach classes in Bible study, deliver stated lectures on Bible themes, &c.? Some might think this plan leans too strongly toward that of the Establishment. We must confess that we see no danger here. A denominational college is not a State institution, and the chaplain or preacher located at the college would be there by the choice of the faculty or trustees, and not by State appointment; and if his services did not prove acceptable, a successor could be readily found. We have among us quite a number of able and consecrated men who might find such work more suited to them in their old age than the more active and exacting duties of the pastorate. And who are so competent to mould the minds and hearts of our young men and women while pursuing their college courses as these more aged and experienced men! We fear that sometimes our able and experienced pastors may be more or less neglected in their old age. If pastorates are offered to them they are not such as they have held. Others again which they are entirely competent to fill may not be available; and sometimes when failing health and the infirmities of old age begin to creep upon them they are simply neglected. What a splendid field of usefulness would open up to some of these able veterans of Christ if there was a demand for their services in our male and female colleges! It is a work for which many of them are eminently qualified, and which they could prosecute successfully, even in their old age. And there is a peculiar fitness of things in this idea, because young America is not too respectful toward the aged, and is apt to think he has the world in a sling, and does not need the counsel of the more experienced, either in secular or religious matters.

As to whether a certain curriculum knowledge of the Bible should be insisted upon as a condition of graduation in our colleges is a question, it seems to us, that can be readily disposed of. We do not think such plan a wise one, because it would have a tendency to lower the standard of Bible teaching and grievously afflict the land with a large class of men and women who might imagine that they had mastered its contents. Who can claim to be a graduate of God's Holy word? Who can afford to cease its study in early or maturer life, thinking he has mastered its contents? In this case the drift would be from the present state, in which our colleges are graduating a large class of young men and women who know little about the Bible, to one in which they would imagine at least that they knew all about it. The one state would be hardly more satisfactory than the other.

Cannot the Bible be reverently used in our colleges as a text book without demanding actual graduation as to its contents? We think it can.

As to the plan of having a theological department or annex connected with our colleges, we also have decided views, and they are such as to lead us to doubt the wisdom of the whole arrangement. Some of our colleges have, we believe, tried it and have tired of it; others have contemplated it, but afterward abandoned it.

The arrangement is open to the objection that it lowers the tone and dignity of Bible teaching, and turns loose upon the country annually a large number of young men who may think that they need no further study of the Book of Books, and hence, may ignore the vitally important course at our theological seminaries. "A little learning is a dangerous thing," and if there is any real wisdom in this saying, it applies especially to a little learning in theology. If possible, in these times, our young men that [illegible] the ministry their life-[illegible] take a partial or complete [illegible] as our excellent Seminary at Louisville, Ky. It is true that some of our pastors have become first-class preachers without doing so; but they have had to toil night and day for years since leaving college for what knowledge of theology they now have. The time has come when the ministry demands first-class talent and first-class study by way of preparing for it. There are heights in God's word that untrained and unholy feet should not tread; there are depths where untrained and unskilful feet may stumble and fall. Thank God, the poor unlettered man can tell his fellow about Christ, and thus preach the gospel; and the preacher that has never studied theology may be eminently useful in leading souls to Christ; but still let it be remembered that we live in an age when the shrewd intelligent foes of Christianity are exceedingly active and aggressive. We need some Sampsons, some like Peter and John; but the demand for such men as Saul of Tarsus is rapidly increasing.

The subject thus briefly discussed is one that demands the careful consideration of the trustees, faculties, and students of our colleges. Its agitation and discussion in all of our denominational papers would be timely. We believe in denominational colleges. More attention to the Bible in their courses of study would give them a stronger plea for denominational support, and greatly additional force to the argument, often used by brethren representing our colleges, that what is given for their support is given for the cause of Christ.

A GROSS MISREPRESENTATION.

About the coolest thing which has recently appeared is this statement of the Rev. R. L. Dabney, D. D., in the Christian Observer: "A Presbyterian minister found printed statistics of the Baptists in North Carolina apparently authorized by the State Association claiming 75,000 members. I had an inquiry made in a well informed quarter, and was told by the Baptist authorities (italics his. Ed.) that the real number was about 15,000." The Baptist Year Book for this year gives the number of white Baptists in North Carolina as 141,052; colored, 106,989. We turn Dr. Dabney and the Christian Observer over to the BIBLICAL RECORDER. In a question of veracity between the State Association and Dr. Dabney's unknown "Baptist authorities," count us on the side of the Association. He owes it to himself to give the name of the "Baptist authorities" in that State who impugned the veracity of the Association.—Western Recorder.

To refer to the foregoing statement, credited to Dr. Dabney in the Christian Observer, as the "coolest things which has recently appeared," but mildly expresses our sentiments.

He must be a dotard indeed who would hope for a moment to find a single newspaper reader in the country who would give credence to such a statement. It might pass in Central Africa, but hardly elsewhere.

Surely it must be a mistake, and it certainly reads that way. In the face of the facts we cannot believe that the Christian Observer, Dr. Dabney, or any other responsible person, would give publicity to such a statement. It has been many, many years since we claimed so few as 75,000 Baptists in this State. We are not so modest as that. If left to our own estimate we would place the number to-day at 325,000 members. But let us leave the whole matter to the United States census reports, taken under the supervision of Dr. J. L. Carroll of New Jersey.

BAPTISTS IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Regular Baptists (white)	153,648
" " (colored)	136,856
Total	290,504

These are the figures of the United States census authorities, which may be obtained in detail by Dr. Dabney, for future reference, and by the Christian Observer for the enlightenment of its editors, on application to the government at Washington.

Dr. Dabney's "Baptist authorities," 15,000; the U. S. census, 290,504. Cool, indeed!

Now let the Observer acknowledge and correct the mistake, or let Dr. Dabney come forth with his "Baptist authorities." Such a statement, or such a mistake, if it is a mistake, should not be allowed to go uncorrected, and we thank our contemporary for calling our attention to it. We hope the Christian Observer may see fit to enlighten those of its readers who may have been so blind as to be misled. However, that is hardly necessary, as no responsible person would believe the statement, though it were circulated for a century.

IN AN editorial August 16th we quoted from the Religious Herald a statement made at the Dan River Association by Wm. Ellyson, the Corresponding Secretary of the State Mission Board of Virginia, viz: "There has been no practical advance in State Missions in Virginia within ten years." But the word ten in the quotation made by us was by mistake changed to three. This made the comparison in our editorial, which followed, seem to Bro. M. P. Matheny out of place, and in our last issue he takes advantage of it and administers to us a sharp criticism. Bro. Matheny then proceeds to make statements about the "Virginia Plan" and the work of missions in North Carolina, and gives figures. Both his statements and his figures remind us of the following from a distinguished humorist, viz.: "It is better not to know so much than to know so many things that ain't so."

Our comparison was correct. Ten years ago (1882) the churches of our Convention gave for State Missions $3,000.77, two years ago (1890, when the Convention met at Shelby) $12,348 31, and last year (1893) $14,272.95.

Here is a gain for State Missions in ten years of $11,272 18, and a gain in the past two years (since the Convention met in Shelby) of $1,924 64.

But in the face of these figures, taken from the report of the Treasurer to the Convention and published in the minutes, Bro. Matheny says: "There has practically been no advance in State Missions since the year we met in Shelby." This is only one of his reckless statements. It should, perhaps, be remembered that, in matters of figures and finances, as is generally reported, we believe, in the States where this brother has lived, he has not been a remarkable success. His figures about the expenses of our Convention's work are much further from the facts than the cases cited by us above. But for sixty years all these things have been published in the Convention minutes, and we need not now write more on this point. We know of no work done by the Baptists of the State for the past ten years which has been more successful than State Missions, and believe there is no State in the South where the denominational work is more judiciously and economically carried on than our Convention work in this State.

SOME of our exchanges are discussing the question of the length of school vacations, and the tendency of opinion seems to be against the present length of ten or twelve weeks. This is a question that has many sides, but we believe that vacations for colleges, and especially theological institutions, are entirely too long. Of course this depends on how the vacation is spent. If the theological student engages in active work while not at college, it may afford him valuable experience, and to a certain extent enable him to return to college. If the vacation is spent in idleness, "waiting for college to open," then it were better to have no vacation at all. Life is too short for a young man to spend two months of a year in idleness. As for the children, they need a good long vacation.

In another aspect of the question it is argued that the institutions, on which benefactors have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars, should not remain useless for a quarter of the time; and this seems to us a most plausible argument. Yet the settlement of the question in favor of very short vacations presents many seemingly insurmountable difficulties, and it is probable that our present system will continue for years.

THE Roman church is to day pursuing the policy towards the United States which has characterized her from the beginning. It has been said that "the uniform policy of Rome is to sail with the flowing tide whenever it is able to discover which way the tide is making." It will sacrifice anything, endure anything, and compromise to any extent, if through it all she can hope to win in the end. She would appear now to be greatly interested in our American ideas and institutions; she would have us believe she is thoroughly in sympathy with popular liberty. But her history, past and present, exposes her. The intellectual darkness which has invariably characterized those countries in which Rome has the power, and the low order of morals of their inhabitants, is sufficient indication that the church of Rome never moves to advance popular liberty until compelled. If she can gain her end by the torch, she will not scruple to use it; if she cannot gain it by the torch, then she has ready recourse to fawning and flattery. With her the end always justifies the means.

REV. A. M. SIMMS of Texas, the new pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle of this city, arrived on August 23d, and was greeted at the depot by a large concourse of his flock, led by Rev. Dr. Thos. E. Skinner, Rev. Baylus Cade, and Bro. N. B. Broughton. After a general hand-shaking, Dr. Simms was escorted to the residence of Bro. Broughton, where he remained until preparations were completed for moving into a parsonage. Bro. Simms occupied the pulpit of the Tabernacle on Sunday last, and preached two excellent sermons before very large audiences. At the night service he was formally introduced to the church by a few timely remarks from Rev. Baylus Cade, his old school-mate.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. L. Johnson baptized four converts at Lilesville recently.

....The Carolinian says that George W. Vanderbilt is building a Baptist church at Biltmore.

....Rev. G. W. Fisher was engaged in a good meeting at Prospect church, near Yanceyville last week.

....We regret to learn that Rev. J. C. Rockwell of Newport, Tenn., is dangerously ill with typhoid fever.

....Rev. J. B. Newton baptized fifteen converts at Clemmonsville on the 27th ult. as the result of a meeting.

....Rev. J. E. Hutson of Richmond, Va., well known as an evangelist, began a revival at Rich Square last Sunday.

....Rev. J. W. Suttle has resigned the pastorate of the church at Blackburg, S. C., to accept a call to a Florida field.

....Rev. Henry Sheets has been called to the pastorate of Abbott's Creek church, in Guilford county, for the next year.

....Revs. Jos. G. Blalock and C. M. Murchison are engaged in a protracted meeting at Mountain Grove church, Catawba county.

....Rev. C. W. Blanchard was engaged in a good revival at Cary recently, and as a result of his labors ten converts have been baptized.

....Rev. F. M. Jordan, the veteran evangelist, has received a call to the pastorate of the Second church, Durham. His acceptance is doubtful.

....Rev. N. S. Jones did good work in a revival with Rev. C. S. Cashwell in Yadkin county, recently. From thirty to forty converts are reported.

....Rev. C. W. Blanchard, who has been engaged in several revival meetings in this and other counties, is expected to return to his regular charges soon.

....The church at Morehead City has called Rev. Jos. Hiden, son of the distinguished Dr. J. C. Hiden of Richmond, Va., to its pastorate. He will accept.

....Rev. George H. Church, formerly of Bryson City, began work as pastor at Statesville on Sunday last. We hope God's richest blessings may mark his work in his new field.

....Rev. C. S. Cashwell had the privilege of baptizing twenty five converts at Eatons on the 27th. The Baptist cause in Western North Carolina seems to be in excellent condition.

....We were pleased to have a visit from Rev. C. M. Billings of Danville, Va., on his return to resume his studies at Wake Forest. Last week Bro. Billings began a revival at Bayleaf, this county.

....We learn with deep regret that Dr. I. T. Tichenor, one of our most beloved Southern leaders, is dangerously ill at his home in Atlanta. May God spare his useful life to the work for many years to come.

....Dr. G. C. Lorimer of Boston has announced that he will rebuild the Tremont Temple of Boston. It will be built on a larger scale, and the Doctor hopes to make it surpass the glory of the old Temple.

....On August 27th Rev. E. H. Walker was ordained to the Baptist ministry, through presbyters Drs. Hillyer and Gwin, at Hopeville, near Atlanta. Bro. Walker is a grand-nephew of Dr. Jno. E. Dawson.

....Robert J. Burdette, the famous Baptist humorist and lay-preacher, has announced his intention of being ordained to the full work of the Baptist ministry. He will attend the Divinity School of Chicago.

....A correspondent writes that about five hundred people were turned away from Broad Street Church, Winston, on the night of the 27th ult., who wanted to hear one of Bro. Broughton's series of sermons to young men.

....We hope the efforts of brethren Harris, Tichenor and Bell to establish a children's missionary day may prove successful. We could engage in no better work than in inspiring the children to benevolence in and sympathy with our missionary work.

....Rev. J. L. White of Asheville, N. C., preached again at Brantly last Sunday (Aug. 29th) to the joy of a large audience. A number of persons asked the prayers of God's people. He spent the week at Ocean Grove.—Baltimore Baptist.

....Nothing speaks more strongly for Sunday closing of the great fair than the attendance figures. For the week ending August 26th more than 1,000,000 people entered the fair grounds, and only 20,000 of these could be counted on Sunday.

....We were pleased to see Prof. J. B. Carlyle of Wake Forest on his return to College from a vacation spent for the most part in Tennessee. Bro. Carlyle has completely recovered from his late illness, and is prepared to resume his work with his former zeal and ability.

....The meeting at Waxhaw Baptist church closed last Sunday. There were fifty-two accessions to the church—three by letter, two restored, and forty-seven by baptism. The congregations were very large, and the interest was great. The pastor, Rev. A. B. Caudle, was assisted by Rev. J. A. Bivens.—Monroe Enquirer, Aug. 31.

....Rev. J. F. MacDuffie writes from East Durham: "Our 'factory folks' here are more highly favored than most of the other factory villages. Our good Bro. Branson (Methodist) has so steered the financial boat as to keep the operatives at work. They have made full time and have been paid for it, so far as I know." Many of our brethren might relieve the present times to some extent by helping the less fortunate.

....Rev. Chas. Durham of Asheville, a last June graduate of Wake Forest College, has been engaged in good revivals in the western part of the State and in Spartanburg, S. C. Bro. Durham is one of Wake Forest's most promising young graduates, and we are pleased to learn of his growing success.

....Dr. N. B. Cobb returned Monday last from a series of meetings at Bear Creek church, Chatham county, which, despite the inclement weather, proved very successful. There were about twenty penitents and seven converts. The church, which is one of the oldest in the Sandy Creek Association, was greatly revived.

....The new Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, Dr. R. J. Willingham, entered on his duties on the 28th ult. Now let our churches make his burden as light as possible by responding to his calls. Dr. Harris, the Secretary ad int., deserves the gratitude of the Baptist denomination for his efficient work during the past two months.

....We are glad to announce that the attendance at the opening of the forty-third annual session of Oxford Female Seminary on the 30th ult. was highly gratifying to President Hobgood. Chowan Baptist Female Institute and Wake Forest College open on the date of this issue, and we hope the attendance will fully come up to the merits of these noble institutions.

....A good meeting has recently been held with Rock Spring church, Flat River Association, resulting in twelve additions to the church—six by baptism and six by letter and restoration. The pastor had no ministerial aid. Many of the twenty converts lived in the neighborhood of other churches. The work is prospering at this mission station.—J. A. Stradley.

....We learn with deep regret of the sad death of Mrs. Annie Nicholson Lee, one of the best of Christian women, which occurred in August, at the residence of Bro. John H. Nicholson, one of the oldest deacons in Gardner's church, Warren county, where she had gone on a visit only a short time prior to her demise. She had been married quite recently to Bro. Lee of Wilson.

....Rev. Hight C. Moore has some interesting notes by the way in this issue. We are glad to learn that he is pleased with his surroundings. He writes: "Wife and I are faring nicely. The climate is delightful. Surroundings are beautiful. Associates are kind. We expect a most pleasant stay of a few months in Rochester. Last Sunday heard Dr. Edward Judson, son of the great missionary. His sermon was one of pathos and power. "Strangers in a strange land," we meditate long and lovingly on "home, sweet home."

....A recent graduate of Wake Forest College, Mr. J. O. Atkinson, now professor in Elon College, is said to have led all his classes in post graduate work at Harvard University last session. Those who remember the excellent work done by Mr. Atkinson during his four or five years of student-life at Wake Forest, will not be surprised to learn that the dean of the faculty has written that he made a higher record than has been made there for years. This is a way that Wake Forest men have of doing when they pursue special lines of study in the great universities.

....Rev. B. W. Spilman of Weldon, who has been serving a three months' "supply" for the Baptist church here during the absence of the pastor, Rev. J. H. Lamberth, completed his work on Sunday and left yesterday for Weldon. Though coming here an entire stranger he has grown well upon the people and made a host of warm friends throughout the community. He is a young man of unusual ability, a fine scholar and a close student. He is also a lecturer of considerable reputation, and will fill a number of engagements while taking a month's vacation before returning to Louisville Theological Seminary in October. He lectures in Norfolk to morrow night, and also has appointments for Baltimore, Petersburg and other cities.—Greenville cor. Richmond Dispatch, Aug. 30.

....Rev. J. K. Fant, who recently resigned the pastorate of the church at High Point, after a most successful ministry of about two years, preached his farewell sermon on the 27th, on the theme "The Christ that is within me." The Enterprise has this to say: "Mr. Fant's work here has been very successful indeed. The membership as a whole has done more and worked more in unity for the cause under his pastorate than it has ever done under the pastorate of his predecessors. And as far as "working members are concerned, there were more of them actively engaged than was ever possible to bring to the surface at any time previous." We are glad to learn that Bro. Fant has been tendered several calls to pastorates in this State, which he is considering.

....Rev. Dr. Thomas Hume, the distinguished Professor of English Literature at the State University, returned home last week after an extended trip North. He delivered twenty-two lectures before the National School of Methods of Teaching at Chicago; eleven on "Shakespeare's Method of Treating English History," and eleven on "Nineteenth Century Poets," with particular reference to the late laureate. He writes: "From 12:30 p. m. to 9 p. m., gave opportunity enough at the World's Fair, and I had it for three weeks. It was a privilege to meet the able men of the Baptist pastorate and professorships in conference, and to have the honor of lecturing to them on Shakespeare's Theology and Moral Teaching. After the inspiration of his ever fresh sermons, I was admitted to the gracious hospitality of Dr. Henson's delightful home circle, and old North Carolina and Virginia experiences were recounted by him and his wife, a graduate of good old Chowan Institute. He is easily first in the pulpit, and of manifold and charming activity outside."

Letter from Rev. J. F. MacDuffie.

Dear Recorder:—Arrived home yesterday morning, tired and broken down in body, but buoyant and happy in soul and spirit. Had been out among the brethren and sisters praying, preaching and talking with them, and with poor lost souls for thirty-six days without any rest.

By the help of the Master we made a considerable gap in the Devil's ranks. There were about ninety professions, and some of them the worst cases in the land. At Bethesda a model country church, the brethren and sisters, as usual, laid everything aside, and we all considered it our work, and combined our efforts and prayers and fifteen broke ranks and came over on the Lord's side. Two fathers that had about been given over as hopeless cases surrendered to the Spirit's call, and now give evidence of converted men.

At Ephesus, a mission point near Chapel Hill, where we have a weak church, yet, a consecrated band of workers, we labored for seven days with happy results. Fourteen told us they had seen the light, and felt that the burden of sin was rolled away. There is a great work to be done at Ephesus. So many unconverted ones in that section. It is very hopeful.

From Ephesus we went to Mt. Moriah. We labored there for seven days. I never saw a church so wrought upon by God's Spirit before. There had been some right serious difficulties prevailing, but all were made to be "of one mind" when the meeting closed. I apprehended some trouble before taking charge of Mt. Moriah, but feel now the Devil has been put to flight, to a certain extent. There are some devoted Christian workers here, which make it pleasant to go there. We had a goodly number of professions. One of the Devil's best agents gave over, and decided for truth. To God be praise.

We had an unusual meeting at Roberson Grove. We continued there for eight days. I have been connected with this church since its organization, but have never witnessed such a display of the Spirit's power. Bro. John C. Roberson, after whom the church was named, was made to rejoice in seeing three of his sons, and one son-in law baptized on Sunday morning. His oldest son professed, but was not baptized. There were several hard cases that came out and decided for Christ. There were nineteen professions and the church revived as I never saw it before.

At Mt. Hermon the Lord's presence was with us. We had eleven professions. This church is constantly gaining strength, and doing efficient work. Some of God's noblest working men and women are there. They have two weekly prayer meetings and an evergreen Sunday school, with Bro. J. C. Walker, a consecrated young brother as Superintendent. In addition to these they have two other prayer meetings well attended remote from the church.

I have one other meeting to conduct at Sandy Level. The good Lord has dealt graciously with me and mine this year. Praise to His name.

Fraternally, J. F. MacDuffie.

P. S.—Bro. W. A. Crabtree of Cary was with us at Bethesda, Roberson Grove and Mt. Hermon. He did good work and greatly endeared himself to the brethren and sisters. We pray God's blessings upon him.

Notes from the North.

Our trip to Rochester was full of interest from beginning to end. Leaving Goldsboro on the 16th inst., wife and I came by rail to Norfolk. There we took the Old Dominion steamer "Wyanoke" for New York. The ocean was calm, the sky was propitious, and the voyage pleasant. However a Carolina mountaineer feels a little internal insecurity on a rolling vessel when terra firma is nowhere to be seen. For sixteen hours we were out of sight of land. We entered New York harbor after dark. The shores were brilliantly lighted and the sights were superb. Excursion steamers and ferries were screaming and darting here and there. The statue of Liberty is a prominent feature. Such an evening scene cannot soon be forgotten.

We spent only a day in New York. Central Park is worthy of the metropolis. In its menagerie are reptiles, birds and beasts of every description from every quarter of the globe. In its Art Museum are the very choicest bits of sculpture and painting, ancient and modern, that ever emanated from the studies of the great masters. The natural scenery of the Park, refined by the touch of skill, is simply exquisite. Eden musee is the world in wax. Its figures and scenes are perfect as life itself. The Chamber of Horrors in its basement presents spectacles of wildest terror. Brooklyn Bridge affords a magnificent view of the harbor. It is one of the greatest wonders of the American continent. Traversing its streets for miles on foot or eclectic car or elevated railway one is impressed with the monotonous magnificence of this most populous city of the New World.

The trip up the Hudson to Albany was grand beyond description. The steamer with some six hundred passengers on board moved up the current at the rate of fifteen miles an hour, stopping at Yonkers, West Point, Catskill and Poughkeepsie along the way. Railways skirt both sides of the river and long trains were rushing by every few minutes. On the east bank is the New York Central, the only four-track railway in the world. Abrupt cliffs, towering hills, green slopes, shady parks, palatial residences, and numerous towns and cities are seen on either side of this Rhine of America.

At Albany we took the New York Central and came dashing on to Rochester at the rate of fifty miles an hour. This is a lovely city. It has a population of 150,000. Its 230¼ miles of streets are neat, clean and beautiful. There are many manufacturing interests here. The electric car lines are extensive and commodious. A half dozen daily newspapers are supported. There are ninety-eight churches in the city. Roman Catholics come first with sixteen, and Baptists next with thirteen. There are fifty-eight public buildings, thirty-one halls, four theatres, twelve railroad stations and numerous hotels.

The Theological Seminary is located in a splendid portion of the city. The faculty is talented, cultured and influential. The buildings, large and magnificent, afford every desirable convenience. The library of 27,000 volumes stands among the foremost of the world. The Seminary is worth little less than a million. It has been very successful in the past, and the coming session bids fair to be the most prosperous in its history.

Two Gracious Meetings.

Dear Recorder:—I write you an account of two gracious meetings. On Saturday before the first Sunday in August, I began a meeting at Mt. Harmony in Mecklenburg county, four miles east of Matthews. I had Bro. A. C. Davis with me five days, and the Holy Spirit every day. The Lord blessed from the start. There were conversions at every service. Great crowds attended the services. Old and young were brought to Christ. Rejoicing was in many a home. We had opposition, but it was outside, the Lord leading his children. This place has been called Satan's seat. The Baptists bought it from the Protestant Methodists in May last. Myself and Bro. M. A. Adams organized a Baptist church there on June 3, 1893, with fifteen members. The writer was made pastor. The meeting as above mentioned was God's approval of the work. The meeting lasted until Friday—seven days. On that morning in the clear stream of Crooked creek, we had a union meeting, such a meeting as Jesus prayed for in John 17: 21. We stood in the water with those belonging to five denominations, and buried them in baptism according to God's Word. Six or seven hundred witnessed the sight, a number of them never having seen a baptism. Two others were received for baptism, and three by letter, making twenty-six additions.

On Saturday before the third Sunday in August I began a meeting with my church at Waxhaw. This church has come through great trials during the last two years, but the Lord has delivered them out of it all, and blessed them with such a blessing that they were hardly able to receive it. I had Rev. J. A. Bivens with me four days. He did some earnest preaching. The Lord was present to bless even on the first Saturday of the meeting, and at every service there were conversions. Brethren Pardue and Ferrell preached several times for me, and the whole church was alive and at work. I never have been in such a gracious meeting—earnest, thoughtful, quiet. I had a private talk with 214 persons during the meeting, which lasted nine days. Forty-seven were added by baptism, two were restored, and three were admitted by letter, making fifty two additions. Others will join at the next meeting. The whole country is moved, the Lord's name is honored, and men, women and children saved. I baptized two aged sisters—one seventy-five years old and the other seventy one years. A number of the baptized were from other persuasions. Thank God, people are seeing and believing the truth and uniting on the Word. To God be all the praise.

God bless you and the Recorder.

Yours in Christ,

A. B. Caudle.

Monroe, Aug. 28, 1893.

From Rev. C. W. Matthews.

Our meeting at Roper, N. C., Chowan Association, which was held week after the fifth Sunday in July, was a success in spite of the fact that the pastor who did the preaching had three chills, and the Methodists and the Episcopalians had two excursions from the place. Seven were added to the church. Bro. D. Gilliland, the blind man, led the singing for us and worked earnestly in the prayer-meetings. Bro. George W. White of Chowan county gave us an earnest sermon during the meeting.

At Lake Drummond, the week following, my father was with us and worked nobly during the week. I baptized six as a result of this meeting.

The people in this part of Norfolk county, Va., have the finest corn crops they have had for years. They are happy, and well they may be.

My little church at Mulberry is again on its feet. And with the few but strong members it now has, it is destined to live and increase in strength.

The truckers in this section made some clear money this year, and have growing now on the same land fine corn crops.

It is intimated that Rev. P. S. C. Davis will resign his field in this county and enter Crozer Seminary in September. Bro. Davis is an indomitable worker, and his absence will be severely felt.

Rev. N. M. Munden is still living, and, though feeble, he, with unflagging energy, keeps up his end of the work. He is a great and good old man.

PORTSMOUTH ASSOCIATION.

The next session of the Portsmouth Association meets Sept. 12th, with Tucker's Swamp church, Southampton county, Va. By the way, you, Bro. Bailey, were once the pastor of this church, and I am sure it would give them great pleasure to have you attend the session.

C. W. Matthews.

Rev. D. L. Moody, the great evangelist, announces that his efforts to secure the most gifted preachers in various languages from both sides of the Atlantic to preach at Chicago during the fair have been successful. We note with pleasure that among the foremost leaders, Revs. A. C. Dixon, D. D., and H. M. Wharton, D. D., have been announced to hold services during this month.

From Bro. Lamberth.

Dear Recorder:—I am here at Hotel Burton, Danville, Va., the best house of the kind, I think, between Atlanta, Ga., and Washington, D. C., resting for a few days. I have had a good time this summer. I have been so free from pastoral cares!

After resting all June, I began preaching with Bro. P. H. Fontaine, the second week in July at Chestnut Level, Va. From there we went to County Line, and wound up at Ricoville second Sunday in August. A purer man, better pastor, finer scholar, and a higher toned gentleman can't be found than P. H. Fontaine. His churches are in fine condition almost every way, and always easy to hold meetings with. I spent some happy hours with our own Bro. F. H. Jones at his home in Chatham, Va., in his church, in a tent meeting, and at the Roanoke Association of which he is Moderator. These two godly men, like twin-brothers for years in their work (for they are near each other), exert a refining, elevating, blessed influence, which is so visible to one who travels over their fields of labor. If our pastorless churches of North Carolina only knew what would be good for them and the cause of Christ in the State, they would invite and try to induce these very best pastors to go back to North Carolina where they once were so much loved. They love the Recorder, its editor, Wake Forest, and every interest of the Baptists of the Old North State. Let us have them back among us, for we need them.

The meetings were all good and resulted in additions to the churches. I have had the pleasure of conducting twenty five protracted meetings in Virginia during my ministry and love to preach for the people of the sister State. I am unsettled yet as to where I shall locate, and am asking God to guide me, so that if it is his will, my next pastorate may be like my first one at Roxboro, both long and happy.

My home is still where it has been for eight years—with Bro. and Sister A. R. Foushee at Roxboro, N. C. This is the dearest spot to me on earth, yet it will never be to me again what it was while their pastor, though Mrs. Foushee says, whether present or absent, my plate shall be fixed at her table as long as she lives. Now is not that kind, and would not I be an ungrateful man did I not appreciate such kindness!

Hoping to see you in the near future, I am your friend, J. H. Lamberth.

Revival Meetings

Dear Recorder:—I have just closed my last meeting of days. We began with Shady Grove. After a very delightful session of the Camden and Currituck Union, we protracted our meeting. On Tuesday Bro. Josiah Elliott came and did the preaching until Friday, and did it well. He made many friends. We all learned to love him very much. As the result of the meetings I baptized sixteen. I think the church was greatly revived.

The first Sunday we protracted at Coinjock. At this place we organized April 5th with eighteen members. Bro. Frank Tuttle came to our relief on Tuesday and did the preaching in open air. Some of the aged brethren said they never heard the gospel preached with more power. I was glad to have this brother with us. To know him is to love him. Sixteen were added to the church. May the blessings of heaven overshadow Bro. Tuttle wherever he goes.

The next place was Poplar Branch church. Bro. Harrell of Elizabeth City was with us the week and preached the gospel in love all and with power. He is a plain, forcible preacher. There were several professions and two accessions.

Then proceeded to Powell's Point. We expected Bro. C. B. Williams, but he was unable to be with us. Bro. Gilliland came and helped us. He did good work. We were pleased to have him with us. He is a faithful worker. I think he preached every night during the meeting. We had a very precious meeting. Ten were admitted by baptism, and one by reclamation.

Our field is in a very prosperous condition. We have just completed the house at Poplar Branch. Have made some improvement on the building at Shady Grove.

Cape Fear Association.

I have been requested by the good brethren of Brunswick to announce in the columns of the Recorder the way and conveyance by which all persons who may desire to attend can reach the Cape Fear Association, which is to convene at Lebanon church, Brunswick county, Oct. 19th to 21st inclusive. A boat known as the "Doggett" will convey the passengers from Wilmington to two miles of the church and take you back to Wilmington for twenty-five cents a trip. Brethren, if you miss that, you will miss one of the biggest and best provided for Associations you ever missed.

Sandy Creek Association.

This body will convene with the Moore's Chapel Baptist church, four miles west of Siler City, Chatham county, N. C., on Thursday before the fourth Sunday in September (Sept. 21—23), 1893.

We extend a special invitation to brethren Durham, Newton, Herring, Bryan, Caddell, Taylor, W. R. Gwaltney, T. H. Pritchard, J. H. Mills, N. B. Broughton and C. A. G. Thomas. Come by railroad to Siler City, and call for A. C. Jordan.

Help the Young People.

The young people of the South have been asked by the Home and Foreign Boards to observe a day this year, when they will make special study of Missions and special contributions to Missions. Indeed it is hoped that such a day may be observed each year, when the young people shall honor the Lord by a joyful giving to his cause. The Woman's Missionary Union, which has been so successful in the past in getting up interesting and instructive exercises for the children's missionary days, has arranged an exceptionally good programme for this one. The Sunday-school Board will lend its aid, as well, to the carrying out of the purpose, rejoicing in the opportunity to help in interesting the Sunday-school in this greatest of all works.

I, for one, am glad that this has been done. I rejoice in every effort that is made to interest young people in the work of missions. And I especially rejoice when I see this interest quickened by means that, at the same time, give pleasure to the little folks. Why should not the doing of work for the Lord be a joyous thing? Why should not the giving of our money for his cause be accompanied by that which will make the giving a pleasure and the recollection of it a joy? The very solemn, and sometimes even doleful, way in which much of the collecting of money for the Lord's work is done, is well calculated to make people feel that the giving of the nickels and dimes that fall into the plates and bags is a soul-harrowing sacrifice. Giving is, or ought to be, a joyous thing and if by a pleasant exercise occasionally indulged in the young folks can be made to feel this, it is well.

Let the children, large and small, have a happy day of learning about the Lord's work and of giving for its furtherance. Let them come into the presence of the Lord with singing and praise, to bring unto him the offerings of their love.

The plan is a very simple one. On the third Sunday in October there will be an order of exercises, prepared by the Woman's Missionary Union, a part of which will be the distribution of "Mite Pyramids," which the Sunday school scholars and teachers, too, if they are willing, will take home with them and keep, gathering in them such sums as they can, and on Thanksgiving day, or on the Sunday following, these mite boxes will be brought in, either at a special meeting held for the purpose on Thanksgiving day, or at the regular meeting of the Sunday schools on the Sunday following. This will give a month for the gathering of the offerings.

The object of this letter is to appeal to parents, Sunday-school Superintendents and teachers to take hold of this thing and help the young people to make it a success. Take hold with enthusiasm, and so will the children be made enthusiastic. Don't chill their ardor by cold indifference. Give some time to helping them prepare their parts, throwing yourselves heartily into it. Give them opportunities for making money for their pyramids and help them from your own pockets to fill them. Talk about it and encourage them to talk, and help them plan for it. They will soon be filled with the idea and busy with its carrying out, if only they can get a little encouragement. Let each one who can, see to it that the children under his or her influence receive active sympathy and practical help. The joy that will come to the young folks will amply repay you, and the results achieved will bring gladness to the Boards and the missionaries.

The Lord's cause needs the help the young people will bring to it. If ever there was a time when all should join hands and hearts to carry forward the work of missions, it is now. The times are hard and many are making excuses for not giving. Large sums are in hiding. Now is the time when the littles must be gathered and the "mickles must make the muckles" that are needed for the work. The children deal in cents and nickles and dimes, and this is the day for these. Encourage them and lay these at the Saviour's feet.

I have just read the Foreign Mission Journal and my heart has been stirred by the appeals coming from the fields—from all the fields—for more workers. Everywhere the missionaries are rejoicing in the numbers of converts given to them by the Lord. But when they have told of these, in the next breath they cry for men to help them "gather in the sheaves." Among the blessings which I see coming from this "Missionary Day," one is the supply, in part at least, of this need; another is a blessing upon the young workers themselves.

Help the young people.

From Mount Airy, N. C.

Dear Recorder:—I suppose a word or two from this section of the State would be in order. I have been in meetings for the last four weeks with the exception of a few days. The work has been encouraging indeed. Quite a number of people professed faith in Christ.

Last Sunday evening I closed my meeting at East Bend. Bro. Swaim of Wilmington did the preaching. His sermons were interesting from first to last, and the people came for miles to hear him. The older brethren said they had never known so many people to attend church there. The church seats about six hundred, but we could not accommodate near all who attended. Quite a number made a public profession of their faith in Christ. Among the number were some of the best citizens of the town and country. Both saint and sinner rejoiced over the success of the meeting. Eleven joined the church, and we shall look for numbers to join at the next regular meeting. Many of the members of that church have a mind to work, and they are doing what they can.

I have several other engagements to hold meetings for other brethren. I greatly desired a month's vacation that I might attend the World's Fair, but I have almost given up the idea.

I enjoy the Recorder and expect to make an earnest effort to get many of my people to take it this year.

Higher Education.

An Establishment Which is Eminently Worthy of Patronage.

The Horner Military School, Oxford, N. C.

Editorial Correspondence.

During the past month this institution has been the subject of closest investigation at our hands, and trained representatives of the Journal have pursued rigid enquiry among highest unbiased authorities concerning its scope, method and achievements. In fact all available information concerning its features have been sought. Those directly concerned in its management or financially interested in its success were not consulted, it being deemed advisable to obtain expression entirely free from bias or self-interest.

As a result of such fair and pains-taking search we do not hesitate to select this admirable institution and to freely and unreservedly endorse it to every reader who seeks the best and highest in education and who would secure the greatest return upon his investment, for this excellent establishment has undoubtedly solved the important question of maximum returns combined with minimum of expense. It affords the highest practical education at lowest possible cost. Moreover, it is ably managed, thorough in methods and equipment; in fact, all that could be asked or desired; hence we do not hesitate to commend it in unqualified terms. We have no greater interest in this institution than in any other of its kind, but having by unbiased investigation assured ourselves of its superiority and worth, consider it a duty to subscribers to make such supreme merit known.

Now is the time to consider selection of an educational establishment and the choice should be made after closest examination. This we have done and in all candor we say to every reader that the claims of this institution cannot be ignored. It amply meets the requirements of the most exacting.—Chicago American Trade Journal.

We call attention to the advertisement in this issue of Fort's automatic window sash holder. It is a good and useful article, and agents do well in selling it.

A number of communications, most of them accounts of glorious revival meetings, are crowded out of this issue. These contributions shall appear in the next issue of this paper.

King's Mountain Association.

The King's Mountain Baptist Association will convene with the Boiling Springs church (Cleveland county) on Thursday before the fourth Sunday in September, 1893. Messengers and visiting brethren will be met at Lattimore's Station with conveyance upon giving notice to the undersigned, stating whether they will come on the two C's or three C's train, and whether going east or west, and date of arrival. Both trains go east in the a. m. and west in the p. m. Respectfully,

Illustrated Comments.

The man whose Christ has not changed in forty years of Christian life, who, now an old man gray-headed and feeble, thinks and talks of him only as the one who blessed the babies and said "Suffer them to come," is a pitiable example of the man who lives on milk and mush when he might be eating strong meat and bread.

I believe in a changing Christ. "The same yesterday, to-day and forever." Oh, yes! But so far as his influence on my life is concerned, he changes. And I pray that he may continue to change all my life. He changes because my needs change. He changes as my point of view shifts.

Traveling up the ridge from Round Knob to Asheville, the passenger looks out to the right to the towering mountains. They look black and dismal against the western sky. But on, on, up, up, nearer, and as he rolls around their titanic feet he beholds them verdue laden, and stocked from foot to peak with living growth. And so do we find our Christ as we get nearer to him more beautiful, more helpful, and changed in the aspect he presents to us.

Dannecker, the great sculptor, once carved the statue of Christ. He toiled three long years. When the statue was completed, he took a little child with him to his studio. Reverently and expectantly he took the covering of cloth away, and the statue stood revealed. "Now," said he, "Who is that?" The child looked and replied, "A great man." The artist's heart sank within him. Without a word he slowly and sadly covered the statue up. He had failed!

He set himself again to work. For three more years he worked upon another model. And again completed, he calls the child into his studio. "Now tell me," he said to the child, "Who is this?" Slowly widening her eyes, brightened as the look of loving recognition crept into them, and she repeated, still gazing, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not." Ah! it was Jesus. It was the child's Jesus. And the artist had triumphed. That was the child's conception of Christ. Its need was for a child's Christ, and the child saw as a child. The old man finds in him an old man's Christ—as one to lean on when faltering in health and spirit; as one who feels for an old man's weakness; who succors an old man's distress; and when the old man approaches the dark valley he leans upon that unseen arm as calmly as an infant goes to sleep on its mother's breast.

I think of him and feel about him as a young man's Christ—as one who wants to stand by me or any other young man and help me shoulder to shoulder fight my battles; as one who loves manliness; as one who admires a gentleman; as one who hates injustice, and calls for young men in their vigorous strength to right it. That is my Christ now. I may not think of him so when I am old and gray.

How strange it is that young men, beginning careers should not see that Christ will help them? What an immense advantage he is! What a rich and generous patron! He saves a young man to himself. He saves him to his business. He saves him to his friends and family. He saves him to the world of men and women which needs him. Enumerate those things which militate against success in life. A young man covets prominence and influence and wealth. Stop now and think. What are things that most cause the failure of promising careers? First, intemperance; second, gambling; third, dishonesty.

A drunkard cannot succeed. A gambler will not be trusted, nor has one in a thousand succeeded. A cheater, an embezzler overreaches himself. Now give the young man Christ in his life, and like a cyclone he sweeps the roadway clear of these things. He makes him sober. He makes him honest. He makes him trustworthy. In short, he not only clears the pathway to success, but he loads the young man with the momentum of character. And withal, he pours a flood of sweet music into his life which mixes with its native strength and spirit, and forms that grandest combination of heavenly and earthly elements—a Christian gentleman, part God and part man. He plants flowers in his soul and the blossoms fall about him as they ripen and fruit. He runs full with sweet oil the empty jar of his heart, which overruns, and like the camel laden with honey, drips along his life's way. But young men don't last long. The freshness of youth soon departs. Careers are made and ruined generally between the ages of twenty and thirty.

Now, then, is the time for the acquirement of the best of strength. Be not deceived. Redoubled activity in the future will not retrieve the losses of the present. Every single sin leaves its effect upon the life. Christ covers in tender mercy and forgiveness the soul and saves it from eternal death. He blots out the sins, but he cannot blot out the scars. Now, now is the time. Hear this voice. It is the voice of thousands who have testified. It is the voice of the world executing its immutable laws. No life will rise as high with sin to it as it would have risen had sin never touched it.

Men succeed, but it is always in spite of their sins. The lighter the load the higher flight. These laws of penalty are the laws as well as God's. Take Christ now, and freed from the heaviest burdens, young man, you can climb and climb and climb.

Rev. Thomas Alger, the now well known prison preacher, who committed a crime for which he served a term in Joliet penitentiary, Illinois, though converted while there, and possessing great gifts, was handicapped for life. He has bound this sad story of his own life in three verses which every young man needs written on his heart.

"I walked through the woodland meadows
Where the sweet thrushes sing,
And I found on a bed of mosses
A bird with a broken wing;
I healed its wound, and each morning
It sang its old, sweet strain,
But the bird with the broken pinion
Never soared so high again.

"I found a young life broken
By sin's seductive art,
And touched with a Christ-like pity,
I took him to my heart;
He lived with a noble purpose,
He struggled not in vain;
But the life which sin had stricken
Never soared so high again.

"The bird with the broken pinion
Kept another from the snare,
And the life which sin had stricken
Raised another from despair.
Each loss had its compensation,
And thus healing for every pain,
But the bird with the broken pinion
Never soars so high again."

On Trial.

That's a good way to buy a medicine, but its a pretty hard condition under which to sell it. Perhaps you've noticed that the ordinary hit or miss medicine doesn't attempt it.

The only remedy of its kind so remarkable in its effects that it can be sold on this plan is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. As a blood-cleanser, strength restorer, and flesh-builder, there's nothing like it known to medical science. In every disease where the fault is in the liver or the blood, as dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, and the most stubborn skin, scalp, and scrofulous affections, it is guaranteed in every case to benefit or cure, or you have your money back.

To every sufferer from Catarrh, no matter how bad the case or of how long standing, the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy say this: "If we can't cure it, perfectly and permanently, we'll pay you $500 in cash." Sold by all druggists.

Harvesting the Corn Crop.

There is a serious loss in harvesting corn in the usual way of pulling fodder and plucking the ears. Some recent Experiment Station work serves to bring this out in relief. Mr. H. J. Patterson of the Maryland Station publishes some matter showing the location of the dry matter of the corn plant in three crops examined. Co efficients of digestibility are given with composition and total digestible product of ears, topped fodder, blades, husks, and stubble. The results shows the ears and blades to have been only 50.59 per cent. of the dry matter of the crop. The other parts usually neglected by our farmers consequently amount to 49 41 per cent., or at least one-half.

Of the digestible matter, 55 08 per cent. only was contained in ears and blades. Thus nearly 45 per cent. of the digestible matter of the crop would be lost by taking only ears and blades from the field.

The digestibility of coarse fodders rich in carbuhydrates is greatly increased by feeding with highly nitrogenous materials, such as cotton seed meal. So it would be possible for one to get almost as much digestible food out of the corn stalk left to rot in the field than is saved from the crop in ears and pulled fodder.

The simplest way to get the most food out of the corn crop is to cut close to the ground with short-handled hoes at about the time the fodder would be pulled and cure in a silo. Lacking the silo, cut the corn in the same way a few days later, or about the time fodder is generally pulled, and shock in the field. Put 400 to 600 pounds in a shock and stand the buts out open enough to make the shock stand firm and let in the air to dry the corn. Bind the tops to hold together and keep out rain.

When cured, shuck out the ears, and cut what is left known as stover (the stalks, blades and shucks) into inch lengths. Feed to cows or work-teams with cotton-seed meal, wheat-bran or such other nitrogenous materials as can be most readily obtained. For nearly balanced ration, put one pound of meal to four of stover and two of oat-straw. The stover alone fed freely will support an animal at rest and not giving milk. —F. E. Emery, Agriculturist, N. C. Agricultural Experiment Station.

The utmost confidence between parent and child is a great safeguard. Many parents have themselves to blame because of the waywardness of their children. They have never done anything to invite the fullest confidence of the younger members of the family. Parents have been too much occupied with business or pleasure, or have been too selfish to take the time which is demanded by their children. In many a home the children are lonely, very lonely. This neglect on the part of the parent leads the children to practice deception, and with this comes a brood of new evils. The New York Christian Advocate says very truly. "When secrecy begins in the child's heart vice is not far off; and at the door which vice leaves ajar crime stealthily waits."—Central Baptist.

A Tonic for Nervous Prostration,
Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. A. E. Carothers, San Antonia, Texas, says: "It is the best tonic I know of in debility and nervous prostration, with sleeplessness, caused by mental overwork or prolonged lactation."

Timidity—A Hindoo Fable.

A silly mouse, thinking each thing a cat,
Fell into helpless worriment thereat;

But, noticed by a Wizard living near,
Was turned into a cat to end its fear.

No sooner was the transformation done
Than dreaded terror of a dog begun.

Now, when the Wizard saw this latest throe,
"Here, be a dog," he said, "and end your woe."

But, tho a dog, its soul had no release,
For fear some tiger might disturb its peace.

Into a tiger next the beast was made,
And still 'twas pitiful and sore afraid,

Because the huntsman might, some ill-starred day,
Happen along and take its life away.

"Then," said the Wizard, turning to his house,
"You have a mouse's heart—now be a mouse.

'Tis so with men: no earthly help or dower
Can add one atom to their native power;

Them from their smallness nothing can arouse—
No art can make a lion from a mouse.

—Joel Benton.

Storing the Memory.

The memory is the first faculty which a child cultivates. All through his life it is the most valuable. The great mistake of modern education is the neglect of the memory. Children's minds should be saturated with the choicest poems, the noblest passages of eloquence. In these days, when we require so few tasks of the memory, it is a lasting injury to the child if the very best literature is not set before him for such tasks.—The Independent.

A hermit in America once told me, when I asked him whether he found that way of life had lessened his temptations, "Dost thou not know, friend," said he, "that a tree that grows by itself is more exposed to winds and storms than another that stands surrounded with other trees in the woods?"—George Whitfield.

LOOK OUT.

"In peace prepare for war, in health for sickness." This old adage is always wise and timely, especially so just now. Summer is on, with its debilitating influences. Nerves are flagging, appetites failing, energy and strength yielding, even now. Shortly will come decay of vegetation, when malaria will "ride on every passing breeze" and count its victims in every home. Now is the time. Repair the wastes. Restore the vitality. Fortify the system. Ward off the perilous attacks of malaria and pass safely and happily through. You can do this by using DR. KING'S

ROYAL

GERMETUER.

It is the best preventive, the best restorative, the most unfailing cure—pleasant to take as lemonade and harmless, unique, matchless, perfect, "the ultima thule of medicines." Try it now. For sale by druggists.

I have used Dr. King's Royal Germetuer for indigestion, and cheerfully say that it afforded me more relief than any other remedy I ever tried. I also used it in my own family in a case of malarial fever with best results. I take pleasure in recommending it.

God's Patience Toward Us.

It is inexhaustible so long as he sees in us a possibility of reform. We sin in thoughtlessness, and he bears with us. We sin deliberately, and he withholds his wrath. We sin repeatedly, and, although the natural inevitable consequences are not hindered from following, we experience no special token of divine indignation. We even may sin extravagantly, committing some excess of crime and placing ourselves among conspicuous sinners, yet his ears still will be open to our appeal of penitence. There is a point beyond which, if we pass it, we shall find his patience with us exhausted; but so long as there remains within a human heart the desire, even in the faintest degree, for a better life, God bears and forbears with it. Not even Omnipotence can compel it, but the all-wise and all-loving One seeks to allure and encourage it to turn from evil unto Him.

This practically boundless patience is due to the fact that God is God. He who is our Creator remembers that we were not consulted as to whether we wished to be born, and that our natures are largely inherited and previously determined for us. He who is our Father loves and pities, and is eager to help us. He who orders even the fall of the leaf understands perfectly and mades all necessary allowance for the force of our temptations. He who knows by his own sorrowful human experience as the Redeemer of men how hard it is to live as we ought, is filled with a yearning sympathy for every one of us when we blunder or sin, which makes it easy for him to be patient with us when we should have little patience with one another. The divine patience toward us is one of the supreme, fundamental, and most precious and trustworthy facts which we ever learn.

But, and equally, because it is the patience of God, it may not be trifled with too far. There is a point at which the divine dignity and self-consistency and the good of mankind require forbearance to cease. He who willfully persists in wickedness, or even in that mere neglect of God which, because it is negative rather than positive, he does not believe culpable, must take the consequences at last. There is nothing more sublime in its long-suffering tenderness than the patience of God with the incorrigible sinner; but it never degenerates into weakness. It must be one of the bitterest sources of remorse to know that one has despised, or even been indifferent to, such patience as that which God exercises towards human folly and guilt.—The Congregationalist.

Mr. James Buttrick.

Asheville, N. C., Aug. 17, 1893.

Mr. Jno. N. Webb—Dear Sir: Your kind favor to hand, stating that you have printed a new book of directions. As a purchaser of one of your Electropoises I will be pleased to receive one. When I bought your Electropoise I had no special use for it, but having a large family I thought I would have one in readiness for any emergency. When I received the little thing I thought there could not be much good or harm in it, that I would test it myself, so I put it on night after night for about twelve nights and it worked like a charm. I had a friend who was very much afflicted with rheumatism in her ankles, knees and wrists and fingers so bad sometimes that she was helpless. Her husband got almost every thing he could hear of to give her relief, but without success, until they had lost heart. I let them have the Electropoise, and after trying it a short time she is about as stout as she ever was. The other day she walked to the top of a large mountain, four miles, and back home without much fatigue.

Yours truly, JAS. BUTTRICK.

Our Teachers.

The teachers in God's great school are many. Joy and sorrow, love and loss, daily work, household tenderness, health, sickness, strength, helplessness—one by one they come, solemn figures, some with radiant faces, some veiled and shrouded. Each speaks its words of command: "Be glad," "Be patient," "Be faithful," "Strive," "Lie still and wait." Often we break in upon the lesson with an importunate demand, "Show me the end!" But each teacher, grave and tender, says only, "Do this that I bid thee." The full answer may be a long time in coming. And yet, all the time, God is so near! For the present want we may always find him sufficient. * * * Go forth to work, to serve, to love! This little life passes quickly away. Its shadows and sorrows are for a moment; its virtues, its victory, its peace, are of the eternal.—George S. Merriam.

Counting the Stars.

I was walking along one winter's night, hurrying towards home, with my little maiden at my side. Said she:

"Father, I am going to count the stars."

"Very well," I said, "go on."

By-and-by I heard her counting—"Two hundred and twenty-three, two hundred and twenty-five. O dear," she said, "I had no idea there were so many."

Ah, dear friend, I sometimes say in my soul: "Now, Master, I am going to count the benefits."

Soon my heart sighs, not with sorrow, but burdened with such goodness, and I say to myself, "I had no idea that there were so many."—Mark Guy Pearse.

A Custom of the Waldenses.

One of the customs of the Waldenses, who are settling in Burke, is to require every child to commit to memory one book of the Bible. Some learn one book and some another, but they see to it that all the books are stored away in the minds of their people. This custom originated during their persecution by the Catholics, when they were compelled to take refuge in the most inaccessible Alpine fastnesses. The reason for this was that if their enemies should succeed in depriving them of the printed Bible they could reproduce it from memory. Although there is no longer a danger of losing the Bible, they keep up the custom, and it is said that it is astonishing how much Scripture the little children know.—Newton Enterprise.

There have been recent articles in several papers on the decay of patriotism in America. The absence of war is given as one of the causes of this decay. War excites the national feeling, and there are those who think it is indispensable to the existence of patriotism. There may be something in this view of the case, but it is a very low order of patriotism that makes love of one's own country depend on hating some other country. True patriotism in the Christian sense favors peace rather than war, thinks highly of other races, and boasts of the moral excellences in one's country rather than material greatness or military prowess. The truest patriots are those who seek to promote peaceful relations among the nations.—The Baptist.

President Woman's Central Committee of North Carolina, MISS FANNIE E. HECK, Raleigh, N. C.; Secretary, MRS. J. A. BRIGGS, Raleigh, N. C.

Subject for September: Italy.

"So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also." Missionaries, 3; native assistants, 27; stations, 59; churches, 17; membership, 847; baptisms, 72. Contributions, $559.56.

STUDY TOPICS.—Ancient and modern Italy contrasted. A corrupt Christianity, or paganized papacy, one cause of decline and fall. Educational systems. Education dissevered from morality. Need of church edifices and enlargement of work.

The Southern Baptist Convention at its late session in Nashville, Tenn., extended the time of the Centennial of Missions until the close of this year. The Centennial Record Book will also be kept open until that time. It is hoped that renewed efforts will be made for this work, and the Woman's Central Committee of Missions will gladly supply Centennial Missionary Literature, Centennial Chapel Cards, Centennial Day Programs, and Centennial Certificates, free. All who are already entitled to Centennial Certificates can obtain them at once on application. If after application the Certificates are not received within a reasonable time, please renew your application, as some loss may have occurred in the mails. Address Miss Fannie E. Heck, Pres. Woman's Central Committee of Missions, Raleigh, N. C.

The Italian Bible.

Few things are more important in a mission field than a first-class translation of the Bible, such, for example, as Judson gave to Burmah. By the blessing of God, Diodati's Italian Bible is one of the best translations ever made. In not a few cases it is more faithful than our English Bible, and had anticipated a number of not unimportant changes since made in Revised Version. God's hand was evidently in this work, for in those dark, inquisitorial days, who else could have foreseen that Bibles would one day be needed in Italy by the thousand? And the day having come, God has raised up an agency to supply the need, and the British and Foreign Bible Society, so hated and cursed by Pius IX, is sowing the good seed of the kingdom broadcast over the land. There is also a very good Catholic translation, the work of Archbishop Martini of Florence. If one is found, and there are many such, who would not dare to use a Protestant Bible, we can safely put this translation into his hands. The Church of Rome, however, has no desire to circulate the Bible among the people, and even this Catholic translation is virtually forbidden and often taken out of the hands of those who have it.—Rev. J. H. Eager.

Great Patience.

Great patience is needed. The work of many centuries cannot be undone in a few years. The fallow ground, now overrun with great trees of error, as well as thorns and briars of ignorance and superstition, must be cleared and broken up, and new seed must be sown and carefully cultivated, and we must be willing to wait for the harvest, "for in due season we shall reap if we faint not."

Thousands of weary and heavy laden ones in Italy are longing for the rest of the truth. But great tact and patience are required in dealing with them. They need sympathy and love and fatherly care and direction. They must have line upon line and precept upon precept. They must unlearn all they have been taught in the past and be brought to realize that they were fatally wrong, and that none but Christ can save. Those who deal with such cases will need much of the patience and forbearance of the divine Saviour.

"Ring out the old, ring in the new;
Ring out the false, ring in the true.
Ring out the darkness of the land,
Ring in the Christ that is to be."

—Italy for Christ.

Letter from Mrs. Yates.

My Dear Miss Armstrong:—I was very sorry that circumstances were against my going to the Convention; also that I did not find the wished-for convenient season for writing you a few lines on the subject of medical missionary work; but I was very tired when I left North Carolina, as well as poorly in health, and have found it necessary since reaching New York to keep very quiet. If what I know about that branch of work will be of any help to you, I shall be glad to bear testimony to its usefulness. Our Lord's own way was prepared before him by the preaching of John the Baptist, and I look upon the healing art as the best preparation for the preaching of the gospel in heathen lands. The kindness of those who minister to the suffering wins their confidence, and the removal of pain excites respect and gratitude. Even minds unaccustomed to think and draw conclusions, are led to admit that "the religion which teaches people to do such good deeds must be good." They listen, and some of them come to the knowledge of the Truth. On going home, they tell both about the healing and about the "doctrine," and thus the good seeds are scattered, and some fall into good ground.

Very few women—none of the higher classes—can be induced to enter our churches, for sitting in a public assembly is contrary to their rules of propriety; but high and low, rich and poor, can all go to a woman's hospital, and be treated by a woman and preached to by a woman. I wish I could show you the Woman's Union Mission Hospital at Shanghai, under the very efficient management of Dr. Elizabeth Reifsnyder. Especially would I love to show you the dispensary, waiting-room, with seats for several hundred, where the applicants for treatment sit whilst waiting their turn, and listen to a Bible woman—an earnest, eloquent speaker—who tells them of the Great Physician. About one hundred and fifty or two hundred sit there day after day, and hear the gospel message—making a larger total of hearers than most male preachers can get in their chapels, and under far more favorable circumstances. Dr. Reifsnyder is devoted to her profession, which she practices with great skill, doing such marvels in surgery that the Chinese think she could easily raise the dead. But all this efficiency is held in trust for the Lord, and used for the establishing of his kingdom.

The Sabbatarian Mission is a hospital for women, also the American Episcopal Mission, at which, no doubt, good work is done, but I have not visited them as frequently as I have that of the W. U. Mission.

I am sending you a paper which contains Viceroy Le's opinion of medical missionaries; also a copy of Woman's Work in the Far East, which gives numerous examples of good resulting from the work of medical establishments. There are a few would-be-reformers amongst us who denounce both schools and medicine, but as to the latter we surely have sufficient warrant in our Lord's example, for when he sent out his disciples he told them to "preach the gospel and heal the sick."

I am sorry, dear Miss Armstrong, to put you off with so meagre an account of what I know about the benefits resulting from medical work done in China for women and children, but want of strength must be my excuse. What little I have must be divided amongst many.

Believe me, with kindest regards and best wishes, yours sincerely,

(Signed) ELIZA M. YATES.

EPILEPSY OR FITS

Can this disease be cured? Most physicians say No—I say, Yes; all forms and the worst cases. After 30 years study and experiment I have found the remedy.—Epilepsy is cured by it; cured, not subdued by opiates—the old, treacherous, quack treatment. Do not despair. Forget past impositions on your purse, past outrages on your confidence, past failures. Look forward, not backward. My remedy is of to-day. Valuable work on the subject, and large bottle of the remedy—sent free for trial. Mention Post-Office and Express address.

Base-ball Again.

Dear Recorder:—I did not endorse Bro. Daniel's article as an attack upon any one, or for the purpose of getting into a controversy, and hope that no one else misunderstood it as Bro. T. M. Hufham seems to have done. It was the principle involved in a minister or Christian attending "the game of ball of to-day," and not an attack upon any one that prompted my article. And as I stated, there were several preachers at the game, among them my personal friends; but when I discuss principles in the establishment of truth, I disregard the men affected thereby, and the Doctor of Divinity shares alike the fate of the humblest babe in Christ.

Bro. Hufham is also mistaken when he thinks I have "departed from the Christian method of correcting a brother's fault," even should he refer to Matt. 18: 15, 16.

Now, then, what is the issue between us? I did not say the game was wrong in itself, but I did say, and still maintain, that "the game of to-day" with hired professionals playing, or, rather, gambling on the "gate receipts," accompanied by gamblers gambling on the game itself, is no place for a preacher or Christian to be spending their money and aid and "abet" such with their presence.

Nor do I believe that Howard Crosby or Noah Davis will say that it is; and even if they should, I prefer to be governed by Paul's inspired words, "if eating meat causes my brother to offend, I will eat no more meat while the world stands."

The election case is not at all analogous. The election is a necessity, and Christians are in honor bound to participate therein for the good of the government. Are Christians in honor bound to participate in the game of ball?

As to the Agricultural Fair, whenever the gambling is upon the Fair itself, or the Fair is the thing gambled upon, as is the case with the ball game, I presume that Christians know where to stand. The fakir "in his striped pantaloons" is not a part of the Fair, and his betting is upon his own tricks, and not upon the Fair. I think, however, they should be kept out, and not allowed to be even an incident to the Fair, and their refusal to keep them out, among other things, has kept me from them for years, notwithstanding I have held complimentary tickets thereto. I would not have taken up so much space, but I saw what I thought to be a growing evil, and raised my voice of warning against it, because I saw that the world condemned the Christian's attendance thereon with its present environments.

This is a sad state of affairs—the world condemns, while some professors justify; in other words, if it is wrong for the Christian to attend, and is Satan's work to defend, then he is with this game like he is with the the ball-room and bar-room, forced into the church to find some one who will do what the world refuses to do—justify or defend a Christian in participating them.

Now is not this of itself sufficient to give it the appearance of evil? Thence the command, "Avoid even the appearance of evil."

Now the question is not whether I am without sin enough to cast the first stone, or whether I have been broad or narrow in the exercise of charity to others, but is "the game of to-day" a place for a minister or Christian to attend? Bro. Hufham seems to think so, and zealously defends one who became "disgusted and left the grounds before the game was over." Now, which is the best judge of the propriety of his presence, the disgusted Christian who left or his defender?

A word more upon the final conclusion and recommendation: Suppose Bro. Hufham should see fit to visit the ball-room, bar room, gambling den, or other haunts of sin and vice, and his father should see fit to reprove or warn him as a father of old, "Don't you go, Tommie, don't go"—could not Tommie, with equal propriety, recommend to his father the same thing and wish him a man of broader charity, and say to him, "Let him that is without sin cast the first stone"?

Now should anything in this appear to be otherwise than in a fraternal spirit, I assure all concerned it was not so intended. And now in fraternal love I bid the subject adieu.

From Kinston.

Dear Recorder:—On the sixteenth day of July I began the first protracted meeting ever held at Parrett's school-house four miles south of Kinston. The meeting continued thirteen days. When the meeting began, it was feared by many that it would be a failure, because it was thought that we would have no congregation. But the community at once let go everything and flocked together to hear the word preached. Soon tokens of the Divine presence appeared, and the interest increased till the close.

The meeting resulted in more than forty professions, embracing grand parents and grand-children, parents and children, infidels and Universalists, &c. Six of the converts joined the Disciples. Thirteen were received into the fellowship of the Kinston Baptist church, making nearly fifty received within the last eighteen months.

At the close of the meeting we left more than thirty people still inquiring, What shall I do to be saved?

Several more will join at our next meeting. An interesting feature of the meeting was that the good work commenced with old people and young men.

A. D. Carroll of Clayton assisted me [illegible]. He seems full of gospel truths, and [illegible] declared the truth. It is a [illegible] have such a good and faithful [illegible] with you. I expect to aid Bro. J. W. Rose in the constitution of a church at Cove Creek, a station on the Atlantic and N. C. Railroad, eighteen miles from Kinston, and we may probably commence a protracted meeting at the same time and place.

Sharon Church.

We had a good meeting in August at Sharon, Warren county. Nine united with the church, and others may follow. Our good brother and excellent preacher, T. J. Taylor of Warrenton, assisted in the meeting.

The brethren and friends are going to work at once to improve our house of worship. We have large and attentive congregations, and the outlook is hopeful.

The State Fair.

Mr. J. Bryan Grimes of Pitt county, has consented to act as Chief Marshal for the coming State Fair.

The interest of the patrons of the Fair will be looked after by a fine corps of uniformed police, consisting of one member of the regular police from various cities and towns in the State.

It is announced that the special attractions this year will eclipse anything heretofore offered the public by the Agricultural Society. Among them will be Jim Kid's famous Wild West Show. This combination includes some of the most famous and daring cowboys and girls of the West, who will perform many interesting and thrilling feats. There is to be a band of Cheyenne Indians from Oklahoma Territory; a specimen of the Blanket Indians of the West who combine in giving realistic scenes of life in the great "Wild West."

Jim Kid is the famous and humane horse-breaker of the world.

He offers to conquer and tame any kind of a horse, and an open invitation is extended to owners of vicious or unmanageable horses to bring them to the fair, where Jim Kid will saddle and ride or harness and drive any such animal in full view of the entire audience.

There will be various other attractions at the fair, such as have never been in the State. The management promises the public a greater fair even than was held last year. The people of the State should commence now to get ready to come. The dates are October 17th, 18th, 19th, and 20th. For full particulars, premium lists, &c., address Secretary, H. W. Ayer, Raleigh, N. C.
